BACK TO BASICS

A ‘toolbox of solutions’ develops leaders

COMMAND SGT. MAJOR PHILIP BRUNWALD
U.S. Army Garrison-Hawaii

Creating a resourceful leader is a challenge that affects all senior leaders; each day pre- sents opportunities for leaders to learn how to solve problems at the lowest level, while still keeping the chain of command informed and fulfilling the re- quirements of the training schedule.

Regardless of rank, issues arise daily because our profes- sion focuses on humans and human problems. Devel- oping proactive leadership is time consuming and deliberate, but the results are so much more efficient.

A proactive leader is also a resourceful leader, and a resourceful leader is well rounded, able to prepare a Soldier for combat, as well as master all the responsi- bilities of Soldier life in garrison.

Leaders have always had more work to do, more information to process and more decisions to make than what time allows. Sometimes unexpected chal- lenges occur that need additional help and do not go away on their own. Some issues that need immediate attention are financial trouble, raising children, setting up and running a household, and seeking help for life's challenges that may not have a physical pres- ence, but the thoughts need sorting out just the same.

Leaders must have a toolbox of solutions in order to assist Soldiers in areas that are not discussed in any field manual. Army Community Service is a proactive agen- cy that provides leaders and Soldiers with the resources that enable them to regain their focus while preserving their dignity.

ACS is a commander's readiness multiplier, and exists to assist leaders and commanders in maintain- ing readiness of Soldiers and families by developing, coordinating and delivering services that promote self-reliance, resilience and stability. Leaders may not know exactly what is needed, but if they con- tact ACS, a multidisciplinary and multi-agency action plan will be developed to assist them.

ACS provides leaders with professionals that are li- censed and trained in their area of expertise, who will listen to Soldiers' needs and help them, so they are able to focus on the mission and the associated train- ing. Families may also benefit from the services of ACS through financial readiness education, as well as parenting classes and family enrichment classes.

These are just a few of the tools that are provided to leaders, free of charge, for them to use to assist Soldiers with their everyday challenges that many of us are not accustomed to solving.

Leaders must know their Soldiers. Knowing your Soldiers is a professional relationship, not one that is often confused with the personal side of life. It is the handling of that information that distinguishes the difference. Knowing the difference between the two will enhance trust between the leader and Soldier and give the leader the insight necessary to develop that Soldier.

To say that both the leader and the Soldier need a certain level of maturity cannot be overstated. Just as a Soldier trusts his leader as a result of hard, mission- related training, so too will the Soldier trust the lead- er when that leader is able to provide the Soldier with avenues of help and support.

Getting help for a problem has never been an issue. Knowing help is needed and not using the many ser- vices the Army provides makes life more complicated and detracts from mission readiness. Bad news does get better with time.

Becoming a resourceful leader takes time. Shaping and developing leaders of all ranks, into resourceful leaders is the goal of senior Army leadership.

Our Army needs great leaders, and our Soldiers demand it.

FOOTSTEPS in FAITH

Have you asked, ‘Am I giving person?’

CHAPLAIN (CAPT.) MARK MCCORKLE

84th Engineer Battalion, 8th Theater Sustainment Command

Man has asked age-old questions: “What is the purpose of life?” and “Why am I here?”

God loves to answer those ques- tions; I can see God just waiting for a person to ask, what do you want me do with my life?

The need for actively caring people in the world will never go away. The people are waiting for someone who will reach out and give them three very important personal requisites they, and only they, have: time, talent and treasure.

I asked myself today, “Mark, what are you doing with your time God has given you?” I must admit, I could be more loving toward my family with the time I have.

Do you plan to be a giving person with your time here on earth?

Some of my most memorable and rewarding times were when I made a conscious decision to give my time to some- one in need. Now, I had to face the thought that it would be a waste of time and press into what I believed was the right thing to do, and, the outcome was joy. I had found that, by being a giver, I somehow opened my life to receive what was missing.

Isn't that just like God ... leading you to believe that you are giving it all away and then, just at the right time, ex- changing your gift with something better?

Jesus is an example of that, and so is a simple seed. We are surrounded by such beautiful trees and plants in Hawaii; however, not one would be as beautiful as they are today un- less the giving of a seed was provided — not only the giving of a seed, but the utter destruction of that seed in a dark and lonely place under the ground.

