One member of Kwajalein’s longtime workforce has been supporting missions with a mop since 1972. Maiza Bajo, Kwajalein’s Custodial Services lead, is originally from Majuro. He moved to Ebeye in his late teens and began work with Global Associates. He lives on Ebeye with his immediate family.

Over the years, Bajo and his acquaintances in the longtime-employee workforce have put in their time around the island. He estimates he worked cleaning at bachelor quarters for five to 10 years before becoming a custodial lead.

“Some guys worked cleaning in BQs,” he said. “Some were in custodial. Other guys began working in departments like GSK Supply.”

Bajo has done everything from staffing the front desk at the Kwaj Lodge when the usual day clerk was absent, to performing custodial duties at BQs on Roi-Namur. In the past, Bajo also worked at the PBQ—a large bachelor housing unit that has since been demolished—the now vacant Yokwe Yuk Club, transient housing on Meck and ship’s quarters aboard the USAV WORTHY.

“I liked it,” said Bajo about his traveling to clean different work areas. “I worked from daytime until nighttime.”

Bajo says Kwajalein has changed a lot from before, but he is positive about the changes. He’s had a lot of good bosses and Army commanders, he said. He enjoys working with his friends. These days, he’s grateful to work with his supervisor, Paula Jones.

“I am very happy to work with my boss,” Bajo said. “She is excellent and does a good job.”

“He’s a good cleaner,” said Jones of Bajo’s leadership skills with the custodial team. “He gets the guys together and makes sure they do the job well.”

When new employees need training, Bajo patiently shows them the way to be efficient and get the job done well.

“I like working with them,” said Bajo. “I show them how to work [and] all kinds of stuff they don’t know. They ask me, so I [help] take care of it. I make sure it’s completed correctly.”

When asked for his favorite spot to work, Bajo said: “All over is good! It’s good to do a job to take care of things for USAG-KA.”

POLITICAL DRAMA: KSS MOCK ELECTION COMBINES THEATRICALS, POLITICS

HOURLASS REPORT

As Shakespeare’s Hamlet says, “The play’s the thing.”

Last week’s 2020 Kwajalein High School Mock Election presented students with a fun activity designed to educate them about aspects of argument and modern American politics. Students and school staff planned the annual event as a series of dramatic performances through team-oriented activities.

“Together, the juniors and seniors wrote scripts and used online resources to script the performance for both candidates,” said KSS teacher Christi Cardillo. Student speech writing teams for each candidate actor swapped speeches and strengthened remarks for the opposing candidate.

“They performed a group fact-check of speeches and edited out items that they felt should not be included,” said Cardillo.

Much like a spring drama production, students tried out and were cast in main roles. Onstage last week in the Davye Davis Multi-Purpose Room were U.S. Secret Service agents, presidential candidates and their wives. No vice presidents were cast for the event.

Additional performers portrayed ceremonial aspects of American life, including the Pledge of Allegiance and singing the “Star-Spangled Banner.” Students also cast ballots by grade level and learned how their candidates did in the mock vote.

“I opened up auditions for candidates to juniors and seniors,” said KSS teacher Christi Cardillo. “I had three people audition to portray President Trump. Connor Charleton tried out for both roles—Trump and Biden—and did a great job at both, but you can’t have a mock election with only one candidate.”

One thing that stands out as a success for Cardillo was complete participation from the students.

“Every senior was involved in the actual mock election event,” Cardillo said, “whether it was performing, handing out patriotic swag, showing people to seats, registering people to vote or marking down people on our election day rosters.”

It's a calling, a brotherhood and a way of life. For the firefighters on U.S. Army Garrison-Kwajalein Atoll, service is rewarding. The fire service can be tough work, but one thing is for sure: being a firefighter is anything but just a job.

When someone needs help, personnel at the Kwajalein Fire Department are ready to respond at a moment's notice. They support the Kwajalein Hospital and provide mission and fire safety support around the island and at garrison airfields for incoming flights. At the garrison's three fire stations, the KFD monitors and responds to emergency calls, conducts fire safety drills and inspects and maintains gear.

In addition to their daily tasks, emergency medical technicians within the KFD maintain professional certifications to keep their skills sharp, said Assistant Chief Ronald Botts. Personnel also provide education outreach programs for young island residents. Kwajalein students receive annual fire and road safety training from the KFD at the island's Bike Rodeos and during Fire Prevention Week. Recently, on Halloween, team members kept an eye on community safety at Surfway and distributed glowsticks to trick-or-treaters.

