

VOLUNTEER

The Army Volunteer Corps (AVC) volunteers are the essential connection between the community and Army Community Service (ACS). Volunteers contribute a broad range of services that augment paid staff, enhance, and expand the capabilities of all ACS services. In addition, volunteers share their information and experience to improve programs and services. In return, AVC volunteers learn about their community, become active members of that community, develop skills, and achieve personal fulfillment through their service to ACS. As a team, paid staff and volunteers provide real-life solutions to the challenges of the military lifestyle.

AVC volunteers are Soldiers from all components, Military Retirees, Spouses, Department of the Army Civilians, and youth who share the common bond of helping to meet the needs of the Army community. Volunteer services range from welcoming ACS clients to the center; updating files, helping with the lending closet; developing lesson plans, to supporting special projects, and much more. AVC volunteers make a significant contribution to Army Family Team Building, Army Family Action Plan, and the Army Volunteer Corps Program.
