FHL TTC COVID COPS

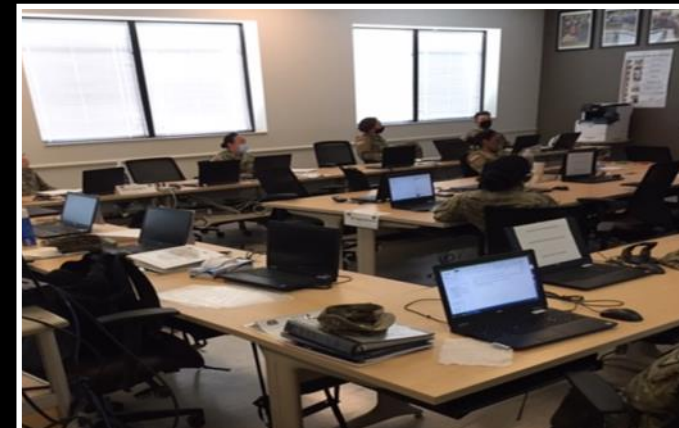

Soldiers attending the Fort Hunter Liggett 80th TASS Training Center (TTC) Military Police Advanced Leaders Course are adhering to CDC guidelines to keep safe and reduce the risks of spreading germs. The TTC has even assigned “COVID Cops” to reinforce the guidelines, ensure everyone is wearing protective gear, and assist facility managers to help sanitize areas. Per Army Reserve guidelines, all TTC training is structured to put Soldiers in “bubbles” to isolate them and prevent large-group congregations. It is everyone’s responsibility to do the right thing and help reduce the risks of spreading germs. If you see someone not doing the right thing, say something. (Courtesy photos)

DFAC adjusts for COVID-19

The Fort Hunter Liggett Dining Facility has made changes to adapt to the COVID-19 environment. Safety measures in place include social distance spacing, wrapping individual servings of normally self-serve items, serving drinks to avoid contamination, and enhanced cleaning practices. Soldiers conducting training at Fort Hunter Liggett are instructed prior to arrival and during in-processing, to adhere to CDC guidelines and the garrison policy to wear face masks at all public places and when social distancing cannot be observed.
