Children's hospital trains Evans providers in pediatric trauma care

FORT CARSON, Colo. – Evans Army Community Hospital providers will receive training from seven pediatric intensive care unit (PICU) doctors and experts from Children's Hospital Colorado on pediatric trauma care Aug. 5 at the hospital located on post.

Providers at EACH spend the majority of their time caring for adults, and as a result, conduct quarterly training with Children's Colorado on how to address complex pediatric cases.

The goal for the training is twofold:

- To ensure EACH providers have more tools and training to stabilize children who require immediate critical care. The training will help EACH providers improve their ability to manage the complexities of pediatric care and better synchronize patient transfers to Children's Colorado.
- To demonstrate differences in pediatric care while building and improving team dynamics, such as communication and trust.

On a quarterly basis, Children's Colorado's pediatric intensive care unit provides structured simulation-based pediatric specialty care training to EACH providers.

Beginning at 9 a.m., media are invited to observe a portion of the simulation training and speak with Children's Colorado PICU specialists and EACH providers following the training.

Media with questions or those interested in covering this event should RSVP by 4 p.m. Monday to the Fort Carson Public Affairs Office at (719) 526-4143/7525.
