SCHOFIELD BARRACKS — U.S. Army-Hawaii (USARHAW) Soldiers and family members will have the opportunity to ask questions on the air during the first-ever, live, televised town hall forum, here, Dec. 17.

The broadcast will air real-time on Hawaii Army Cable Network (HACN) TV2, the installation access channel. The broadcast will be hosted by Maj. Gen. Michael J. Terry, senior commander, US-ARHAW, and Col. Matthew Margotta, commander, U.S. Army Garrison-Hawaii, from 7-8 p.m.

The TV town hall forum will broadcast from the Visual Information (VI) studio and is designed to encourage open communication and discussion between USARHAW leadership and the local Army community.

“Our goal is to offer a new forum where our community members have an opportunity to offer questions and receive immediate feedback, both from command and subject matter experts,” said Margotta. “In the process, (we hope to) expand our ability to communicate with each other in new but relevant ways.”

Callers will be able speak to featured panel members on the show. Panelists currently scheduled for the broadcast include Lt. Col. Richard Gledhill, commander, U.S. Army Garrison-Oahu (USAG-Oahu), who coordinates and integrates base operations support for all organizations on Oahu Army installations, and USAG-Oahu Command Sgt. Maj. Darryl Jannone.

State provides DoD needed H1N1 vaccine

TRIPLER ARMY MEDICAL CENTER
PUBLIC AFFAIRS
News Release

HONOLULU — The State of Hawaii issued the Department of Defense 17,000 doses of the H1N1 vaccine the past two weeks.

As stated in the Joint Public Health Emergency Working Group trifold on H1N1, which was published in November, the following locations will be vaccinating DoD beneficiaries the next two weeks:

- Dec. 5, Marine Corps Exchange (MCX) at Marine Corps Base Hawaii, Kaneohe Bay.

- Dec. 6, Hickam Base Exchange (BX), Hickam Air Force Base.

- Dec. 12, Main Post Exchange (PX), Schofield Barracks.

- Dec. 13, Navy Exchange (NEX), Pearl Harbor.

The vaccinations are for high-risk individuals, including the following people: pregnant women — especially in their second and third trimester; family members of children under 6 months of age; health care workers; children 6 months to 18 years; and adults 19 to 64 years with heart disease, kidney disease, asthma, diabetes or immuno-suppression.

City leaders help 2SBCT with mission

MAJ. AL RAMIREZ
2nd Stryker Brigade Combat Team

SCHOFIELD BARRACKS — Soldiers from the 2nd Stryker Brigade Combat Team (SBCT) teamed up with the City and County of Honolulu, here, Tuesday, to learn about urban infrastructure, in preparation for the brigade's scheduled 2010 deployment.

City and county municipal representatives discussed utility programs and strategies with 2nd SBCT civil military representatives and shared their knowledge of essential services.

In turn, brigade leaders are learning what many take for granted, such as clean water, sewage and solid waste maintenance strategies, in an effort to support Iraqi municipal leaders and Iraqi efforts to improve the quality of life and, as a result, further separate them from insurgent influence.

Ed Kubo, former U.S. attorney for Hawaii, and Timothy Houghton, executive assistant deputy of Environmental Services for the City and County of Honolulu, developed the program of instruction, along with members of the 2nd SBCT.

Houghton was excited to support the brigade in its upcoming mission.

“This is very different from what we normally do” he said. “Utilities provide a healthy and safe environment to improve people's lives.”

Tuesday's block of instruction was the first part of a series that includes on-site visits to municipal sites of Honolulu.

As a primer, the provided information will prepare the Soldiers for what they will see during their on-site visits.

Garrison policy sets standards, limits for holiday lighting on Army posts

ROBIN HIBLER

Directorate of Public Works

WHEELER ARMY AIRFIELD — While lighting our homes during the holidays is a tradition no one wants to end, the cost of electricity to run these lights on U.S. Army Garrison-Hawaii (USAG-HI) installations must be managed.

Col. Matthew Margotta, commander, USAG-HI, has issued guidance on holiday lighting that applies to anyone who consumes electricity on Army-Hawaii installations, which includes housing residents. The garrison's 2009 fiscal year cost for electricity was $55 million, and the months with the highest energy bills were October-December.

This expensive end-of-year trend extends back several years. Regardless of other variables, the trend is a strong indicator that our increased kitchen activities and those lights that make our homes look good during the holidays are contributing to the overall electric bill.

Tropic Lightning returns 'with honor'

On behalf of every member in my command, thank you for the warm welcome home.

Our families and friends, neighbors and colleagues, have all honored us by celebrating the return of the 25th Infantry Division Headquarters and 3rd Infantry Brigade Combat Team to Hawaii, marking the end of a challenging, but very successful, 12-month tour to Iraq.

I can tell you that the men and women of the "Tropic Lightning Division" have accomplished their mission. They did what their nation asked of them, both collectively as a unit and individually as a United States Army Soldier.

They have come home and can look America, their Mom and Dad, and their wife or husband in the eye and know they were trustworthy, faithful and true to their word.

They have returned with honor. History will gloriously record their service and sacrifice.

Our success is shared with every spouse, child and other family member we left behind. We carried your pictures in our pockets, posted them around our working areas and our bunks, thought of you constantly, waited with anticipation for your letters or cards, and treasured every minute we could talk with you.

You are our motivation, and your sacrifices allow us to serve. We go in harm's way, again and again, because we care so much about your future security and safety.

Each and every one of you carries a heavy burden in this war. Your willingness to sacrifice, to preserve our way of life and to build a better future for others is a great strength of this nation.

Each of you epitomizes the best of America. You are the unsung heroes, and you are the ones who deserve the credit, thanks and applause.

Your sacrifices were incredible, and all of us want to thank you for what you have done.

We also want to recognize the fantastic support of all the people of this great state of Hawaii, especially our neighbors and friends living in our local communities around Schofield Barracks.

Going off to some foreign land, leaving your family behind, will always create within you tremendous anxiety and concern. Who will look after our kids in school, fix the flat tire or stop by with a pleasant word or encouragement?

Knowing that our families were being looked after and cared for by this incredible ohana of Hawaii gave more support and comfort than you will ever know.

We are indebted to our great "One Team" U.S. Army-Pacific (USARPAC) partners, too. The entire USARPAC team was watching our back during our deployment, and all of us knew it, and we are most grateful.

Upon our return, U.S. Army Garrison-Hawaii put together a truly wonderful redeployment ceremony. Lee Ann Womack honored us all with her remarkable talent and unwavering support for Soldiers.

Caslen

The garrison, the USO (United Service Organizations) and the local vendors who came together to make it happen have our heartfelt appreciation for an unforgettable night.

As we enter the holiday season, know that the freedoms and privileges Americans enjoy today are a direct result of those who have sacrificed to defend their country.

