Terrorist Planning Cycle

The Action of One Can Save the Lives of Many

Brian Morgenstern
Circuit City employee

Terrorists' plans aren't usually uncovered in neat bullet points; such plans are usually foiled by someone seeing—then reporting—one suspicious detail. Like the one that Circuit City employee Brian Morgenstern saw in a video the suspects described above gave him. After Brian saw “stuff on the film that was disturbing,” he called Mount Laurel, NJ police, who quickly involved the FBI. Brian's actions illustrate how proactive awareness can uncover prospective terrorists and their methods. Antiterrorism is principally defensive, but any vigilance on your part—that's going on the offensive.