You may feel that way today, alone, and just ready to break. So many seeds that once occupied this island stand tall and strong today, reaching out to passing rainbows with green leaves to the sky.

What gift do you have that is waiting to be broken and used even more than the shade of a towering umbrella tree on the island? If you let it happen, many will personally come to you and find rest in the shade of your gift, and just like any tree, you will produce more seeds that the wind will catch and carry on to other ground to be planted there, of- fering hope to another ... all because you decided to give your gift away.

Construction will support the new CAB barracks that are scheduled to be awarded by the Corps in FY13 and constructed concurrently, so both projects will be commissioned in 2015.

KANDAHAR AIRFIELD, Afghanistan — Black Hawk crew chiefs and door gunners of the 25th Combat Aviation Brigade, 25th Infantry Division, shot it out in the first 25th CAB Top Gun Competition, here, Nov. 28.

The purpose of the contest was to bring together the best UH-60 door gunners representing each task force in a friendly head-to-head competition to determine the 25th CAB’s “Top Gun.”

“The Soldiers were chosen from each task force based on their demonstrated performance and proficiency as door gunners,” said Staff Sgt. Dennis Frazee, 25th CAB standardization noncommissioned officer. “This was a perfect time to recognize the Soldiers after a year of direct fire engagements and test fires.”

The leadership chose 12 Soldiers out of 150 eligible door gunners and crew chiefs. Each Soldier received two 100-round belts for the competition to engage makeshift targets. The door gunners shot at the targets from a Black Hawk as it made two passes to simulate receiving small arms fire while flying to, and landing at, an objective.

“It was really great to be a part of this competition,” said Spc. Timothy Edwards, a crew chief assigned to Company A, 2nd Battalion, 25th Avn. Regt., Task Force Lightning Horse, 25th CAB. “After long hours performing missions and conducting maintenance, it was a big morale boost.”

The idea for the competition came from events conducted by Task Force Diamond Head in previous years to build esprit de corps and increase the proficiency of door gunners. This year the contest was opened to all door gunners across the brigade.

Edwards was named the winner of the Top Gun Competition by putting seven rounds in the target torso, one in the head, and setting off a smoke grenade — with one burst.

“Everything I learned was from Staff Sgt. Frazee and Sgt. Hardwick, when they were trainers,” said Edwards. “From here, I want to go from crew chief to trainer and then to company standardization trainer. I want to pass on my knowledge to others.”

KANDAHAR AIRFIELD, Afghanistan — Soldiers of the 25th Combat Aviation Brigade, 25th Infantry Division, recently conducted Wing Operation Cell training with the Kandahar Air Wing, an element of the Afghan air force.

The Afghan soldiers learned how to track aircraft and ground forces on the battlefield and coordinate with both.

“The training is great for us to have,” said Afghan Lt. Col. Wazir Mohammad. “This training is very important for our job. The students are working hard to learn the tasks being taught.”

The class was the third in an eight-week training course.

“We teach them aviation tasks and sub-tasks they need to know for their job,” said Master Sgt. Shane Waite, operations noncommissioned officer, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 25th CAB. “This week we covered how to locate terrain features on a map. Although land navigation is a sub-task for wing operations, they have to be able to read a map, so they can coordinate the forces on the battlefield.”

Each week, 10 to 12 Afghan soldiers participate in WOC training. The tasks covered by the training are communications, land navigation, map reading, and operations and planning.

“The goal of the training is to teach these soldiers the necessary tasks, so they can teach others in their unit to do the same,” said Waite. “They ask for materials at the end of each class, so they can practice in their free time.”

As the Afghan soldiers continue training, their relationship and trust grows with U.S. and coalition forces.

“We are thankful and pleased to be working with our coalition partners,” said Mohammad. “We look forward to continuing the training.”

CAB certifies KAW flight medics

KANDAHAR AIRFIELD, Afghanistan — Medics of the Kandahar Air Wing were certified during flight medic training with Company C, 3rd Battalion, 25th Aviation Regiment, Task Force Hammerhead, 25th Combat Aviation Brigade, 25th Infantry Division, Nov. 28.