To those in uniform and your families, you have all served this division and your country with honor. You have done your part, once again, to preserve the values and greatness of our nation and the people of America.

I am very proud of you all, and I wish you the best for a joyous holiday season and a great new year.

FORT SHAFTER – As the sun rises and the day unfolds, stars seemingly disappear from the sky; however, one new star is left in plain sight for all to see.

Col. Jeffery Underhill, commanding general, 94th Army Air and Missile Defense Command (AAMDC), was promoted to brigadier general, here, Wednesday.

During his remarks at the promotion ceremony, Underhill, an Ironton, Ohio native, cited many positions in his career that have allowed him to grow into a leader.

One position in particular was serving as the aide-de-camp for the former Chief of Staff of the Army and current Secretary of Veterans Affairs, the Honorable Eric Shinseki.

"He (Shinseki) has always been my leadership role model since I was a senior major, and I have yet to match up to his exceptional leadership abilities," Underhill said, during his remarks.

The Army noncommissioned officer corps also played a big role in helping Underhill get to where he is today.

"I can count on both hands those who have had a profound effect on me throughout my career. I have had the opportunity to be mentored by the best," Underhill said. "Predominately senior noncommissioned officers, they have all made me what I am today more than any other influence throughout my career."

During Underhill's remarks, it was evident that family was a driving factor for his success, too. Underhill thanked his mother and spoke fondly of his father, who also served and died on active duty in the U.S. Air Force when Underhill was 16 years old.

"I owe him a debt of gratitude for shaping me as a young teenager and giving me the opportunity to find my niche in life," he said.

Last, he thanked his former high school sweetheart and wife of more than 25 years, the former Kelli Bamer, who is also an Ironton native.

"You are always the boss regardless of what rank I pin on. ... Thank you for the sacrifice you've made over the years for me and our family," said Underhill.

Lt. Gen. Benjamin Mixon, commanding general, U.S. Army-Pacific (USARPAC) administered the promotion. Mixon's remarks made it clear that he had the upmost confidence in the abilities and skills that Underhill brings to the 94th AAMDC and the USARPAC team.

"Jeff (Underhill) assumed command of the 94th Army Air and Missile Defense Command last June, bringing his vast knowledge of air defense capabilities and operations in addition to his experience in senior staff positions. (He) demonstrated ability to command and lead Soldiers," said Mixon. "The secret of his success is the empowerment of his first, second and third line leaders."

Mixon continued, "Jeff, opportunity may have given you a great start, but it is your ability to lead, train and mentor Soldiers that has resulted in your selection for promotion into the general officer ranks. We are very proud and fortunate to have you on the team."

Engineers recount '41 attack

CORPS OF ENGINEERS HONOLULU DISTRICT
News Release

HONOLULU – Dec. 7, 1941, was the opening scene of World War II, and the Army Corps of Engineers was there.

At 7:55 a.m., two waves of Japanese warplanes from a naval task force about 250 miles north of Hawaii appeared over Oahu. Some headed for American warships at Pearl Harbor, and the planes on the ground at nearby Hickam Field. Others hit Schofield Barracks, Wheeler Field and Bel- lows Field.

The Corps of Engineers in Hawaii consisted of Soldier-engineers in the Army's Hawaiian Department and the Corps' Honolulu Engineer District, then part of the South Pacific Division.

Col. Albert K.B. Lyman, a native Hawaiian, was the Army's Hawaiian Department engineer with offices at Fort Shafter. He commanded the 34th Engineer Combat Regiment, the 804th Engineer Aviation Battalion, plus the 3rd Engineer Combat Battalion of the 25th Infantry Division.

All of Lyman's engineers were at Schofield Barracks. These military engineers were enlarging and modernizing facilities at Fort Shafter and Schofield Barracks, building anti-aircraft gun sites and bomb-proofing coastal fortifications. Part of the 804th Engineers was also building U-shaped dirt bunkers for aircraft dispersal at Wheeler Field.

On the civil side, Lt. Col. Theodore Wyman, the Honolulu District engineer, had offices at the Alexander Young building in Honolulu, employing 10 officers and 400 civilians.

Fourteen field area offices had three officers and 200 civilians. Many district team members were at work that morning, as there had been a rapid increase in defense projects after France fell in 1940.

Wyman's workforce was building stationary early-warning radar sites on Kauai, Maui and Oahu, al-

Iraqi helo pilots get inside look at U.S. Army Aviation

PFC. JUSTIN A. NAYLOR
1st Cavalry Division Public Affairs

FORWARD OPERATING BASE WARRIOR, KIRKUK, Iraq – Months of training, hard work and dedication is what it took to get a group of Iraqi air force (IAF) students some training to become helicopter pilots.

In support of Iraqi helo pilots, Soldiers from the 2nd Squadron, 6th Cavalry Regiment, 25th Combat Aviation Brigade, invited IAF students to an open house, here, Nov. 25, to give them the opportunity to speak with U.S. Army aviators and get a close look at the helicopters U.S. Soldiers use.

The Iraqis have already completed the first part of their training and are ready and eager to continue to learn and improve upon their skills.

According to 2nd Lt. Karam Ebrahim, one of the IAF students present at the event, he has often flown over the area from which 2-6th Cav. Regt. operates during his training flights.

"We have seen the aircraft and have asked a lot of questions," Karam said. "Now we get to see it. This answers a lot of the questions."

During the open house, U.S. helicopter pilots provided Iraqi students a tour and showed them the inner workings of the daily operations of a U.S. Army aviation squadron.

"We are just trying to familiarize them with the helicopter operations in an actual Army unit," said Chief Warrant Officer Steve Bridges, a Hilo native and the squadron standardization instructor pilot. "We wanted to show them the equipment we use and the aircraft we fly."

"As an instructor, this is very good," said Bill Harper, a Westar helicopter instructor who trains IAF students. "All the things we teach these guys are kind of abstract. This kind of makes it real."

IAF students learned that what they are being taught in school – the language, training and techniques – are actually used by military aviation units.

During the visit, the helicopter pilots looked at two different helicopters, the Kiowa Warrior and the Black Hawk. The Iraqis saw how the aircraft are maintained and how they are refueled and rearmed.

This visit takes it from theory and shows an actual organization that is doing the same things that the IAF helicopter pilots are learning, Harper explained. The students received the opportunity to see what is in store for them, he added.

"I think it is a good chance to see what we are going to be doing later," Karam agreed.

Once the students complete their approximately eight-month-long flight school, they will move to Taji, Iraq, to attend a more in-depth school that will focus on the particular helicopter the Iraqi pilots will eventually fly on a day-to-day basis once they are in a regular aviation unit.