Keeping up with the active schedule and community engagement is all part of the calling, said KFD Chief Charles Chambers, a veteran of the U.S. Marine Corps.

"I really enjoyed the brotherhood of the fire service and helping people in their time of need," said Chambers, of his initial impulse to join. "If you look at it as just a job, you're in the wrong field. It's a commitment to service."

Chambers described how members of the fire service freely sacrifice holidays, weekends and social gatherings for their commitment to the work. However, 2020 is not a typical year. In the past months, camaraderie and commitment have been more essential than ever in keeping team momentum going.

Since March, the KFD has worked to keep Kwajalein, Meck and Roi-Namur staffed for missions with reduced numbers of employees. Currently, the KFD employs fewer than 30 of more than 50 essential personnel required for daily operations. There are not enough crew members for the team to take its typical 48-hour, two-crew shifts. Firefighters have been on duty since the day they arrived on Kwajalein. Some have worked 290 days straight to keep the island community safe.

"Because we have minimum staffing requirements, we have to have a certain amount of personnel on hand to man the trucks,” said Chambers. “It’s the same at the airfield. So, when the crew is here 24 hours per day, they’re sleeping here, showering, working out and cooking dinner—and it’s the [same] crew that’s on the truck. There is no private time here. [They’re] always ready to answer the call at any time.”

The firefighters are up to the challenge.

Firefighter and Emergency Services Technician Chris Cox became a firefighter in his home state of Georgia. He grew up around the emergency medical services community.

“I’m kind of an adrenaline junkie,” Cox said. “I’m used to the rush and pace of the work.”

The long hours don’t diminish his commitment, Cox said. He loves his work and stays focused through physical training.

Still, working around the clock for months on end takes its toll.

The next time you see a firefighter, thank them for their hard work.

“We’re talking six to nine months of straight work, [and] it wears on people,” said Chambers. “When everyone else is off duty on the weekends, these personnel in this department are down here protecting every one of them. The myth of inactivity—that all [firefighters] do is grill, sleep—it’s the furthest thing from the truth. All the personnel at all three stations are busy with technical training, required work and safety.”

TRIMMING THE TREES

BY JESSICA DAMBRUCH

How many of you would like to try out one of Kwajalein's tallest jobs?

Members of the Buildings and Grounds crews ascend to more than 40 feet in the air to go to work trimming excess foliage from one of the island's more than 600 coconut palm trees. When they get too heavy with coconuts, island palm trees can pose a safety hazard and trimming is essential.

When you see this team out in town, give them room to work safely. Equipped with a safety harness and a machete, a team member will ascend to do the manual trimming while spotters keep an eye on the lift and maintain a clear safety boundary around the work site.

After trimming, the crew gathers the foliage and cuttings and runs them through a mulching machine that grinds up materials into fine particles before being discarded.

1) A manlift carries a member of the Buildings and Grounds crew high in the air to trim a coconut palm tree near Building 735. 2) Sometimes the best way to trim a tree is with a machete. In this close-up, a crew member carefully cuts loose excess foliage from a coconut palm. 3) Safety first: All crew members wear personal protective equipment—even when doing something as cool as backing a manlift up in a large, three-point turn. 4) Crew members gather loose foliage before running it through a mulching machine.

WHAT THE CRITICS ARE SAYING

ON “TERMINATOR: DARK FATE”: Linda Hamilton and Arnold Schwarzenegger return for another chapter in everyone’s favorite time-traveling killer-android franchise. —A.O. Scott, The NYTimes

ON “SHERLOCK GNOMES: This caper, a sequel to “Gnomeo & Juliet,” has a limited universe and possibilities — imagine if “Toy Story” had basically one kind of toy. —Ben Kenigsberg, The NYTimes

ON “MURDER ON THE ORIENT EXPRESS”: Let’s not lose sight of what Murder on the Orient Express does offer—a content-light mystery that feels true to the more genteel time it was written. —Plugged In Staff

ON “MALEFICENT: MISTRESS OF EVIL”: With widespread death and destruction, this fairytale costume drama is by no means a child’s play. However, it has enough live-action magic to bring the big screen alive. —Ronak Kotecha, Times of India

ON “POKEMON DETECTIVE PIKACHU”: It’s impossible to overstate how much this film owes to Ryan Reynolds. Even if you don't understand Pikachu's world, everyone can understand a great joke superbly delivered.