KAW flight medics learned how to receive a 9-line medevac request and perform necessary treatment on a casualty. The KAW is an element of the Afghan air force providing aviation support to Afghan forces in southern Afghanistan.

“The training is great for us to have,” said Afghan Sgt. Fazal Haq Maftoon, a flight medic with the KAW. “I learned a lot that I did not know before. The patient assessment is the biggest part of being a flight medic.”

To date, flight medics from C/3-25th Avn. have trained 15 KAW flight medics.

The Afghan soldiers conducted medical and trauma assessments, basic life-support procedures and combat lifesaver tactics.

“The most important thing for a health care provider is the assessment of a patient,” said Staff Sgt. Miguel Valdez, a flight medic assigned to C/3-25th Avn. “The training has evolved from having the flight medics learn flight medic procedures to treating patients on a real-time medevac call.”

Afghan flight medics completed an in-flight scenario. They received two simulated casualties and provided necessary care during transport to the nearest medical facility.

“The goal of the training is to teach them to be able to provide critical care to a patient in transit and to develop an assessment rhythm,” said Valdez. “Once you develop a rhythm, you will not miss anything ... making you a better health care provider.”

MAKUA VALLEY — The Warrior Brigade deployed, here, to prepare Soldiers for operations as a level-two treatment facility. The training helped prepare Soldiers of Company C, 225th Brigade Support Battalion, 2nd Stryker Bde. Combat Team, 25th Infantry Division, for challenges they will face when they deploy with the brigade, or on humanitarian missions in the Pacific. “This type of exercise is vital,” said Capt. Ted Walker, commander, C/225th BSB. “We seldom get the opportunity to operate in these types of conditions in between deployments. This simulates what we will be doing downrange.” “This is their first stop,” said Spc. Kihei-Nalani Kalauli, a medic. “We have everything that is vital to help a patient to survive.” Realistic training is important for Soldiers to prepare them for combat operations. Scenarios such as this mass casualty exercise give them that training. “This is a full-dress rehearsal,” said Walker. “This stresses our capabilities and puts us in the most realistic scenario in order to do the mission we would perform when deployed.” Charlie Med is set up in its entirety as a level-two treatment facility for the field, Walker continued. It is prepared to receive patients from a mass casualty scenario, triage them and package them for the next level of care. Deployments are not the only situation this type of training proves as useful. “As a Charlie Med in a Stryker brigade, we can be called upon to deploy with or without the brigade,” said Walker. “We are capable of being deployed to any area in the world, and able to set up a level-two treatment facility wherever we are called to serve.” While in the Makua Valley, noncommissioned officers and Soldiers took it upon their own initiative to learn additional skills; those with special skill sets conducted small classes and peer training. “If we see something we know we’re good at, we will immediately make a class,” said Kalauli. “There is a lot of cross training going on, in addition to the mass casualty exercise.” The training has also helped to foster a team mentality. Medics typically work alone or in small groups; training like this allows them to come together and share collective knowledge. Whether a deployment to Afghanistan or a humanitarian mission in the Pacific Region, Charlie Med is prepared to save lives wherever the Army needs it.

SCHOFIELD BARRACKS — Before recognizing some exemplary performers, the Bronco Brigade joined elements of other brigades to participate in a three-mile esprit de corps run in the early hours of Nov. 29.

The 3rd Brigade Combat Team, 25th Infantry Division, runners took a route that began at Watts Field and wound through Schofield Barracks. The run then ended with a competition that required teams from each battalion to pull large troop vehicles across a line to emerge victorious. “There was an air about the Soldiers as they supported each other and helped push each other through the exhausting run,” said Col. Brian Eifler, commander, 3rd BCT, 25th ID. “They demonstrated outstanding teamwork that is frequently seen within this brigade.” The events helped the Broncos strengthen ties within the brigade and develop teamwork and camaraderie with their fellow Soldiers, while inspiring a bit of competitiveness amongst battalions. “The competition helped make the battalions feel honored to be a part of 3rd BCT,” said Command Sgt. Maj. David Clark, senior enlisted leader. “I’m extremely proud of the Soldiers of this brigade and our ability to integrate new Soldiers into our formations. “The Soldiers entered into the new quarter very well,” Clark added, “and I expect them to continue the hard work.” In an awards ceremony at Sgt. Smith Theater, Eifler presented awards to 35 Soldiers for their performance during a recent training exercise at Pohakuloa Training Area on the Big Island, and to those who made the Commandant’s List for Warrior Leadership Course, for completion of Ranger School, and more. “I’m proud of these Soldiers who proved themselves above and beyond the requirements of their duties,” said Eifler. Additional awards were presented to Ken Torre from Range Control, who assisted the brigade by organizing Soldiers who had deployed to PTA, and to Connie Pampalone, Island Palms Communities, for arranging the housing needs for Soldiers and their families.

