USAG Bavaria – Hohenfels Military Community

'ASK THE DGM'

U.S. Army Garrison Bavaria has implemented a feedback mechanism so community members at USAG Bavaria – Hohenfels and Garmisch can provide feedback on important issues to the command team directly. The insights of community members are crucial to the success of the garrison, and the command team wants to hear concerns from anyone who has them! If community members would like a response back, they should include their contact information; community members may also provide feedback anonymously if they so wish. Please note: This does not replace the Interactive Customer Evaluation (ICE) system. To learn more (or to provide valuable feedback), visit the link here.

CUSTOMS TIPS FOR YOUR GERMANY HOME BUSINESS:

A home-based business can be many things – selling aroma candles, kitchen containers or skin care products. Maybe photography or child care is what you like best. Whatever your preference, you have to follow German and military policies for your home-based business. Before beginning your business, contact your installation commercial affairs officer. He or she will tell you about local policies and help you gain permission from the base or garrison commander for the business. On the German side, you will first need to register your small business and then find out whether or not it will be subject to taxation by German authorities. It is highly recommended that you discuss that question with a legal professional. On top of that, you may need an entry in the register of companies and other licenses. From a customs angle, the first point to note is that U.S. Forces plated vehicles are for your personal use only. Using one as part of a business is illegal. Examples of abuse would be if you used your U.S. Army Europe-plated van to deliver goods to customers, transport children as a child care provider or import pottery from Poland for resale, said Tim Sellman, director of the U.S. Army Europe Customs Executive Agency. Register your business vehicle in the German system to be legal, he advised. The second point is that mail that you send or receive as part of your business must go through a commercial shipping company or the German postal service. The APO system is an entitlement for your personal use and using it to send or receive business wares and letters is not allowed. Third, you must declare any goods intended for resale to German Customs when you bring them into the country. If you buy commercial items in other countries, you must stop at the border and tell German customs your goods are for resale, Sellman stated. You are not allowed to use AE Form 550-175A - Import/Export Certificate & Purchase Permit - to avoid paying duty. Goods sold in the commissary, post or base exchange, and AAFES catalog are tax-free so you cannot buy anything there for your business either. Examples could be a computer for running the business or baking supplies for a cake enterprise. Not surprisingly, using VAT forms to support your business is off limits too. People who don't follow the rules risk receiving a hefty fine and tax demand from German authorities, and military administrative or civilian misconduct action as well, where applicable. Here are the main points again: -

- Do not use tax-free gasoline or a U.S. Army Europe plated POV for business activities.
- Do not use the military postal service to send or receive any business-related materials or mail.
- Do not use customs entitlements to import or export merchandise, advertising materials or other business-related materials.

- Do not use any item bought in the PX or commissary for your business
- Do not use VAT forms for any item intended for commercial purposes.
- Do not use Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation facilities, such as photo or craft shops, to support your business
- Do not store merchandise in your government quarters or use them as a showroom.

Almost all business-related income must be reported to both German and American tax authorities. So – are you running a business? Do you need a German tax number or tax ID? Talk to your installation commercial affairs officer to be sure where you stand and get a Customs brief before you start.