—Olly Richards, Empire

ON “WHAT MEN WANT”: What Men Want is a wildly uneven stretch of a movie that’s more of a flail than a romp.
—Emily Yoshida, Vulture

ON “BLOODSHOT”: “Bloodshot” is a trash compactor of a comic-book film, but it’s smart trash, an action matrix that’s fun to plug into.
—Owen Gleiberman, Variety

ON “THE CURSE OF LA LLORONA”: Though it certainly could have been scarier and made better use of its premise, this film is still an accomplished, skillful effort in terms of its crisp, fluid look and spooky sound design.
—Jeffrey M. Anderson, Common Sense Media

E-WARENESS:

Wipes, Personal Hygiene Products
Clog Sewer Lines & Pumps

Many household products—like baby and adult personal hygiene products, household wipes and cleaning towelettes are labeled and marketed as disposable and/or flushable. They are not.

While they may be marketed this way as a convenience item, these products still clog sewer pipes and cause problems in sewage pump stations.

Unlike toilet paper, wipes do not break down once they are flushed. When they make their way into the sewer system, these items can accumulate to cause large obstructions in the pipes or get tangled in pump stations, requiring major repairs.

What Can You Do To Help?

Toilet paper is the only product that can safely be flushed down a toilet.

Please never flush any consumer item that is not toilet paper.

Failure to follow these guidelines may result in sewage backing up into your residence.

Thank you,

The guy who cleans the pipes.

Hourglass changes halftoning process

With this issue of the Hourglass we are beginning the use of inhouse equipment to scan photographs for the newspaper

Through the excellent assistance of Tom Hall, trainer in the Information Management Division, Dan Adler of the Hourglass staff will be performing our photo reproduction work.

This process will produce a savings in cost and time and will eliminate the need of KLS Photo Lab personnel to produce halftones on publication days

In addition, it will eliminate the use of chemicals mandated by the halftoning process

The Hourglass will continue to have its film developed at the KLS Photo Lab

As we adjust to the new procedure, the quality of photographic reproduction may vary and we thank you in advance for your patience

ASSIST KPD IN SLOWING RATE OF BIKE THEFTS

From The Kwajalein Hourglass
Oct. 12, 1990

By Stephanie Phillips, Staff Writer

Bicycles on Kwajalein are not only our most important form of transportation, they are a hot commodity in terms of parts—or so think residents who have recently lost their bicycles.

It's an issue that's hard to track because many bike thefts go unreported. Based on police reports of missing bicycles, the number is on the rise, said Lt. Bob Schamay, head of the Kwajalein Police Department Investigations Unit. Speculation about what happens to these disappearing bicycles seems to be pointed at just about every faction on island.

"There was an alleged ring of people who were taking bicycles and using them for parts, although no one was ever caught," said SFC Martin Frazer of the Provost Marshal Office. "It seemed as if the ring ceased its activities, and now this one, or perhaps another one, has started up again—although we can only speculate on that issue."

One thing is for sure. Bicycles are disappearing and although the greatest number of recent losses seems to be the standard new Huffy, there have been reports of the new Parkways being taken.

In a week's time, casual conversation revealed that out of 20 people, all 20 knew of recent losses of bicycles.

There seems to be no pattern. Bikes have been registered and locked, unregistered and unlocked. They still disappeared.

One particularly interesting situation involved the owner at a going away party on Saturday from about 4 – 8 p.m. he wasn't more than 30 feet away from his locked bike and still it disappeared.

"I didn't find the lock anyplace in the vicinity of where the bike had been parked, so I can only assume that someone either carried it away or collected it in a vehicle," said resident Ron Hutchinson.

"Obviously, locking and registering a bicycle is no guarantee against its disappearance, but it can be a deterrent and it will certainly aid in the cycle recovery," said Schamay.

So, what can we do to combat this problem?

Be alert. If you see people looking at bicycles suspiciously, don't be afraid to let them know you are watching. This may help you chase them off.

Lock your bike. It may not prevent a theft, but it will slow the thief down and make them think twice about the act.

Register bikes. It's a free service.

