Fort moving to automated pre-registration for post access

Fort Jackson Public Affairs

Fort Jackson is transitioning to the Automated Installation Entry system, which allows visitors to pre-register online to speed their installation access.

“This system automates background checks and links access passes directly to a visitor’s physical driver’s license or state ID, significantly reducing gate wait times and the need to visit the Visitor Control Center,” said Rick Riley, installation security officer.

Pre-registration streamlines entry operations and enhances security. It eliminates the manual processing of personally identifiable information via email and reduces “bottlenecking” at VCCs during large events like graduations.

“While the system is currently live compliance becomes mandatory for all visitors, Aug. 1,” he said.

Riley added any visitor without a Department of War ID card will need to register including Family members attending Basic Combat Training graduations, contractors, vendors, and civilian guests.

Visitors register using a secure web-based portal for pre-vetting and registration. They would visit AIE system at <https://pass.aie.army.mil>, or scanning a QR code, where they submit personal information (name, SSN, ID number) for a National Crime Information Center background check. Once approved, the pass is digitally “embedded” on the user’s ID card for scanning at the gate.

Pre-registered visitors can proceed directly to access control points without stopping at a VCC.

Riley added the system requires a physical, state-issued ID noting that digital IDs are not authorized for installation access vetting.

Online applications should be submitted at least three to 30 days prior to the visit in order to confirm access. Applicants will be given status updates (approval/denial) via text message to the applicant’s mobile phone.

Veterans holding a Veteran Health Identification Card, or VHIC, do not need to use the web portal for temporary passes. Instead, they must visit a VCC once to register their VHIC into the AIE system. After that initial registration, they can scan their VHIC directly at the gates for post access.

Background Check Disqualifications

NCIC III background check will flag and deny entry for several reasons to include:

- Active arrest warrants.
- Certain felony convictions within the past 10 years (especially violent crimes, sex offenses, or drug distribution).

■ Registered sex offender status.

■ Being barred from Fort Jackson or any other federal installation.

Prohibited Items & Gate Searches

■ Search Consent: By entering Fort Jackson, all personnel and vehicles are subject to random administrative searches.

■ Weapons Policy: Privately-owned firearms are strictly regulated. Visitors cannot bring firearms onto the installation without prior written approval from the garison commander and registration with the Provost Marshal Office, even if they hold a state concealed carry permit (CWP/CCW). State permits are not recognized on federal installations.

■ Marijuana/CBD: Despite any state laws, marijuana and many CBD products remain illegal on federal property and will result in confiscation and potential federal citations.

CCP's fun, friendly, full-throttle field day

C.C. Pinckney Elementary School

Laughter, cheers, and a burst of red, white, and blue energy filled the air as the Pinckney Patriots took over the field on May 13 for one of the most exciting days of the year—Field Day at CCP Elementary.

Led by Coach Jahmael McMillan, the day was packed with smiles, teamwork, and just the right amount of friendly competition.

Designed with Department of War Education Activity physical education standards in mind, Field Day gave students a chance to show what they know while having a blast. Patriots dashed through relay races, worked together in team challenges, and tested their skills in activities that kept their hearts pumping and their spirits soaring. Every station was a chance to move, laugh, and learn—proving that staying active can be seriously fun!

McMillan, who is also a physical education teacher at Pierce Terrace Elementary School, said it was one his favorite days of the year because it allows students “a chance to experience healthy competition while creating lasting memories.”

He added it was even more fun having classes striving for recognition as the school's best.

From start-line jitters to victory cheers, the energy was electric. Students hyped each other up, celebrated every effort, and showed what it truly means to be a Pinckney Patriot—kind, supportive, and full of school pride. The race for the coveted class trophy had everyone giving it their all, but the biggest win of the day was the joy shared across the field.

A special congratulations goes out to this year's winning classes for their outstanding teamwork and effort. Each winning class proudly received a trophy to display in their classroom as a reminder of their hard work and victory:

- Grade 2: Jane Lewis' class
- Grade 3: Jessica Hubbard's class
- Grade 4: Dr. Patty Cleveland's class
- Grade 5: Donna Boston's class
- Grade 6: Schletha Baker's class

Beyond the games, Field Day brought the entire school together. Teachers, staff, and students joined in the fun, creating a positive, welcoming atmosphere where everyone felt like part of the team. It was the kind of day that students will talk about for years—the kind that brings a little nostalgia even before it's over.

As the day wrapped up, Patriots left with tired legs, big smiles, and hearts full of unforgettable memories. Field Day wasn't just a celebration—it was a reminder of the power of teamwork, movement, and community.