Tropic Lightning fights back on the ‘Day of Infamy’

ADAM ELIA
25th Infantry Division

SCHOFIELD BARRACKS — Japanese forces attacked Oahu, Dec. 7, 1941, thrusting the United States into World War II.

The 25th Infantry Division was barely two months old when it would earn the nickname “Tropic Lightning.”

The 24th and 25th IDs were born during a time of increased tension in the Pacific. The U.S.

and Japan were at odds over the 1937 invasion of China, and the threat of war loomed by late 1941.

To underscore those tensions, a War Department telegram from Washington, received in Hawaii, Nov. 27, 1941, alerted forces that negotiations with the Japanese had all but broken down, and that “hostile action was possible at any moment.”

Dec. 7 was a Sunday, normally a relaxed day for Schofield Barracks Soldiers.

A few minutes before 8 a.m., many Soldiers were still in their bunks or were slowly making their way to the mess halls.

“Sunday breakfasts were different; hot cakes cooked on the stovetop were served. This was a slow process, which the cooks hurried up by not completely cooking them,” said Charles Palmer, who was serving with the 21st Inf. Regiment. “This Sunday morning, just after payday, I was lying in bed contemplating half-raw hot cakes or a decent breakfast at a restaurant, when I heard a plane diving, then pulling out.

“Sounds like a dive-bomber, I thought. Then, I heard the explosion,” Palmer said.

He heard Japanese aircraft attacking Wheeler Field, where fighter aircraft were stationed on Oahu. Wheeler was a high-priority target for the Japanese, as American fighter aircraft posed the greatest threat to their forces.

Tech. Sgt. Jack Spangler was caught in the open at Wheeler Field as the attack started. He was walking down Wright Avenue to meet a friend for breakfast when he heard the first explosions. What he saw next was a plane dropping a bomb, and it was headed right for him.

“I saw the bomb release from the plane as the pilot pulled up to the right to avoid the bomb blast,” Spangler said. “As the bomb was falling, it seemed like it was suspended for an eternity, falling directly overhead.

“My life flashed before my eyes, and I thought I was going to die,” he continued. “All I could remember was seeing the flash. When I came to, the bomb had landed directly across the street from me between two homes.”

During the next two hours, military facilities on Oahu were bombed and strafed, with the main focus on Pearl Harbor. Schofield Barracks was not a primary target, but was subjected to strafing runs by Japanese aircraft and collateral damage from the strike at Wheeler.

Amid the confusion, Soldiers grabbed their rifles and began shooting at enemy aircraft as they flew over. After overcoming the initial shock, units organized and began deploying to assigned positions to defend against an anticipated invasion.

Wild reports and unconfirmed rumors continued as the day wore on, and everyone felt an invasion was now imminent.

The 25th ID daily staff journal was filled with entries of saboteurs operating, airborne troops landing and enemy troop ships off the coast of Barbers Point.

That night, the 25th ID manned positions from Hanauma Bay to the Waianae Coast, waiting for the enemy.

No invasion was ever launched, but World War II had begun, and the first lines of the 25th ID’s story were soon underway.

(Editor’s note: Elia is the historian for the 25th ID. Article information, including first-person accounts, are archived in the Tropic Lightning Museum.)

U.S. ARMY CORPS OF ENGINEERS
Honolulu District Public Affairs

FORT SHAFTER — Seven December 1941 was the opening scene of World War II, and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, or USACE, was there.

At 7:55 a.m., two waves of Japanese warplanes from a naval task force about 250 miles north of Hawaii appeared over Oahu. Some headed for Pearl Harbor and Hickam Field; others hit Schofield Barracks, Wheeler Field and Bellows Field.

