The Employee Assistance Program

The Employee Assistance Program (EAP) is a free, confidential, and voluntary employer-provided benefit offering support for personal or work-related issues. Think of your EAP as a confidential support concierge for your well-being! Whether you're dealing with burnout, family stress, communication struggles, substance misuse, work stressors, grief, or something else, they are the professional or know a professional who can help.

What services are offered?

- Counseling and Support: Short term counseling and assessment services for a variety of adult-life stressors.
- Referrals: To community resources, local/internationally, for ongoing support.
- Workplace Consultations: The program can provide consulting and mediation services to help improve organizational effectiveness and meet mission goals.
- Psychoeducational Trainings and Education: The EAP can offer prevention education guidance for the employee, the supervisor, or the organization as a whole to increase cohesion, morale, and understanding.

Confidentiality

- The Employee Assistance Program (EAP) is a confidential resource to get support. What you share stays confidential and is only released with your written permission, unless required by law for safety or protection. Your privacy matters, and the EAP is here to help you without judgment.

Eligibility

- Department of Army (DA) Civilians
- Retired Military
- Family members of Active-Duty Service Members, DA Civilians and Retired Military over the age of 18 years old

Confidentiality and EAP

We are dedicated to maintaining the highest standards of confidentiality. All information you share is held in strict confidence to ensure a secure environment with our primary goal to protect you and build a foundation of trust. However, it is also our professional and legal duty to inform you about specific, limited circumstances where confidentiality may be superseded by law.

Understanding the Limits of Confidentiality

While our commitment to you is steadfast, there are specific, rare situations where legal and ethical obligations require us to disclose information to appropriate authorities. These exceptions are mandated by law to ensure the safety and well-being of all individuals.

Disclosure of confidential information is required in the following circumstances:

Situation	Description
Threat of Harm	If there is reason to believe you pose an imminent threat of harm to yourself or to another person.
Suspected Abuse or Neglect	If there is any suspicion of abuse, neglect, or endangerment involving a child or vulnerable adult.
Legal Mandate	If your records are subpoenaed by a court of law or otherwise subject to a legally binding order for release.
Disclosure of Criminal Activity	When information is shared regarding involvement in certain illegal activities, as defined by reporting statutes.
Specialized Security Programs	If you are a participant in certain security-sensitive programs (e.g., nuclear, chemical), we are required to comply with program-specific reporting and disclosure protocols.
State Laws	If there is a law or mandate requiring disclosure of information that is state specific to the location of services provided.

These exceptions are strictly governed and are not taken lightly. Their purpose is to uphold our legal and ethical responsibilities while protecting the safety of the community. Outside of these clearly defined limits, your information will remain confidential.

We encourage you to ask any questions you may have about these policies. It is vital that you feel fully informed and secure.

Privacy going to/leaving from appointments cannot be guaranteed as most EAP services are conducted within an office setting, however your services and disclosures will remain confidential.
