DPW asks community to help conserve energy, attain green goals

The garrison's Directorate of Public Works has requested community members to do their part by efficiently using utilities to not only lower costs, but to also reach green milestones.

From military brat to Soldier: Specialist follows in her father's footsteps

Being a military brat, Spc. AnnaMarie Popoca became familiar with Army life at a young age. She was born in Germany and her father's career as an Army truck driver steered her family to Hawaii and other posts in the United States. When it was time for her to map out her career, Popoca, 22, chose to follow in the tracks her father left behind.

AER begins campaign to help Army take care of its own

AER helps active-duty and retired Soldiers as well as eligible dependents in financial need with zero-interest loans and grants for various emergency situations. Some include car and home repairs, medical payments, funeral expenses, emergency travel, and natural disaster preparation and evacuation.

International Women's Day Class

Warrant Officer Tiffany Brown-Howard couldn't help but lean forward in her chair, engaged as she was in the topic being discussed during a mindfulness class Camp Zama's Army Community Service hosted here March 8.

Women's History Month Featurette: Spc. Popoca

During Women's History Month, observed throughout March, we'll be highlighting several women Soldiers from the 35th Combat Sustainment Support Battalion, which has more women Soldiers than any other unit on Camp Zama.