Karam said the tour was a good place to meet pilots who have actual combat experience and who can share their knowledge. The visit also exposed them to new types of aircraft they wouldn't normally see.

"I like to see things that I don't know about," Karam said. "Part of being a pilot is trying to learn more and more about different aircraft."

"This is definitely something I would like to come back and see again," he added.

401st Civil Affairs sees steady security progress by Iraqi police in Mosul

STAFF SGT. MELANIE TROLLINGER
130th Engineer Brigade

CONTINGENCY OPERATING SITE-MAREZ, Iraq – When members of Company D, 401st Civil Affairs (CA) Battalion, first began assessing the Zanjili neighborhood in Mosul, a longtime insurgent stronghold, the area wasn't safe to drive around in.

Months later, the Civil Affairs team, escorted by Iraqi federal police (IFP), walked the neighborhood marketplace, interacting with residents and shopkeepers, during a joint project oversight patrol.

Zanjili, one of the largest neighborhoods in western Mosul with about 30,000 residents, is steadily improving under the watchful eye of the IFP battalion responsible for security in that area.

According to 1st Lt. Glen Taylor, a team leader with Co. D., 401st CA Bn., security improvements have provided economic growth and beautification of the neighborhood, and residents are increasingly confident in the IFP's ability to take care of them.

"The federal police here understand you can win people over more with a kind word than by kicking in doors. (Zanjili) is also one of the few places in the city where the police act like the police as we know them in the U.S., instead of like Soldiers," Taylor said.

Many of the IFP are former Iraqi army members with little or no police experience. Taylor believes the Zanjili IFP commander's understanding of the police role has contributed significantly to the increased stability of Zanjili.

Gaining the trust of local residents has been a long process. The IFP commander ensures direct access for residents to call him if they believe one of his police officers has mistreated them or done something wrong.

The IFPs have also taken an active role in cleaning up the neighborhood. Their presence is reassuring to locals who now know the police are concerned for the neighborhood's safety and prosperity.

"The IFPs in Zanjili don't just do police work," Taylor said. "They take part in small-scale reconstruction, painting curbs, planting flowers, clearing rubble. The area looks a lot better than it did several months ago."

Taylor, whose team is assigned to the Mosul Reconstruction Cell (MRC), 130th Engineer Brigade, said other improvements in Zanjili, aided by the MRC, have increased relations with the local community due to improved quality of life and economic growth. A recent MRC sewer project alleviated a problem of standing gray water in the busy streets. Aesthetically improving the area, the new sewer also provided a cleaner, healthier environment for residents, who said they appreciated what the Iraqi government and U.S. forces have done for them.

A sense of normalcy is returning to Zanjili's market streets, with essential items like meat, grains, fruits and vegetables for sale along with what Taylor terms "luxury items," such as toys, shoes and colorful handbags.

At a small pharmacy, Taylor visited with the pharmacist, who said his business is doing very well. The team leader sees this as one more positive sign of economic growth in the area.

Most locals greet the U.S. forces and IFPs with friendly smiles, interacting with residents and shopkeepers in the busy marketplace. Taylor said it's difficult to gauge their sincerity, at times, but he believes residents are more comfortable with the U.S. forces and the IFP than when he first visited the neighborhood in September.

"A question I don't like asking, because you never know if you're getting an honest answer, is how residents feel about seeing U.S. forces rolling through their neighborhood with federal police escorts," Taylor said.

One shop owner, a 13-year-old boy who runs a restaurant, enthusiastically talked to Taylor. When asked how he felt about seeing U.S. forces in his neighborhood, he replied he wasn't scared or surprised to see them, and he was, in fact, happy to see them working with the IFP. He said his business is doing well because of security improvements, and he can now support his family.

"It's amazing. He runs a restaurant by himself," Taylor said. "Even though he's so young, he's probably the man of the house. This is the kind of stuff I like to see when I go out. People doing well, their lives improving."

With the strong IFP presence in Zanjili, and police officers providing more than security to the area, residents, weary and mistrustful at first, are showing confidence in the IFP.

The Civil Affairs team and the MRC will continue monitoring the area, recommending and aiding projects to improve the quality of life for Zanjili residents.

45th Sust. delivers timely messages to holiday-bound troops

SCHOFIELD BARRACKS — In the next few weeks, thousands of Soldiers in Hawaii will begin traveling across the country to visit loved ones, open presents and spend time with friends and family during the holiday season.

This time of the year, however, routinely sees an increase in safety-related accidents and domestic incidents across the military, prompting many services to educate their troops before extended time away from the workplace.

The 45th Sustainment Brigade prepared Soldiers to be safe before the start of the holidays during the unit's Safety Stand Down Day, Nov. 25, here. The training covered a multitude of topics, including drunk driving, domestic violence, safer sex and safety-related accidents.

The theme for the event was "tighten your shot group," and it was the message Lt. Col. Teresa Rae, battalion commander, Special Troops Battalion, 45th Sust. Bde., expressed to all Soldiers in attendance.

"We have Soldiers in our formation who are violating many of these areas (domestic violence, drunk driving, unsafe sex) and basically (hurting) their careers in the United States Army," she said. "If we reach just a couple of those Soldiers today, then we've gone above and beyond how we train our Soldiers to be safe."

Soldiers from the 25th Transportation Company watch on as one of their own prepares to enter the drunk goggles course during the safety stand down day, Nov. 25, at Schofield Barracks.

During the safety day, Soldiers navigated a small obstacle course to experience the effects of drunk driving, listened to tales of local Hawaiians who lost their lives from domestic violence, and learned the risks of various sexually transmitted diseases.

"We've noticed a trend recently of incidents, so we want to inform the Soldiers, let them know we know what's going on," said Sgt. 1st Class Nathan Croteau, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 45th Sust. Bde. "They need to prepare and educate themselves before they embark on any long holiday plans."

"Taking this time to educate ourselves is going to help a lot of Soldiers be safe over the holidays."

— Pvt. Javier Ruiz
25th Transportation Company

Approximately 1,400 Soldiers learned to minimize risks and avoid common mistakes. They will embark in the next few weeks armed with the knowledge to be safe and enjoy the holiday season.

"The training has been going really well, actually," said Pvt. Javier Ruiz, 25th Transportation Co., Special Troops Battalion, 45th Sust. Bde. "Everyone is motivated, and we're learning a lot. Taking this time to educate ourselves is going to help a lot of Soldiers be safe over the holidays."

SCHOFIELD BARRACKS — The operational tempo of today's Army has affected every facet of a Soldier's life — from awards, to pay, to educational benefits.

Human resources leaders from the 8th Theater Sustainment Command (TSC) and other units took some time out of their busy schedules to meet at the Post Conference Room, here, Nov. 23-24, to iron out standard operating procedures in order to take care of their ultimate customer, the Soldier.