The USACE in Hawaii consisted of Soldier-engineers in the Army’s Hawaiian Department, and the Corps’ Honolulu Engineer District, then part of the South Pacific Division.

Col. Albert K.B. Lyman, a native Hawaiian who later attained the rank of general officer, was the Army’s Hawaiian Department engineer with offices at Fort Shafter. He commanded the 34th Eng. Combat Regiment, the 804th Eng. Aviation Battalion, plus the 3rd Eng. Cbt. Bn. of the 25th Infantry Division.

All of Lyman’s engineers were at Schofield Barracks. These military engineers were enlarging and modernizing facilities at Fort Shafter and Schofield Barracks, building anti-aircraft gun sites and bombproofing coastal fortifications.

On the civil side, Lt. Col. Theodore Wyman, the Honolulu District engineer, had offices at the Alexander Young Building in Honolulu, employing 10 officers and 400 civilians.

Many District team members were at work that morning; there had been a rapid increase in defense projects after France fell in 1940.

No District team members or engineers were killed, but there were close calls. Paul J. Lynch, the area engineer in charge of construction at Bellows Field, watched with horror as Japanese planes strafed the field, destroying most of the P-40

Warhawk fighter planes. Lynch directed dispersal of his equipment, and because of his efforts, none were lost.

1st Lt. Harvey R. Fraser found his men in the street shooting at attacking planes. Fraser told the supply sergeant to give weapons to anyone who asked and to tell them to shoot at the Japanese planes. He almost had to pay for the weapons, because no one had issued receipts!

All Hawaiian Dept. engineer units served in the war; 34th Eng. landed on Kwajalein, 804th Eng. went to Saipan, 3rd and 64th Eng. fought in the Solomons, New Guinea and the Philippines.

CID warns women against romance, other scams

Female victims are getting cyber-robbled by thugs

U.S. ARMY CRIMINAL INVESTIGATION COMMAND
News Release

QUANTICO, Va. — Special agents from the U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Command are once again warning Internet users to be vigilant and not to fall prey to scams or impersonation fraud, especially ones promising true love that end up breaking hearts and bank accounts.

CID continues to receive hundreds of reports of various scams involving persons pretending to be Soldiers serving in Afghanistan or somewhere else in the world.

The victims are most often unsuspecting women, 30 to 55 years old, who think they are romantically involved on the Internet with an American Soldier, when in fact they are being cyber-robbled by perpetrators thousands of miles away.

“We cannot stress enough that people need to stop sending money to persons they meet on the Internet and claim to be in the U.S. military,” said Chris Grey, CID spokesman. “It is heartbreaking to hear these stories, over and over again, of people who have sent thousands of dollars to someone they have never met — and sometimes have never even spoken to on the phone.”

The majority of the romance scams are being perpetrated on social media, dating-type websites where unsuspecting females are the main targets. The perpetrators will often take the true rank and name of a Soldier who is honorably serving his country somewhere in the world, marry that up with some photographs of a Soldier off the Internet, and then build a false identity to begin prowling the Net for victims.

“We have even seen instances where the Soldier was killed in action, and the crooks have used that hero’s identity to perpetrate their twisted scam,” said CID Special Agent Matthew Ivanjack, who has fielded hundreds of calls and emails from victims.

The scams often involve carefully worded romantic requests for money from the victim to purchase special laptop computers, international telephones, military leave papers and transportation fees to be used by the fictitious “deployed Soldier,” so the false relationship can continue.

Once victims are hooked, the criminals continue their ruse.

“We’ve even seen instances where the perpetrators are asking the victims for money to purchase “leave papers” from the Army, help pay for medical expenses from combat wounds or help pay for their flight home so they can leave the war zone,” said Grey.

Along with the romance-type scams, CID has received complaints of other types of scams with a cyber crook impersonating a U.S. service member. One version usually involves the sale of a vehicle. After sending bogus information regarding the vehicle, the seller requests the buyer complete a wire transfer to a third party to complete the purchase. In reality, the entire exchange is a ruse for the crook to get the wire transfer and leave the buyer high and dry — with no vehicle.

