YOU ARE A SOLDIER FOR LIFE!!

Even after hanging up the uniform, an Army retiree carries the identity of a soldier in every fiber of their being. Service in the Army isn't just a job — it's a transformation shaped by discipline, loyalty, sacrifice, and a deep commitment to something larger than oneself. Retirement simply marks the end of active duty, not the end of the values, leadership, and sense of duty that were forged through years of service. That's why the phrase "Soldier for Life" resonates so strongly: it reflects a lifelong bond with the Army community and a continued dedication to living the ethos that defined their service.

Sharing the story of being a Soldier for Life is really about showing how service doesn't end when the uniform comes off. You can talk about the lessons that shaped you — resilience, teamwork, integrity — and how they continue to guide your choices today. Highlight the moments that defined your character, the people who influenced you, and the pride you still carry in representing the Army's values. When you share those experiences with others, whether through conversations, community involvement, or mentoring younger soldiers, you're not just telling your story — you're keeping the spirit of service alive and reminding others that being a soldier is a lifelong identity, not a temporary role.

RETIRED U.S. ARMY SOLDIER FOR LIFE

Inspiring the next generation to serve

By Maria Bentinck, Director, Army Retirement Services

One of the greatest privileges of being a Retired Soldier is the opportunity to continue serving long after taking off the uniform. Retirement from active service does not mean retirement from purpose. In fact, I have found some of my most meaningful moments as a retired Army Adjutant General Corps lieutenant colonel have come from helping inspire the next generation to serve.

On Jan. 20, 2026, I had the tremendous honor of administering the oath of enlistment to my goddaughter, Pvt. Kayla Guinyard, as she entered the U.S. Army at Fort Jackson, S.C. Standing beside her as she raised her right hand was a proud and emotional moment—not only as her godmother, but as a Retired Soldier who understands the significance of that commitment.

Then, on April 2, 2026, I had the privilege of serving as the guest speaker at her Basic Combat Training (BCT) graduation at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo. Watching Kayla stand among her fellow Soldiers after completing one of the most challenging and transformational experiences of their lives was inspiring.

During my remarks, I spoke about the journey each Soldier had completed over the previous ten weeks. They had endured long days, early mornings, road marches, rifle qualification, the gas chamber, physical training, and countless moments that tested their resilience and determination. I reminded them that they were no longer trainees—they had earned the title of Soldier.

I also shared a message that is especially important today: less than one percent of Americans serve in the Armed Forces. Each graduate had answered a call that most Americans never will. Their willingness to serve reflects courage, commitment, and a desire to be part of something larger than themselves.

I spoke about how the Army continues to evolve, modernize, and adapt to meet new challenges. Today's Soldiers will serve in an Army focused on readiness, transformation, modernization, technology, and the future fight. They will help shape the Army of tomorrow.

Most importantly, I reminded them that becoming a Soldier is not just about what they do while in uniform. It is about joining a lifelong community. Once a Soldier, Always a Soldier … A Soldier for Life.

My experience at Fort Leonard Wood was especially meaningful because, while I was there, my cousin, Spc. Ronald Wilson, was graduating from Advanced Individual Training (AIT) in the Transportation Corps. I was fortunate enough to attend his graduation as well. Seeing both Kayla and Ronald reach important milestones in their Army journeys reinforced something I have believed for many years: our conversations matter.

Over time, I spoke to each of them about military service, the opportunities it provides, and the importance of giving back to something greater than yourself. Today, I am proud to say that three of my godchildren are serving in the military—two in the Army and one in the Air Force (PV2 Kayla Guinyard, Spc. Naijah Edmonds-Marshall and Tech. Sgt. Johnisha Robinson).

As Retired Soldiers, we have tremendous influence. Young people are watching us. They are listening to our stories, observing our leadership, and learning from our example. We can inspire them to serve in uniform, support their communities, or become leaders in other ways.
