MEMORANDUM FOR SEE DISTRIBUTION

SUBJECT: United States Army Garrison (USAG) Policy Memorandum - Training and Development Program

1. Reference: AR 350-1, Army Training and Leader Development, 10 December 2017 and IMCOM Regulation 350-1, Installation Management Command, (IMCOM) Training and Leader Development, 1 June 2010.

2. Purpose: To supplement Department of Army policy and define roles and responsibilities for USAG training and development programs.

3. Applicability: This policy applies to all assigned or attached Soldiers and civilian employees to USAG Fort Hood.

4. Scope: Training and development encompass all activities designed to enhance the knowledge, skills and abilities needed by the Fort Hood workforce to successfully accomplish the organization mission, including but not limited to: classroom, computer-based, correspondence, satellite and internet instruction; on-the-job training, orientation, development, mentoring and coaching; job aids and performance support; and formal education. The provisions of this document apply to all training and development designed, sponsored, funded, or conducted under the auspices of the Garrison and component organizations.

5. Objectives: The complexity of the Garrison mission and the accelerating pace of technological change require continuous learning on the part of all employees regardless of their position or experience. In such an environment, investment in workforce training and development is a strategic necessity. The Garrison is committed to becoming a true learning organization in which employees and managers develop know-how, learn from experience, and share their knowledge as a normal part of doing business. To accomplish this, the Garrison directorates and special staff will:

a. Adopt business practices and incentives consistent with a learning organization, build and leverage intellectual capital and promote a culture supportive of individual growth and development.

b. Incorporate learning requirements in corporate and business plans and align learning activities with organizational business needs.

c. Deploy flexible, efficient learning systems (e.g., instructional staffs, courseware and facilities; on-the-job training, mentoring, coaching and development; Interactive Video Tele-training; embedded performance support; and Computer Based Training) and administrative systems that are timely, reliable, efficient, and fair.

d. Promote management ownership and accountability, increase employee involvement, and raise stakeholder awareness through collaborative planning and management of learning systems.

e. Establish effective information systems and quality assurance processes in order to track resources accurately and provide timely data for management decisions.

f. Manage learning as a capital investment by: identifying and budgeting for the true costs of learning incident to equipment modernization, policy change, or process reengineering; providing stable funding from year-to-year; and implementing sound business practices.

6. Roles and Responsibilities.

a. Employees. Fort Hood depends upon the talent and dedication of its employees to accomplish its mission. To meet this challenge, employees must recognize and take advantage of opportunities whether on the job, outside of work, or in formal training to develop expertise required by changing job requirements. Employees must also ensure their official training records are accurate and up-to-date, attend and complete all required training courses. As members of a learning organization, employees must be active participants in identifying skill needs and career goals, devising learning strategies, evaluating impact on performance and helping others to develop.

b. Supervisors and managers play a key role in assessing gaps between mission requirements and actual workforce capability, prioritizing training and development needs, defining and certifying the accomplishment of learning objectives, fostering on-the-job development and supporting employment-initiated career development. They are specifically responsible for:

(1) Ensuring that learning requirements are identified for all assigned employees and addressed through systematic, cost-effective learning strategies in accordance with merit, Equal Employment Opportunity (EEO), affirmative action and diversity principles.

(2) Designing and establishing collective training is the responsibility of each director and special staff officer.

c. The Director of Human Resources has been chartered to set installation training policy, establish benchmarks and standards, and oversee Garrison's training program.

d. Workforce Development Training Coordinators will:

(1) Work closely with managers to identify training needs.

(2) Develop training schedules and disseminate to directorate and special staff.

(3) Provide ongoing communication about both internal and external training programs, services, resources and opportunities.

(4) Coordinate and implement Garrison-wide training initiatives that address organizational goals or needs.

e. Training Coordinators, Supervisors and Managers will serve as central point of contact for all training and ensure all completed mission related and mandatory training is documented and source documents are maintained.

7. Program Administration.

a. Individual Development Plans (IDP).

(1) IDPs help the employee and manager identify training needs that address mandatory training, essential competencies, legal requirements, career development and professional growth. It allows the employee and supervisor to focus limited resources in the area of greatest need. The process may also help an employee identify areas of growth outside the job that are important to that individual, and which they may pursue independently of the organization.

(2) IDPs are considered living documents and must be reviewed and updated annually according to IMCOM Regulation 350-1. The objective of the plan is to align employee and organizational goals. It should also guide resource planning and decisions related to the employee's training. It is a tool developed between a supervisor and an employee, in which development and training needs of the employee are forecasted and scheduled in order to enhance the employee's competencies. IDPs are a useful tool for employee development because they provide:

(a) Logical and structured framework for assessing the needs of both the individual and the organization;

(b) Method for organizing developmental experiences instead of haphazardly committing both time and money on what may or may not be useful experiences.

b. Job required and job related training.

(1) Job required training provides knowledge or skills specific to an employee's current job. It is needed for successful performance of that job. Examples include technical knowledge, use of equipment, software applications, organizational skills and interpersonal skills.

(2) Job related training provides knowledge or skills an employee needs to meet the Army's performance expectations and the employee's position description. An example is Prevention of Sexual Harassment Training.

c. Scheduling and eligibility for training. All Federal civilian employees are eligible for job required and job related training. Job required and job related training will be conducted without loss of pay to the employee and the employee will be paid for the time as time worked. Employees may suggest training opportunities to be considered for approval by management and request training outside the employee's normal work schedule. AU training must be approved by management.

8. Proponent. The point of contact is the Chief, Workforce Development at (254) 553-3700.

9. Expiration: This policy memorandum supersedes previous Civilian Training and Development for US Army Garrison Fort Hood policies issued by the GC and will remain in effect until or superseded or rescinded.