Army CID is warning people, once again, to be very suspicious if they begin a relationship on the Internet with someone claiming to be an American Soldier.

“These are not Soldiers; they are outright thieves,” said Grey. “If someone asked you out on a first date, and before they picked you up, they asked you for $3,000 to fix their car, to come get you, many people would find that very suspicious and certainly would not give them the money. This is the same thing, except over the Internet.”

‘Operation Toy Drive’ is launched by 84th Engineers

SCHOFIELD BARRACKS — The “Never Daunted” Battalion combined physical readiness with holiday spirit to benefit some families in Hamilton housing, here, Nov. 28.

Members of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 84th Engineer Battalion (Construction Effects), 130th Eng. Brigade, 8th Theater Sustainment Command, lined the streets with Christmas spirit as they marched to deliver donations of children’s gifts to less fortunate military families.

HHC Soldiers of the 84th Eng. Bn. gave back to the military community that supports them. During their 5K ruck march, Soldiers carried donated toys to drop off at the Hamilton Housing Community Center.

“We wanted to give back to our military community and give back to those who are in need during the holiday season,” said Sgt. 1st Class Francisco Campos, noncommissioned officer in charge of the event, who was shocked with the positive turnout.

The designated van was loaded with gifts for children.

“It’s a great feeling to know that we have the chance to help our own Soldiers,” Campos said. “The amount of support received from the company was overwhelming.”

Spc. Daryl Shook carried an assortment of toys for both boys and girls in his ruck sack: a Barbie, a Hello Kitty doll, a Big Foot Monster truck and some Legos. Shook was all smiles participating in this unit event that deviated from the norm.

“It was fun,” he said. “People decorating their rucksacks and wearing Santa hats made the ruck march more enjoyable than usual.”

Rucksacks, too, were decorated with wrapping paper, lights and Christmas tinsel, and Christmas carols filled the street as Soldiers marched for a great cause.

Service members helping other service members was a rewarding experience for all, said Sgt. Dennis Marcely.

“It was great because we got to get out and get some exercise while helping other Soldiers in need,” Marcely explained.

The 84th Eng. Bn. will be deploying to Guam early next year. HHC Soldiers expressed appreciation for the unit cohesion generated during the gearing up for their deployment.

Soldiers from HHC, 84th Eng. Bn. (Construction Effects), 130th Eng. Bde., 8th TSC, set out on a 5K ruck march while carrying Christmas presents, for less-fortunate military families, in their rucksacks as part of Operation Toy Drive, Nov. 28.

MILILANI — Getting into the Christmas spirit, the Soldiers of the 65th Engineer Battalion, 130th Eng. Brigade, 8th Theater Sustainment Command, and the students of their partnership school, Mililani Middle School, came together to hold a toy drive, Nov. 30, for two organizations that embody the true nature of Christmas: Toys for Tots and the Make a Wish Foundation.

Community supporters brought and gave more than 500 toys during the drive; toys ranged from an action figure to full-youth bicycles.

“Many people have tunnel vision when it comes to their family and their community, so we are trying to get these kids to see that a lot of other children are not as blessed and not as fortunate, and the response has been overwhelmingly positive. They are seeing that they can really make a difference and make

CYSS ‘Parent to Parent’ offered

STACY CAIN AND MARK MADDOX
Child and Youth Support Services

Directorate of Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation
SCHOFIELD BARRACKS — Research has shown Army dependent children attend on average seven to nine schools between kindergarten and 12th grade.

The focus of Parent to Parent, which is funded by the Department of the Army and falls under the Child, Youth and School Services, or CYSS umbrella, is to empower military parents to become their child’s best educational mentor.

The Parent to Parent initiative provides timely and relevant information to enhance the knowledge of parents, and gives them the skills to be their child’s best advocate, not only for immediate transitions but also throughout the child’s school years.

More than 100,000 parents have been trained since the program began in 2006.

The Schofield Barracks Parent to Parent cadre is a team of selected individuals committed to the mission of serving and training parents of military-connected children by developing and presenting interactive, research-based workshops. They are authorized to present workshops at any school on Oahu that has a minimum Army dependent population of 25 percent enrollment.