"That is why we exist as human resources specialists, to take care of the men and women in our Army," said Sgt. Maj. Tony Cespedes, 8th TSC G-1.

More than 60 human resources specialists attended the two-day conference, hosted by the 8th TSC. The attendees were briefed by the 8th TSC career counselor, Sgt. Maj. Brad McDonell, on the specifics of the new Post 9/11 GI Bill.

Leaders from the Warrior Transition Unit also briefed Soldiers on the process for wounded warriors, and the Judge Advocate General's office spoke at length about "line of duty" investigations.

One major change discussed at the conference was the Deployment Extension Incentive Program, or DEIP. According to a Pentagon military personnel message, DEIP is an Active Army incentive program designed to encourage enlisted Soldiers who do not intend to re-enlist to extend their service voluntarily in order to complete a deployment with the unit to which they are currently assigned.

"(DEIP) is a great program for Soldiers who are coming up on their ETS (expiration, term of service) to extend their enlistment so that they can voluntarily stay with their unit during a deployment," Cespedes said. "The Soldier can make some extra money, and the unit benefits by keeping an experienced Soldier on the team."

conference attendees on the approval process for personnel actions. Cespedes said that his goal for the conference was to speed up the personnel actions process and set one standard across all 8th TSC units.

"Some Soldiers were leaving our command without awards because of simple things like misspellings on award recommendation forms," he said. "This conference literally got all of us on the same page."

Warriors in transition gather for some recognition, appreciation

SCHOFIELD BARRACKS — It wasn't the usual place of duty but Porter Community Center was the place to be on the morning of Nov. 25.

About 250 Soldiers with Tripler's Warrior Transition Battalion (WTB) lined up for accountability formation in T-shirts and tennis shoes.

The day was set aside for the battalion's quarterly Warrior Appreciation Day, allowing WTB Soldiers the chance to share a day of fun and friendship with their battalion buddies and their spouses and children.

Unlike other Army units, WTB Soldiers have few opportunities to be together, because of their individualized medical treatment and therapy schedules.

"We always include families in these events," said Lt. Col. David Weisberg, commander, WTB, about the quarterly appreciation day. "They are a critical piece to our warriors' transition, whether they return to regular Army units or transition to civilian life."

Warrior Appreciation Day had a special flavor this time.

"When the guys heard that Hooters restaurant was catering the event for the USO, a lot more were interested," said Staff Sgt. Peter Go, platoon sergeant, WTB.

Recent awardees of the Purple Heart, Sgt. Justin Minisal, left, and Spc. Peter Bland, both of the Warrior Transition Battalion (WTB), are recognized at the WTB's Warrior Appreciation Day, Nov. 25.

The dozens of children attending were more anxious, however, to climb into the bouncy houses and ride the waterslide, as well as enjoy organized family games.

Highlights for the day included a WTB Idol karaoke singing contest and a pie-in-the-face contest, for the more popular Soldiers.

Others may be assigned to a WTU located on the installation of the parent unit. Reserve Component Soldiers will normally be assigned to a community-based WTU (CBWTU) or to a WTU nearest their hometown, if the local health facility can accommodate the Soldier's needs.

What is the Warrior Transition Command?

The Warrior Transition Command (WTC) is a new 1-star command under U.S. Army Medical Command that serves as the organizational focal point for the Army's Warrior Care and Transition Program.

The WTC provides policy oversight to the Army's WTUs and coordinates the many programs and initiatives that benefit wounded, ill and injured Soldiers and their families.

The WTC consolidated three offices/agencies previously involved in Army warrior care: the Warrior Transition Office (WTO), previously under MEDCOM; the Army Wounded Warrior Program (AW2), previously under Human Resources Command; and the Warrior Care and Transition Office (WCIO) previously under the Office of the Chief of Staff, Army.

What are WTUs?

Warrior Transition Units replace the medical holdover system and are a major change in how the Army cares for and manages wounded, ill and injured Soldiers. While a WTU closely resembles a "line" Army unit, its mission is to provide comprehensive care management that allows assigned members to heal and transition.

A WTU's permanent cadre and staff oversee wounded, ill and injured Soldiers (Warriors in Transition or WTs) assigned to their units. Each WT receives a "triad of care," led by a primary care manager, a nurse case manager and a squad leader, to direct and supervise the individual healing process.

How are WTU assignments determined?

Assignment to a WTU is based on the level of clinical care and case management needed by a Soldier. A Soldier is normally assigned to a WTU that can best accommodate the treatment and rehabilitation of his or her injuries or illness.

The Soldier may need the highly specialized medical capability at Walter Reed and Brooke Army Medical centers.

Public invited to Pearl Harbor Day remembrance ceremony

NATIONAL PARK SERVICE

News Release

PEARL HARBOR – The National Park Service and the U. S. Navy will host a joint memorial ceremony commemorating the 68th anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor, Dec. 7, on board Naval Station Pearl Harbor's Kilo Pier from 7:40- 9:30 a.m.

The theme of this year's historic commemoration is "But Not in Shame: The Aftermath of Pearl Harbor." The Kilo Pier venue looks directly out to the USS Arizona Memorial, situated in Pearl Harbor approximately half a mile away.

More than 2,000 distinguished guests and the general public will join military personnel, both active duty and retired, and Pearl Harbor survivors, for the annual observance of the 1941 attack.

The theme of this year's historic commemoration remembers the brave efforts of those who continued the battle that expanded throughout the Pacific after the devastation at Pearl Harbor.

The Pacific War, itself, was fought on a gigantic stage that covered nearly half of the Earth and would last for 44 months. Battles were fought on sea and land, and the loss of ships, aircraft and men was unparalleled in the history of the Pacific.

For military who serve today, and the public, this ceremony provides a study of lessons learned and an opportunity to express gratitude to Pearl Harbor and Pacific War veterans for their sacrifices and perseverance towards victory.

will present colors, and the Farrington High School Concert Band will provide holiday cheer and lead the singing of Christmas carols.

A significant part of this holiday event is the award presentation for the top three winners of the Holiday Card Lane contest. The annual competition between organizations residing on the installation promotes unity and challenges the design creativity of each organization.

The 4' x 8' plywood cards are displayed along Chapel Field across from Richardson Theatre. Each entry is judged on craftsmanship, artistic qualities, expressiveness of the message and overall appearance.

"The annual 'Holiday Tree Lighting Ceremony and Concert and Holiday Card Lane' are annual events that began in the mid-1990s," said Mark Young, director, U.S. Army Garrison-Oahu South community. "This tradition provides our community with a wonderful opportunity to usher in the holiday season to our installations."

