Army's Kure port near Hiroshima executes big mission despite its small size

Considering the mere 2.9 acres of land it takes up, nestled in a small inlet in Hiroshima Prefecture between a boat-building company and a Japanese submarine base, one might mistakenly think there isn't much to Kure Pier 6.

Walking tour highlights Dolls Festival at Zama Shrine

As onlookers flowed toward the steep stairs leading up to the Zama Shrine, they maneuvered for the best camera angle to capture photos of the hundreds of dolls resting on them. Among the visitors was a group of about 50 people from a Camp Zama walking tour hosted by Army Community Service.

Aspiring leader draws from humble past in search of success

As a child, Antonella Escalante was not allowed to leave her home after being escorted from school by her family. At the time, violence, drug use and child trafficking were widespread in her hometown of Jarabacoa, located in the center of the Dominican Republic.

Local roller derby team looks to get back on track

After losing 80 pounds over the past year, Tara Culbertson wanted to find a unique exercise to stay in shape while making new friends. Willing to try something new, Culbertson, the director of Morale, Welfare and Recreation at Naval Air Facility Atsugi, decided to revive the local roller derby team that had dissolved due to the pandemic.