These workshops are designed to help parents support their children’s educational process. The team presents workshops that focus on varied objectives:

- the importance of early literacy;
- the benefits of open communication between students, parents and the school;
- how to prepare your child for kindergarten;
- stepping up to middle school;
- how to get the most from parent-teacher conferences;
- the educational benefits of cooking with your children;
- teaching children time management;
- effective techniques for test taking;
- how to avoid homework hassles;
- charting the educational course; and
- tips to make school transitions as smooth as possible, including transitions with special needs children.

The local Parent to Parent cadre partners with the CYSS School Liaison Office, here, to enhance outreach efforts in order to get transition assistance information to military families.

Military Child Education Coalition

Parent to Parent is a part of the the MCEC, a nonprofit, worldwide organization that is designed to provide positive leadership and military child advocacy. The organization’s work is focused on ensuring quality educational opportunities for all military-connected children affected by mobility, family separation due to deployments and transition.

The MCEC performs research, conducts professional institutes and conferences, and develops and publishes resources for all constituencies.

In addition to workshops, the Parent to Parent team organizes MCEC’s “Tell Me A Story” events,” which empower children by using literature and children’s own stories in a way that fosters resilience skills, strong peer and parent connections, a sense of pride and accomplishment, and a caring community.

These stories are intended to open family discussions on potentially difficult topics, including family separation, deployment, moving, grief and crisis.

8th TSC Soldier shines, wins multiple karate gold

Years of training result in four gold medals in weapons category

FORT SHAFTER — Martial artists from around the world traveled to Oahu to compete in the 53rd annual All-Hawaii State Karate Championships/2012 Honolulu International Karate Championships, Nov. 17.

Amongst these competitors was Sgt. Randal Kumagai, military intelligence, 8th Theater Sustainment Command, who has been competing and studying Karate for years.

Kumagai was ready to take on the challenge.

“It’s about developing yourself, developing character,” said Kumagai. “A lot of things you learn about yourself are primarily through hard training and competition. I enjoy the competition ... testing of your spirit against another. ... Oftentimes, it’s like a chess match; you go up against someone who is better, faster, stronger, but you have to find a way to beat them.”

And find a way, he did. Each participant competed in three categories: Kobu-do, or weapons; long and short Kata; and Kumite.

Kumagai walked away from the international tournament winning four gold medals and an outstanding male color belt trophy in the competition.

“Karate events like this offer participants a wonderful opportunity to test their skills and determination,” said J.B. Mirza, national chairman of the Amateur Athletic Union and USA Karate, and also the honorary tournament president for the 53rd HIKC, during a message to the participants in the tournament’s program.

“The quality of athletes and karate-ka at this event are of the highest caliber, and is only surpassed by the hospitality, sportsmanship and budo spirit that resonate throughout,” Mirza said.

Karate is not only about finding yourself, but also about helping those around you understand and find their purpose in karate.

Kumagai had his own bit of guidance from an experienced Karate-ka champion.

“Frank Smith, at one point, was called the best karate-ka the United States ever produced, back in the 1960s when he was champion,” he said. “A word of advice he gave me was ‘training is for life.’ For me,” Kumagai added, “training isn’t just a young man’s sport. It’s more of a lifelong thing. It’s always striving to improve.”

and Technical Director, Chuzo Kotaka knows well what it takes to be a champion at karate-ka.

“Karate is a lifelong progression of learning and betterment,” he said in the 2012 program. “It takes a lot of determination, perseverance and, most importantly, self discipline. These are important qualities of a champion, but they are also the qualities of everyday karate-ka. No matter what your goals in karate are, always remember to keep those qualities dear to your heart, and you will always go far.” These qualities not only follow Kumagai in his karate, but they follow him into his military life, as well.

“Personally, I think karate is a good way to prepare your mind for combat or any high pressure situation,” Kumagai said. “A lot of time, when you go to tournament, you’re not necessarily competing with someone else; you’re competing with yourself. You have to have control and know what to do under pressure. Karate helps you get to that state of mind.”

Toys: 65th Engineers team with community to generate keiki holiday aloha someone’s Christmas a little bit better.”

The battalion visited the school a week prior to get the kids excited about the upcoming drive, and for every three toys donated, the students and Soldiers would make a lap around their school’s soccer field. The two organizations split the toys that were donated, and each was very appreciative of all the community support.

