Positive ICE comments

Do you have a compliment? Did someone go out of their way for you? Did you know that the Interactive Customer Evaluation (ICE) comments are also a great way to provide positive feedback? The ICE website can be accessed within the following link:

Protection Perspective

Maybe you've heard or seen the slogan from our Antiterrorism Office, "Empowered, not impaired; aware, not afraid." What does that mean? It means that our community should feel empowered by the fact that there are people throughout the region who are committed to identifying the threat and mitigating it, both U.S. and German. We should feel empowered by the fact that every trip off post is reviewed by three agencies and the garrison leadership before it's approved.

Every school trip is reviewed by the Antiterrorism office and the garrison leadership. Similarly, we should not feel impaired by the perception that it's unsafe to travel or to attend events throughout Europe. We should remain aware of what to report and to whom and that all reports are taken seriously. When we understand what to watch for and how to respond to something suspicious, everyone is safer. A timely iWatch/iReport message or phone call could stop a terrorist attack. We should not be afraid to venture out or to take advantage of appreciating the rich cultural history throughout Europe.

Customs shopping guide for the holidays

Some people are just not good at buying the right gifts. While this is normally a matter of taste, people new to Europe should note that many items available in Europe may seem like good Christmas presents but violate U.S. import rules. Some products are banned from the United States altogether and others may only be carried in baggage, but not mailed. Violations of customs, agriculture or postal regulations can lead to hefty fines and confiscation of the goods. Meat and meat products are the biggest problem, said Julie Aliaga-Milos, U.S. Department of Agriculture advisor at the U.S. European Command Customs and Border Clearance Agency (CBCA). "Delicacies like French pâté, German wurst, Spanish chorizo and Italian Parma ham are here for the buying and much sought-after in the States," she said. "Unfortunately, they can also carry viruses and other organisms that are not present in the U.S. and which may cause new animal disease outbreaks of virulent livestock ailments such as the Foot and Mouth Disease and Classical Swine Fever (hog cholera)." These products are therefore banned, as are canned meats, sausages, some types of cheese, and even soup mixes or pasta containing dried meat. Fresh fruits and vegetables are also prohibited because they could harbor plant pests such as the Mediterranean fruit fly. The threat to U.S. agriculture is so great that U.S. Customs and Border Protection (CBP) fine people who mail or take banned foods to the States a minimum of $100 as a deterrent. Criminal action for deliberate cases of smuggling can result in a $5,000 fine and a year in jail. Many European artisans make old-style nativity scenes that are popular with shoppers. However, the scenes are sometimes made with natural products that are banned from import to the United States, Aliaga-Milos noted. Scenes that contain untreated straw or wood, bark, moss or pinecones may harbor insects or plant diseases and should not be sent stateside. However, she says nativity scenes that are produced using finished wood, plastic or ceramics are fine to mail. Europe boasts many fine wines, spirits and liquor-filled candies that make original Christmas gifts. Unfortunately, the U.S. Postal Service bans all liquor from being mailed, even if it is inside a piece of candy. However, customs allows travelers over 21 years of age to import one liter of duty-free liquor. The federal taxes and duties are currently low enough to make it worthwhile to take more than one liter of beer or wine stateside as gifts, said Tim Sellman, director of the CBCA. However, state liquor laws must also be met which can add to the cost. Taxes on distilled spirits like Scotch whisky are generally considered high, he noted. Alternatively, cigars, cigarillos or pipe tobacco may be your idea of a great gift. Unfortunately, USPS does not allow tobacco products to be imported into the U.S. in the mail either. However, travelers are allowed to take limited amounts of tobacco as gifts with them when they fly stateside. And don't be surprised if you get a letter from CBP saying they removed Kinder Surprise eggs from the package you mailed stateside. The reason is that the chocolate eggs are banned in the United States. While many people think the eggs are innocuous fun, the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission believes the toy hidden inside can pose a choking hazard to very young children. Other Kinder products, such as the Kinder Joy eggs, are not banned because the candy and toy are contained in separate halves of the egg. Wildlife products also present problems. Buying ivory as a gift is a bad idea, according to Sellman. Only ivory pieces previously registered with Customs and Border Protection generally may be imported, he continued. Whale teeth carvings, known as netsuke or scrimshaw, are also prohibited from import. When buying furs, shoppers should insist on a certificate of origin stating the animal's scientific name to avoid buying prohibited endangered species products. The import of caviar is also restricted. It is important to make an accurate declaration when mailing packages stateside, Sellman concluded. Failure to do so can result in a penalty or seizure of all the items, or even potential criminal prosecution. More information is available online at www.cbp.gov/travel/international-visitors/kbyg/sending-us or you can ask a military customs office for more advice on these and other holiday mail questions.