Pinckney staff takes 8-2 win

C.C. Pinckney Elementary School

C.C. Pinckney's annual Staff vs. Sixth Grade Kickball Competition stepped up to the plate once again, May 14, delivering a high-energy showdown packed with big plays, loud cheers, and undeniable school spirit! When the final out was called, the staff squad secured a decisive 8-2 win, proving they still have plenty left in the tank. This wasn't just a game—it was a full-on event.

Students in grades 2 through 6 filled the sidelines like a roaring crowd, turning the field into CCP's version of a championship arena. Fans came ready, rallying behind their favorite team with cheers, chants, and sideline energy that never let up. Some rooted for the sixth graders, hoping for a breakout upset, while others backed the seasoned staff, confident in their veteran experience and clutch performance ability.

From the opening kick, both teams came out swinging. The sixth graders showed hustle and heart, stringing together solid base hits and putting pressure on the staff defense. Their two runs came from smart base running and well-placed kicks, drawing huge reactions from the crowd. But the staff played like a well-coached team with championship composure. They executed in all phases of the game—dropping in precision kicks, turning quick outs in the field, and capitalizing on scoring opportunities. Their offense found its rhythm early, building a steady lead inning by inning until the scoreboard read 8-2 in their favor!

The game featured plenty of high-light-reel action. There were booming kicks that sent the ball deep into the outfield, forcing defenders to chase it down, and quick sprints around the bases that had fans on the edge of their seats. Defensively, both teams made impressive stops—snagging line drives, making clutch catches, and tagging runners out in close plays at the bases. A few “bang-bang” plays at home plate sparked playful debate, adding to the competitive atmosphere. And of course, the crowd favorite moments came when staff members showed unexpected athleticism—proving they could still go all out and make game-changing plays when it counted.

Army advances barracks modernization

By ELIJAH CORNISH
Army News Service

Since October 2025, when Secretary of War Pete Hegseth directed the establishment of a department-wide Barracks Task Force, the Army has accelerated efforts to improve Soldier living conditions, modernize aging facilities and strengthen quality-of-life investments across installations. The initiative reinforced that barracks are not simply infrastructure; they are a readiness issue directly tied to lethality, retention, recruiting and Soldier trust.

Across the Army enterprise, efforts are underway to modernize how barracks are planned, funded, maintained and delivered while addressing long-standing infrastructure deficiencies. Recent efforts have included targeted renovations, new construction projects, digital modernization initiatives and accelerated investment strategies to improve day-to-day living conditions for Soldiers.

Through the One Big Beautiful Bill Act funding provided via the Barracks Task Force, the Army has made several key investments, including:

- $20 million in new furniture for 40 installations, impacting over 106,000 Soldiers
- $59 million in work orders for lighting, plumbing, mold remediation and door locks
- $405 million in repair and modernization projects across all components for

major renovations

The Army has also highlighted innovative approaches to modernizing barracks infrastructure. At Fort Bliss, Texas, the Army partnered with industry and government stakeholders to deliver 3D-printed barracks, demonstrating how emerging technologies can reduce construction timelines while improving quality and resiliency.

The Army has also advanced initiatives to improve barracks connectivity and quality of life for Soldiers living in Army facilities. Efforts have included pilot programs expanding access to free Wi-Fi in barracks, increased inspections and facil-

Post recognizes military retirees

By ROBERT TIMMONS
Fort Jackson Public Affairs

“It’s a beautiful day here on Fort Jackson,” said Col. Dave Gaugush, garrison commander, to a group of retirees attending the Retiree Health and Benefits Expo at the Solomon Center, May 16.

“It’s a pleasure to be here, it’s a great event,” he added while opening up the final event of Fort Jackson’s Retiree Appreciation Days. “It is just a matter of time before (Garrison) Command Sgt. Maj. (Brie) Kotula, and I join our teammates here as retirees. I am looking forward to joining that next team.”

A host of other agencies were represented at the Expo aimed at providing information to retirees about benefits and services provided for them. Those agencies included Moncrief Army Health Clinic who provided health screenings and counseling booths. ID Card services was open that day as well as the Exchange and Commissary who held special sales.

Retiree Appreciation Days is an annual three-day event aimed at honoring the military retirees for their service to the nation. The Columbia, South Carolina area is home to a large number of military retirees who access services at Fort Jackson.

The event started May 14 with a retiree breakfast and a special recognition at a Basic Combat Training graduation event where retired Maj. Gen. Todd B. McCaffrey, South Carolina’s Secretary of Veterans Affairs, gave keynote remarks.

A Retiree Golf Tournament highlighted the second day with the Expo completing the third and final day.