“The only way Toys for Tots can work is if the community is involved,” said Edward Hans, primary Toys for Tots coordinator for Maui and Oahu. “Without events like this, it doesn’t work. We really rely on these events to get our toys and help the community.”

Lori Anderson, official wish granter with the Make a Wish Foundation, echoed Hans’ comments.

“This is just a fantastic opportunity for us,” she said. “We are in need of toys for our toy closet. We have about 70 kids spread across the island that are waiting for their wishes to be granted.

I can’t tell you enough how much this means to our kids. We can’t show our appreciation enough.”

Secondhand smoke offers danger for nonsmokers

Estimates suggest the risks of lung cancer increases 20 to 30 percent for those living with smokers

BETHANN CAMERON
U.S. Army Public Health Command

Do you know if the following statements are true?

- Nonsmokers who live with smokers are more likely to develop lung cancer.
- If you have asthma, secondhand smoke can make your breathing problems worse.
- Children exposed to secondhand smoke in the home are more likely to have ear infections.

The answer is yes to all three statements.

Secondhand smoke is a mixture of the smoke from the burning end of a cigarette, pipe or cigar combined with the smoke breathed out by a smoker. Secondhand smoke is also known as environmental tobacco smoke, involuntary smoke or passive, side-stream smoke.

Do you know what you’re breathing?

Secondhand smoke contains more than 60 chemicals that are known to cause cancer. A few of the chemicals follow:

- Arsenic (a hazardous gas);
- Benzene (a hazardous gas);
- Beryllium (a toxic metal);
- 1,3-Butadiene (a hazardous gas);
- Chromium (a metal);
- Ethylene oxide (a gas);
- Nickel (a metal); and
- Vinyl chloride (a hazardous gas).

Do you live with a smoker?

The U.S. Surgeon General estimates that living with a smoker increases a nonsmoker’s chances of developing lung cancer by 20 to 30 percent. According to the American Cancer Society, approximately 3,400 nonsmokers die from lung cancer each year.

Some research also suggests that secondhand smoke may increase the risk of breast, nose and throat cancers, as well as leukemia.

Secondhand smoke contributes to various health problems in adults and children. It irritates the airways and makes respiratory conditions worse for people who have lung diseases, such as asthma or chronic obstructive pulmonary disease. Secondhand smoke also damages a person’s heart and blood vessels and interferes with circulation, increasing the risk of heart disease and heart attack.

In children, secondhand smoke can cause ear infections, frequent and severe asthma attacks, shortness of breath, bronchitis and pneumonia, and increased risk for sudden infant death syndrome.

A baby who lives in a home where one or both parents smoke is more likely to have lung disease. A child with lung disease usually requires treatment in a hospital for his or her first two years of life.

Secondhand smoke also slows the growth of children’s lungs and can cause them to cough, wheeze and feel out of breath.

Say no to secondhand smoke

An estimated 46,000 nonsmokers die annually from heart disease because of secondhand smoke. Here are some ways to protect yourself and those you love from secondhand smoke:

- Don’t allow smoking in your home by family members, babysitters or guests. Ask them to step outside.
- Don’t allow smoking in your vehicle. If a passenger must smoke on the road, stop for a smoke break outside of the car.
- Avoid places that allow smoking. Choose smoke-free facilities for dining, child care and elder care. Request non-smoking hotel rooms.
- If you have a partner, family member or other loved one who smokes, offer encouragement and support to help them stop smoking.

What are other challenges?

You can ask others nicely not to smoke around you or your children. Let smokers know that you’re having problems because of their smoking, such as coughing or itchy eyes. If possible, socialize outdoors.

Smoke-free areas can be tough on smokers, too, so to cope, smokers should do something different to take their mind off of smoking. Drink a glass of water. Take a walk or stretch.

If you must smoke, make sure you are in a designated smoking area. Completely put out a smoldering cigarette.

Still, try to quit smoking, if just for a day. Army Public Health Nursing offers varied programs to help you with quitting. Call 433-1498 to get a listing of smoking cessation classes.

Help prevent lung cancer and lung diseases. Take action and reduce or eliminate the risk of exposure to secondhand smoke.