Each year, a distinguished guest is chosen to be the holiday tree lighter. This year, 11 year-old Kyle Michael Bender, son of retired Lt. Col. Michael Bender and retired Lt. Col. Christina Voisinnet Bender, is the tree lighter. Kyle is a sixth-grade student at Shafter Elementary School, and he is the current student body president.

With a push of a giant candy cane lever, Kyle will light up the tree and officially begin the holiday season.

The arrival of Santa and Mrs. Claus follows the tree lighting and caroling. After parading Palm Circle, Santa will then settle in under its gazebo lights to greet children and take photos.

Event parking will be available; however, no pets, except service animals, are authorized.

In the event of a rain out, the event will relocate to the Hale Ikena Conference Center.

though none were operational Dec. 7, 1941.

The transfer of Army Air Corps construction from the Quartermaster's Department to the Corps in early 1941 also increased Wyman's responsibilities. His district took over enlarging eight airfields and building two new ones and began work on a gasoline and bomb storage site at Hickam Field.

In October 1941, Wyman began his most important project – building an air ferry route across the South Pacific to Australia. By December, airfields were being built on Christmas and Canton islands, in Fiji, and on New Caledonia.

In addition to defense work, Wyman remained responsible for civil works projects such as dredging Honolulu Harbor.

No district team members or engineers were killed when the Japanese struck without warning, but there were close calls.

Paul Lynch, the area engineer in charge of construction at Bellows Field, watched with horror as Japanese planes strafed the field, destroying most of the P-40 Warhawk fighter planes. Lynch directed dispersal of his equipment, and because of his efforts, none were lost.

1st Lt. Harvey Fraser was at Schofield Barracks that morning preparing to leave the next day, Dec. 8. Reassigned to the mainland, he had recently turned over Company A, 3rd Engineers, to his successor.

a window of Fraser's house, and he ran to get his pistol to shoot at the low-flying planes. He forgot he had already turned in his weapon.

Fraser hurried to Schofield Barracks where the battalion commander gave him back Company A. He found his men in the street shooting at attacking planes.

Fraser told the supply sergeant to give weapons to anyone who asked and to tell them to shoot at the Japanese planes. Later, Fraser almost had to pay for the weapons, because in the haste to go to war, no one had asked for, or given out, receipts.

That afternoon, the 804th Engineers began salvage preparations at Wheeler Field. The 3rd Engineers moved with the 24th Division to the North Shore to defend against the expected Japanese invasion, which never came.

As eventful as Dec. 7, 1941, was, it was but the first of many days of war for the engineers in Hawaii.

Honolulu District completed the ferry route in January 1942, and it built more airfields, port and base facilities for the war.

All Hawaiian Department engineer units served in the war. The 34th Engineers served in the Central Pacific and landed on Kwajalein. The 804th Engineers, also in the Central Pacific, saw action at Saipan.

The 3rd and 64th Engineers went to the Southwest Pacific and fought and built their way through the Solomons, New Guinea and the Philippines.

Veterans make smooth transition, provide wealth of experience

Former service members relish their roles as civil servants at U.S. Army Garrison-Hawaii

BILL MOSSMAN
Staff Writer

SCHOFIELD BARRACKS — Like the old adage, “You can take the boy out of the country, but you can’t take the country out of the boy,” many veterans have found it near impossible to truly leave military service following retirement.

Man or woman, these members of the armed forces, many of them former active duty Soldiers now working, here, at the Soldier Support Center, have continued fighting the good fight as civilians, determined to give back to the Army in one way or another.

At the heart of the matter is one simple and undeniable fact: They love to serve those who serve their country.

The Hawaii Army Weekly recently caught up with four such veterans, who continue to make a difference in the lives of Soldiers and their families here in Hawaii.

Geismar: “We still care”

Six years after retiring as an infantryman, Matthew Geismar still finds himself completely dedicated to the service he so dearly loves.

Working for the Transition Office of the U.S. Army Garrison-Hawaii’s (USAG-HI) Directorate of Human Resources (DHR), Geismar is a key member of a team that assists Soldiers and their families through the process of post-deployment life or completion of their enlistments.

“Some Soldiers have been involuntarily extended by the Army and haven’t seen their loved ones in over a year,” he said. “I work with them to transition back as quickly as possible, and to know that although they are leaving the Army, we still care.”

While serving on active duty, Geismar also did a tour as a recruiter, convincing many potential recruits of the reasons they ought to join the Army. In contrast, working in the Transition Office affords him the chance to prepare Soldiers to return to civilian life. He takes the time to help them administratively, as well as provides them with a listening ear when the challenges of non-active duty life begin.

“Someone took the time to assist me when I transitioned out of the Army, and I know exactly how these Soldiers feel,” Geismar explained.

He is proud of the fact that he works with a team whose goal is to expeditiously and reliably complete all transition transactions so that the Soldier experiences no unnecessary delays.

Geismar

Haglund

Love

Young

“Someone is counting on us every day,” said Geismar, who works with a team that offers its customers over 140 years of combined experience. “So even when the workload is heavy, we take care of our Soldiers, with no excuses.”

Love: “Love-ing every minute of it”

If there’s anyone who simply adores her job, it’s the woman with the appropriate surname.

As a personnel specialist in the U.S. Army for four years, Kimberly Rose Love once handled every personnel action pertinent to the active duty Soldier.

Today, she serves as a human resource technician for USAG-HI, bringing necessary insight to a job that helps her in relating to Soldiers, their families and their unique set of needs.

“My experience in the Army helps me every day because I am familiar with the regulations and the systems that relate to my job in DA (Department of the Army) boards,” said Love, whose duties include holding a position with the Military Occupational Specialty (MOS)/Medical Retention Board.

Because she is a veteran as well as a military spouse, Love is also sensitive to the needs of spouses, who sometimes have questions about the medical retention board process. Therefore, handling those type of questions with great care is of utmost importance to her.

“I try to educate spouses on the process and procedures of the medical retention board because they may have incorrect expectations or simply may be nervous about what their spouse is going through,” explained Love, a native of Abbeville, La.

She says that her greatest reward is receiving a thank you from a customer.

“I realize that I have been a part of that Soldier’s life during the medical boarding process. Helping them to get through the process smoothly and comfortably is very rewarding,” she said.

Young: “I’ve been where they’ve been”

It was less than a year after retiring from the Army that Andrew Young, a human resources noncommissioned officer, found himself working in a similar capacity, here, with DHR at Schofield Barracks.

“I couldn’t just stay at home after serving in the Army for all those years,” Young explained. “I like the fact that I can relate to the men and women I serve because I was once in their shoes. That helps me in my job, because Soldiers know that I’ve been where they’ve been.”

Young took his 20 years of experience working in various S-1, or personnel, offices throughout the Army and easily transitioned into his current position as human resource technician in the DA Boards section. Now, he helps Soldiers desiring to go from the enlisted corps to the officer corps.