Schamay added that it's the obligation of residents to look after their own property.

History with U.S. Space and Missile Defense Command

In 1984, the recently formed Army Space Council was continuing to evolve.

The Department of the Army Memorandum 15-33 established the Army Space Council as a Headquarters Department of the Army Departmental Committee Nov. 5, 1984.

Chaired by the Vice Chief of Staff of the Army, the council consisted of the Deputy Chiefs of Staff for Operations, Research and Development and Personnel; the Assistant Chief of Staff for Intelligence and the Ballistic Missile Defense Program Manager.

In 1984, MG Eugene Fox served as the BMD Program Manager and the commander of the U.S. Army Ballistic Missile Defense Systems Command, a predecessor to USASMDC. The ASC was to provide policy recommendations and guidance with particular focus on Army's current role and activities in space; Army's future role in space; Army's role in a unified space command; Army's future space organization; and other Army Space related requirements to include document, communications information, intelligence, weapons systems, defense and research and development.

SOLDIER'S COURAGE, COMPOSURE SAVE CREW ON DANGEROUS WWII MISSION

EXTERNAL REPORT

By Katie Lange, Defense.gov

WASHINGTON—Imagine being so injured you're struggling to stay conscious while guiding your damaged airplane home safely. That's what Army 2nd Lt. Robert Femoyer did to make sure his crew returned from a dangerous WWII mission. Femoyer didn't survive, but his courage and composure earned him the Medal of Honor.

Femoyer was born on Oct. 31, 1921, in Huntington, West Virginia, the eldest of two children. He was a dedicated Boy Scout and became one of only a few Medal of Honor recipients to have attained the rank of Eagle Scout.

According to the West Virginia Veterans Memorial, Femoyer was a good student and tennis player who attended Marshall College in Huntington, West Virginia, before transferring to Virginia Tech in 1940 to study civil engineering. About a year later, the U.S. joined World War II. Femoyer signed up for the Enlisted Reserve Corps on Nov. 11, 1942 and continued to attend college until he was called to active duty with the Army Air Corps in February 1943.

Femoyer was an aviation cadet after basic training, but he failed his initial attempt to become a pilot in July 1943. After a recommendation for reclassification and two more training courses in Florida and Louisiana, he finally graduated in June 1944 with his pilot's wings. The 22-year-old was commissioned as a second lieutenant and assigned the job of navigator.

In September 1944, Femoyer deployed to England where he joined the 447th Bomb Group's 711th Squadron. He was on his fifth mission when he was put to the ultimate test.

On Nov. 2, 1944, Femoyer and his crew were among hundreds of bombers sent to attack an oil refinery outside Merseburg, Germany, one of the most heavily defended targets in the country.

As Femoyer's B-17 Flying Fortress neared its target, three enemy antiaircraft shells hit the plane. It was seriously damaged, and Femoyer was thrown from his seat to the floor. He suffered serious wounds to his side and back from shell fragments. He'd lost a lot of blood and was in great pain, but he refused an injection of morphine and any painkillers offered to him.

As the crew's navigator, Femoyer knew that if he didn't keep his head clear, he wouldn't be able to direct the plane out of the line of fire to save his fellow airmen. Unfortunately, though, he couldn't get up from the floor, so he had to have his comrades prop him up so he could see his charts and navigation instruments.

For the next two and a half hours, while fighting unconsciousness and sitting in a pool of his own blood, Femoyer directed his pilots through a gauntlet of enemy flak positions along the route home. They flew more than 500 miles to their airfield at Royal Air Force Rattlesden, England, without suffering any further damage.

After they landed, Femoyer finally gave in and was given a sedative for his wounds. Sadly, he died shortly after being moved from the plane.

Femoyer's body was returned to Florida where his parents had moved. He is interred at Greenlawn Cemetery in Jacksonville.

On May 9, 1945, his parents received his Medal of Honor from an Army Air Forces major general in a small private ceremony.

Femoyer's name and legacy live on. Virginia Tech named a building in his honor and numerous Air Force bases have streets named for him.

How our newspaper got its name

The shoulder sleeve insignia of the 7th Infantry Division consists of two black, equilateral triangles placed vertically on a red circular disc giving it an hourglass shape.

The hourglass of the insignia was consequently used in the title of the island newspaper, The Kwajalein Hourglass.