“For more than 250 years, America’s Army has defended this Nation and our way of life,” McCaffrey said. “The lineage of service is represented on the field today and by those in the stands. Career Soldiers who are transitioning or have transitioned to become Soldiers for Life, and new Soldiers stepping into the gaps in the line after their departure is illustrative of both our Army’s and our Nation’s journey.”

He thanked the retirees for all they have done for the country.

“You have served in peace time and in war, and you depart active service that made a lasting impact most appropriately captured by the hundreds of new Soldiers that now take your place,” McCaffrey said. “Our Nation owes you our collective gratitude.”

AMC names 2026 Best Squad after intense competition

By SGT. MAJ. ALEXANDER CROTEAU
Army Materiel Command

Army Materiel Command announced its 2026 Best Squad, recognizing the top Soldiers who excelled during a demanding four-day competition designed to test readiness, lethality and teamwork under conditions mirroring large-scale combat operations.

AMC Command Sgt. Maj. J. Garza commended the competitors for their discipline and resilience, noting that the event showcases the Army's commitment to building cohesive, strong squads capable of thriving in contested environments.

"These Soldiers are a true testament to commitment, desire, and will to win," Garza said, "They represent themselves, their units, the Army and most importantly our nation."

Competitors from across the enterprise faced a continuous, high-tempo series of events that included the combat water survival assessment, ruck marches, weapons qualifications on the M17 handgun, M320 grenade launcher, M249/M240/M2 machine guns, and M4 assault rifle, a casualty evacuation challenge, day-into-night land navigation, expert medical, infantry and Soldier tasks, 500 meter swim and the Army's new Combat Field Test.

The winners of the 2026 AMC Best Warrior and Squad Competition are:

Squad leader and NCO of the Year: Staff Sgt. Timothy Maynard, Installation Management Command Directorate-Europe

Team leader and Soldier of the Year: Spc. Ethan Rieck, Installation Management Command Directorate-Europe

Team member: Spc. Kwesi Cook, Communications-Electronics Command

Team member: Spc. Christian Guzman, Installation Management Command-Training and Transformation Directorate

Team member: Spc. Colton Kittrell, Aviation and Missile Command

The alternates are:

Squad leader: Staff Sgt. Ethen O'Dell, Installation Management Command Directorate-Europe

Squad member: Spc. Josiah Edness, Installation Management Command Directorate-Europe

Squad member: Pfc. Erick Baptista, Communications-Electronics Command

"These competitors did not arrive here by chance," said Sgt. Maj. Chan'nel Black, AMC's operations sergeant major and overseer of the competition. "They earned the opportunity to compete because their commands saw in them the qualities we expect from the Army's best: competence, character, fitness, discipline and commitment to the Profession of Arms."

The winning squad will represent AMC at the Army-level Best Squad Competition later this year at Fort Benning, zation across Army commands and installation management organizations to prioritize repairs and modernization.

The Barracks Task Force is part of a broader effort to transform Army installations into resilient operational platforms capable of sustaining readiness, supporting Soldiers and enabling the Army mission in competition, crisis and conflict.

Assistant Secretary of the Army for Installations, Energy and Environment Jordan Gillis has emphasized three core transformation priorities guiding the Army's installation modernization efforts:

- Leverage outside and alternate finance
- Make the most of the funds we have
- Drive Army interest through strategic engagement

These priorities are helping shape how the Army approaches barracks modernization by accelerating project delivery, improving stewardship of existing resources, strengthening accountability and identifying innovative ways to improve Soldier quality of life at installations across the force.

Gillis said installations must be viewed as operational platforms that directly enable readiness and lethality.

"Army installations directly enable readiness, power projection and lethality," Gillis said. "Improving barracks conditions is about ensuring Soldiers live in facilities that reflect the professionalism and standards they deserve."

The effort is intended to drive lasting change, not simply temporary repairs. The initiative seeks to improve governance, accelerate project delivery, prioritize high-risk facilities and ensure investments remain aligned with Soldier needs and mission readiness.

Sgt. Major of the Army Michael R. Weimer has emphasized that barracks conditions directly impact morale, discipline, readiness and retention.

"Our Soldiers live the Army profession every day, and they deserve facilities that support their health, well-being and readiness," Weimer said.

Recent senior leader engagements have further reinforced the urgency of the issue. Gillis has visited installations including Fort Meade, Maryland; Fort Polk, Louisiana; Fort Bliss, Texas; and U.S. Army Garrison Hawaii to assess barracks conditions and engage directly with Soldiers and installation leaders.

The visits reinforce the Army's commitment to accountability, Soldier quality of life and ensuring modernization efforts translate into measurable improvements at the installation level.

While work remains, the Barracks Task Force represents a long-term commitment to ensuring Soldiers live and work in facilities that reflect the professionalism, standards and readiness expectations of the Army.