He also works with Soldiers to ensure that their records are current for promotions and helps conduct briefings and processing of those who have gone AWOL.

In all that he does, Young constantly encourages service members to improve their individual situations.

“I let Soldiers know what programs are available to them to better their careers. For example, some Soldiers don’t realize that if they are fluent in certain foreign languages that they can receive extra pay for maintaining fluency,” explained Young, who hails from Columbus, Miss. “I want them to plan for their futures and take advantage of the opportunities that the Army has for them.”

As for the most rewarding aspect of Young’s job, it comes in knowing that he plays a part in a Soldier’s success.

“I like to see a Soldier accomplish their goal. I walk them through the process and, when they finish, the smile on their face and a ‘thank you’ mean a lot to me,” he said.

Haglund: Former Marine soldiers on

From Richard Haglund’s point of view, 30 years of service in the U.S. Marine Corps helped prepare him for a life dedicated to the assistance of today’s Soldiers.

“Serving Soldiers is much like serving Marines because many of the administrative procedures are the same. I’ve always believed in treating all people with respect and just doing the right thing no matter who I’m serving,” said Haglund, a retired master gunnery sergeant.

In his current position as Mobilization Plans and Operations technician for USAG-HI, Haglund coordinates with different agencies in order to prepare and serve those Soldiers who are either heading out or returning from deployment.

Questions regarding administrative, legal, medical and transition matters are all dealt with promptly by Haglund and other members of his team, who operate out of Conroy Bowl.

“We have a great team who works together. Even when faced with taking on additional responsibilities, we assembled a group and worked overtime to serve the Soldiers. My experience as a Marine prepared me to take on responsibilities and do whatever it took to complete the mission,” he said.

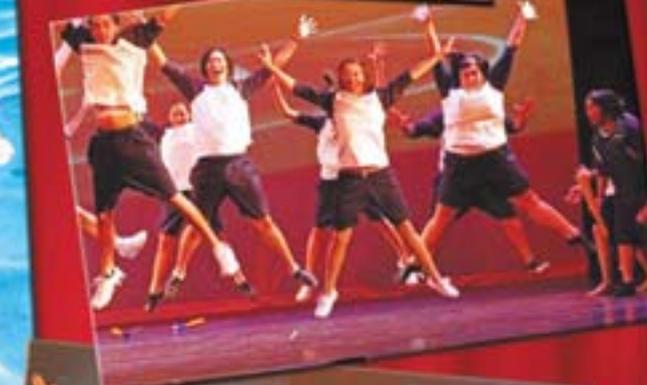

Haglund feels privileged to have the opportunity to continue to serve his country, even though he is no longer in uniform.

“I wake up every day and look forward to helping Soldiers. I know we have an important mission. I enjoy customer service, and I am thankful that I can give back to our great country.”

“I hope people walk away feeling that we provided the best possible service expeditiously, but also with most care and concern for their unique situation,” he added.

FORT SHAFTER — Eight Army children are performing onstage, here, at Richardson Theatre, Dec. 4, 5, 11 and 12, in the Broadway musical "High School Musical 2."

"We are so pleased that these kids have chosen to participate in one of the Army's few remaining community theaters," said Vanita Smith, manager, Richardson Theatre. "For some, it is their first time stepping on a stage, but most of our young performers have quite a bit of stage experience in a variety of forms."

The aspiring stars found their opportunity to shine in the Army's "Excel, Develop, Grow and Experience" (EDGE) program, which offers out-of-school opportunities for children and youths to participate in cutting-edge art, fitness, life skills and adventure activities.

"The program offers positive educational alternatives to children and their parents who find themselves adversely affected by the Furlough Fridays dilemma," said Kristine Yasuda, partnership specialist for Child, Youth and School Services (CYSS); Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation. "We are able to expose the kids to new opportunities and ideas that may otherwise not be a part of their current school curriculum."

Mililani High School freshman Jalen Thomas makes his Fort Shafter acting debut as Chad Danforth, a main character played by actor Corbin Bleu in the movie version. For the past nine years, Jalen has performed in various choirs and talent shows, and most recently, he won the Randolph Air Force Base "Family and Teen Talent Show" in 2007.

"He has a God-given talent, and we have just watched it grow," Smith said. "Jalen's performance is a real pleasure to watch."

Bryanna Salaz, a Moanalua Middle School student, believes her acting is becoming a family event and serves as an opportunity to do something constructive with time that would otherwise be idle.

"I really enjoy singing and dancing, and I was thrilled for the opportunity to perform for the first time onstage in a theater production," Bryanna said. "My mom, dad, sister and brother are very supportive, and my mom always makes sure (my makeup is applied correctly). My sister does a great job with my hair, and my brother even role plays characters to help me learn my parts."

The show's youngest performer is Wheeler Middle School seventh grader Leilani Gutierrez, who has been participating in talent shows and dance competitions since second grade.

For the eight performing artists, the EDGE program has provided an avenue in which they can explore and build their love of theater. As a result, some of the students have now expanded their interests, taking guitar and piano lessons.

"These kids have put a lot of hard work and effort into preparing for this musical," Smith said. "They have taken something negative, such as Furlough Fridays, and turned it into something positive that the rest of the community can share. That's what makes these kids stand out."

Smith urges patrons to come not only for the show, but also to relive a part of Hawaii's rich and colorful history.

Richardson Theatre, built in 1948, is on the National Historic Registry and is considered a celebrated treasure. It still maintains the original pink, art-deco-style facade, and its elegant interior was recently renovated, restoring the building to its former splendor.

During the peak of the Vietnam War, Schofield Barracks and Fort Shafter were regularly treated to high-profile performances by Hollywood greats such as Bob Hope, Sammy Davis Jr., and Ike and Tina Turner.

The "High School Musical 2" performances are open to the public. The doors to Richardson Theatre open at 7 p.m. and performances begin at 7:30 p.m. Theatergoers may obtain tickets by contacting the box office at 438-4480. Ticket prices start at $15 for adults, and $12 for children.

SKIES Unlimited offers babysitting certification course for teens

SCHOOL SUPPORT SERVICES

News Release

SCHOFIELD BARRACKS — Family members between the ages of 11 years 9 months and 18 looking for part-time work, should check out the free babysitting course offered by SKIES Unlimited (the School of Knowledge, Inspiration, Exploration & Skills) and Child, Youth and School Services (CYSS).

Officially known as "CYSitters," the two-day course is designed to familiarize teens with the responsibilities of babysitting and also teach skills and techniques needed for sitters to become competent and caring.

Students will learn safety, discipline skills, nutrition and entertainment ideas, in addition to the business of babysitting and how to manage their new part-time job.

