Red River is depot with a thousand missions

RED RIVER ARMY DEPOT, Texas – Even before August 9, 1941, Red River Army Depot was an extraordinary place. The story of Red River begins in 1939 when Robert Maxwell and four members of the Texarkana Chamber of Commerce were tasked with securing some of the growing defense funding for the local area. Maxwell worked closely with Sen. Morris Sheppard, also a Texarkana native, to influence the selection of the Texarkana Ordnance Depot, which was its first official name.