The first day of the course, held Friday evenings, is a five-hour classroom session where students learn babysitting basics from a curriculum developed by National 4-H and Army CYSS.

During the second day of class, held Saturdays, students spend a full day learning CPR and first aid from certified Red Cross instructors. Students receive training materials, a certificate of completion, a wallet-sized babysitting course card, and they are placed on the garrisonwide babysitting referral list.

Parents choosing a babysitter from the referral list can feel comfortable knowing that their babysitters are adequately trained.

Garrison policy requires that all youths 12 years old and older must pass a certified babysitting course to watch their siblings. It also requires all youths 13 years old and older to pass a CPR/first aid class to babysit non-family members. The two-day SKIES babysitting course meets all of the garrison's requirements.

Parents can register their children for the class at either the Schofield Barracks or the Aliamanu Military Reservation (AMR) CYSS registration office. Call 655-5314 for Schofield or 833-

4-year-old helps general usher in the holidays at Tripler

Jones encourages staff, beneficiaries to remember deployed service members

Tripler Army Medical Center Public Affairs

HONOLULU – Despite the raindrops and a chill in the air, 4-year-old Lily Mallory was ready to help Brig. Gen. Steve Jones, commander, Tripler Army Medical Center (TAMC), carry out the 60-year-old tradition of lighting the holiday tree at TAMC, here, Monday.

Lily, daughter of Air Force Maj. Phillip and Jennifer Mallory, appeared quite composed prior to the lighting, but mom, Jennifer, explained it was quite the opposite.

"She has been talking about this for weeks. She kept asking when is she going to light the tree."

Prior to the lighting, Jones welcomed attendees following an invocation by Chaplain (Capt.) Timothy Stansberry.

"Holding this ceremony, just after the Thanksgiving weekend, reminds us that we have so much to be thankful for this year," Jones said. "We live in the greatest nation on Earth, and we are thankful for the service of our Soldiers, Sailors, Airmen, Marines and Coast Guardsmen, all of (whom) help keep it great.

"Let us remember those who are not here with us tonight and those who are not able to spend Christmas at home because they are deployed. Not a day will go by when they and their families are not in our thoughts and prayers," Jones said.

The U.S. National Christmas Tree Lighting Ceremony was held Thursday, on the Ellipse in Washington, D.C. The national ceremony opened the annual pageant of peace, which is meant as a "voluntary expression of American citizens of every creed and color to dramatize the message of 'peace on earth, goodwill toward men,'" according to the National Park Service Web site.

"I ask that every evening as you look up Moanalua Ridge and see these wonderful lights, you remember that message, and give thanks that we live in such a compassionate and generous nation," Jones said.

A local children's choir sang Christmas carols and the Navy's Pacific Fleet Band provided further entertainment. A sing-along and the arrival of Santa provided his rendition of "The Night Before Christmas."

Children snuggled at Santa's feet bringing to all an enjoyable night and a wonderful continuation of the long-held tradition at TAMC.

LES OZAWA

Tripler Army Medical Center Public Affairs

HONOLULU – Volunteers from all branches of military service came together to deck the halls of the two Fisher Houses located at Tripler Army Medical Center, here, Monday.

The annual event brought together Soldiers and civilians from 13 organizations to fill the many nooks, crannies, rooms and outdoor areas, giving the "home away from home" a little holiday cheer.

"It's a chance for people from all walks of life to come together to share their Christmas themes and decorations with our families here," said Theresa Johnson, manager, Fisher House.

Johnson said the event also helps volunteers learn the importance of the Fisher House, which provides families across the Pacific a place to stay, so they can be near a family member hospitalized at Tripler.

Participating in the festivities were individuals from the Air National Guard Hickam Air Force Base; the Coast Guard; Defense Information Systems Agency-Pacific; the Fort Shafter Hui O Wahine and the Schofield Barracks Hui O Na Wahine spouses' clubs; Marine Corps Family Team Building; Schofield Barracks' Warrior Transition Battalion; the Marine Corps' 1st Bn., 12th Marine Regiment; 205th Military Intelligence Bn.; 249th Engineer Bn.; and 311th Theater Signal Command's family readiness group, along with Fisher House residents and volunteers.

People and organizations wishing to volunteer at the Fisher House can call Theresa Johnson at 433-1291 for more information.

State, mayor, Navy League honor Army spouse for service

HONOLULU – The roar of thousands of excited fans couldn't compare to the feeling Katherine Ebersole felt at the 2009 Hawaii's Outstanding Army Spouse Award ceremony during the Navy versus University of Hawaii football game at Aloha Stadium, here, Saturday.

"I am still in shock to be standing out here," Ebersole said while standing on the field in the stadium. "When I volunteer, I don't expect to ever be recognized because I don't do it for that. I do it because I want to help out in good causes."

Ebersole, 36, from Longview, Texas, was one of eight military spouses present on the field during the weekend game, which recognized service members from all military branches and paid special tribute to the spouses of the U.S. armed forces members.

The Outstanding Spouse Award, which is presented annually to spouses of deployed troops, recognizes the recipients as the volunteer communicator and organizational focal point for deployed units in hostile operations for 2009.

"I never imagined in 16 years with the Army that I'd one day be standing in front of 36,000 people receiving a check for $1,000 because of what I do for my community," Ebersole said. "It's really going to help out for our Christmas shopping and donations for the Toys for Tots program."

Ebersole didn't begin her volunteer service just the other day. She has been active in her community since her husband, Staff Sgt. Greg Ebersole, entered the Army in 1993.

"I have been a family readiness group (FRG) leader, a coach for Special Olympics, and volunteered in my local community and my kids' school," she said. "That was just the beginning."

"I started volunteering as a key caller, during my husband's unit deployment cycle in the 90s," she added.

When her husband's unit, the 84th Engineer Battalion, deploys, Ebersole often serves as a key caller through the FRG to pass on information to spouses and family members of deployed loved ones. She credits a multitude of reasons for being so involved in volunteering, but said the main reasons are to serve others. She also volunteers to make a difference, stating, "There's always someone out there you can help."

In addition to recognition at the pregame show, City and County of Honolulu Mayor Mufi Hannemann presented Ebersole with a certificate of appreciation at Honolulu Hale, city hall.

"I enjoy volunteering; I really do," Ebersole said. "Volunteering is a good way to meet a lot of people who are all in the same situation. Rank doesn't matter either, because we all are going through the same thing of dealing with a loved one who is deployed and serving his country."

Following the football game's opening ceremony, Ebersole joined her family in the stands to watch the athletic contest. Her son, Gregory, who sat next to her, summed up the feelings the entire Ebersole family felt for the matriarch in five simple words: "I'm proud of you, mom."

Recipients of the spouse award from other military branches of service include, Randi Fox, U.S. Coast Guard; Leilani Kerr, Hawaii Army National Guard; Tiffany Milisavljevich, U.S. Pacific Command; Rita Miller, Hawaii Air National Guard; Sharon Ortiz, U.S. Air Force; Jillian Sentell, U.S. Marine Corps; and Jessica Jane Swanson, U.S. Navy.

'Sesame Street Live' brings furry friends to Schofield

U.S. ARMY GARRISON-HAWAII PUBLIC AFFAIRS

News Release

SCHOFIELD BARRACKS – One of the most adorable children's characters and his furry monster friends will be making a stopover in the islands this holiday season, hoping to add a little magic to the lives of military families.

Elmo and friends have scheduled six, 30-minute shows at three locations Oahu as part of the free traveling tour, "The Sesame Street/USO Experience for Military Families." One of the shows, which will take place, here, at Martinez Physical Fitness Center, Dec. 12, is expected to draw "hundreds, if not a thousand people," according to Kelly Andrews, recreation specialist, Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation (FMWR).

"Sesame Street has always been very supportive of military families, and there's this preset expectation among military families that they'll like whatever Sesame Street has to say," Andrews explained. "I do think it's going to be a fantastic opportunity for kids, particularly those whose moms or dads might be deployed and away for the holidays, to have a chance to get out of the house and enjoy some fun time with the family."

Games will be held prior to and during the shows, she added, including several Christmas-themed activities. In addition, Eddie the Eagle, the official FMWR mascot, will be making an appearance as Santa and taking photos with keiki.

The stars of the show, however, will undoubtedly be many of the same characters that have graced the popular children's television program during its 40-year history, including Elmo, Big Bird, Bert and Ernie, Cookie Monster, Count von Count and Oscar the Grouch.

"For some, it'll be their first time to meet their favorite characters in person," Andrews said, adding that the show at Schofield Barracks is being made possible through a generous donation from the Army Recycling Center. "We hope that puts a smile on the children's faces."

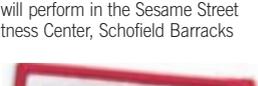

The tour is part of Sesame Workshop's "Talk, Listen, Connect" initiative, which was launched in 2006 as a military outreach program. This multimedia initiative is tailor-made for young children ages 2 through 5, who are experiencing the effects of deployment and/or combat-related injuries to their parents.

"Sesame Workshop is proud of its ongoing commitment to serving the needs of military families, and we are thrilled to partner with our good friends at the USO to bring Elmo and all of his friends to military families overseas," said Gary Knell, CEO and president of Sesame Workshop, in a press release. "The U.S. tour last fall was a huge success and further underscored the need for resources to help military families cope with the challenges of deployment. "This is our humble way of saying thank you to all the moms and dads in our armed forces for their commitment to all of us," Knell added. In 2008, the tour made stops at 40 military installations in 23 states and wound up performing 106 shows for 76,000 service members and their families.

This year's tour has already traveled to 19 of 20 U.S. military installations, including those in the United Kingdom and Europe. The tour is expected to wrap up in Hawaii.

Shinseki discusses Sesame Street TLC initiative

U.S. ARMY GARRISON-HAWAII PUBLIC AFFAIRS

News Release

In 2006, Sesame Workshop launched a groundbreaking, bilingual (English/Spanish), multiphase, multimedia initiative for young children and their military families called "Talk, Listen, Connect (TLC)."

The initiative was born from a strong and singular hope – to recognize the thousands of American children and families who know all too well what it's like to see a loved one go off to war.

Kauai native and 38-year military spouse Patricia Shinseki returned to Hawaii as keynote speaker for the Army-hosted Joint Spouses Conference in October, and she spoke about the innovative initiative and collaboration with the Sesame Street Workshop to create the TLC series.

Q: How did the collaboration begin?

A: "Sesame Street conceived of the idea of doing something for young children who were being affected by deployments, and about family service members returning with injuries. What Sesame Street produces is a wonderful public service, because I think young children can connect with Sesame ... who can't love Elmo?"

Q: What has your involvement been with the Sesame Street series?

A: "I've been involved in all three productions of the 'Talk, Listen and Connect' series.

The first of which is on helping families with deployment; the second is on helping families through changes, when a parent returns injured or ill; and the third, which is not yet complete, is on if a parent dies."

Q: Is there any message you would like to convey as families prepare to watch these episodes?

A: "Yes, I believe what's important is that parents spend time with children before viewing these programs, so they are able to discuss the subject matter.

I think it's very important for families to talk with children about the topic to help children express their feelings or concerns."

Q: Is this a collaboration that you anticipate to continue?

A: "I certainly believe so; the Sesame Street Workshop continues to come up with wonderful new ways to connect with children, one of the newest, of course, being a safe way for children to keep connected with a deployed parent.

They have a wonderful Web site called 'Sesame Street Family Connections' (www.sesamestreetfamilyconnections.org), which is available for children to use and express their feelings with the parent that is deployed. The site is offered in Spanish and English."

The Sesame Street Workshop series "Stop, Listen, Connect" can be seen daily on Army installation channel TV2.

Water conservation reduces DoD's costs, preserving natural resources, energy

AHFH residents asked do their part to save resources, money

SCHOFIELD BARRACKS – It may not seem obvious, but excessive water usage in our communities adds to the Department of Defense's (DoD) mounting financial burden associated with energy and water infrastructure maintenance.

According to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, energy costs for water and wastewater can be 33 percent of a municipality's energy bill.

Lessons Learned

- Water lawns in the early mornings, around 5 a.m., to maximize absorption. Watering during daylight hours is not nearly as effective and can actually be harmful to the grass.
- Use a nozzle on the hose when watering plants or washing a car.
- Keep showers as short as possible.
- Wash only full loads of laundry and dishes. If washing these items by hand, run the water only when necessary (instead of having the water running through the whole job).

The military installation in which you live is a de facto municipality – a community where people live, work and play.

Pumping water into your home and the subsequent collection, treatment and disposal of wastewater from your home are wholly dependent on energy. By reducing water usage in your home, you are not only preserving a limited resource, but also doing your part to alleviate the DoD's financial concerns on energy usage.

According to the American Society of Civil Engineers' "2009 Report Card for America's Infrastructure," the increasing demand for water is putting a strain on aging infrastructure and will cost our nation billions of dollars to repair and maintain throughout the next 20 years.

Our military installations are not exempt from the strain. The issue of infrastructure repair and maintenance is relevant enough that the Secretary of the Army and the Army Chief of Staff signed the U.S. Army Energy and Water Campaign Plan in 2005.

Before taking an extra five minutes in the shower, running the water while brushing your teeth, or washing half-loads of dishes or laundry, think about the costs associated with wasting water and how those funds could be better used by the DoD for more important causes in this time of war.
