Although school starting signals that the end of summer is near, Families have an opportunity to gather for one more memory maker here Aug. 19.
Due to inclement weather, the Music Under the Alabama Stars concert originally scheduled for June 10 was cancelled. Calendars are now synched for an evening of entertainment and relaxation starting at 6:30 p.m. on Howze Field.

Maj. Gen. Anthony G. Crutchfield, U.S. Army Aviation Center of Excellence and Fort Rucker commanding general, invites Soldiers, Families and community members to join him for a relaxing evening of Music Under the Alabama Stars.

“I envision a relaxed atmosphere for our Families. A park full of lawn chairs, Frisbees, children and leashed pets running around. A way to say ‘thanks for your hard work’ by enjoying the great music of our band,” Crutchfield said.

Command Sgt. Maj. Richard D. Stidley assumed his responsibilities at the U.S. Army Combat Readiness/Safety Center in a ceremony Aug. 8 at Fort Rucker, Ala.
The ceremony at the Army Aviation Museum was led by Brig. Gen. William T. Wolf, director of Army safety and commanding general, USACR/Safety Center.
“Regardless of their title, senior enlisted Soldiers have filled our ranks since the Revolutionary War, helping Soldiers and tirelessly supporting commanders with advice and recommendations and always serving bravely alongside the men and women who serve,” Wolf said during his remarks. “Soldiers will tell you their primary motivators are nothing more than a sense of dedication, duty and a genuine love of Soldiering. Command Sgt. Maj. Stidley certainly fills this role.”

The ceremony was attended by approximately 75 active and retired Soldiers and civilians and local officials. Afterwards, Stidley outlined his goals in his new position.

Active duty Families with special needs children don't always get to participate in the same activities as other Families, but Fort Rucker's Exceptional Family Member Program is looking to change that.
EFMP is in the process of identifying military Families with special needs with the Child and Family Find Campaign during the month of September. Special needs can include physical, intellectual, developmental delays, emotional impairments that require special treatment, therapy, education, and training or counseling needs, said Marion Cornish, post EFMP manager.

“In September, we're kicking things off with EFMP bowling,” she said. “We're also going to have a display at the post exchange from Sept. 12-19, which will give parents a chance to get some more information about the program. The bowling is an opportunity for active duty Families with special needs to enjoy themselves and meet other Families like theirs.”

The EFMP “Let's Roll Bowl” takes place Sept. 19 from 4 to 5 p.m. at Rucker Lanes Bowling Center. Games are free from 4-5 p.m., and will be $1.75 from 5-6:30 p.m. plus a $1.25 shoe rental. Families must register by

Riding on empty

BY GUNNERY SGT. KEVIN L. JONES
1st Battalion, 11th Marines
Camp Pendleton, Calif.

I was just finishing my three-year tour as a Marine drill instructor at Camp Pendleton and I rode my Yamaha R1 as often as I could. I planned to celebrate finishing my DI tour by meeting a friend and riding in the mountains east of San Diego.

We scheduled the ride for the first Saturday that August. The temperature was 101 degrees, typical for a mid-summer day. I was wearing all the proper personal protective equipment, including my motorcycle jacket.

We started riding about 10 a.m. and, before long, I was feeling light-headed. Although I hadn't drunk any water since the previous day, I just thought this feeling was due to the hot weather. When we stopped to get gas, I bought a soda. Later, I'd wish that I'd bought water.

As soon as we resumed riding, I began feeling light-headed again. We were in the mountains going through a series of curves at a pretty good clip when we came upon a two-lane road. My friend took off down the road, but I decided to slow down and found myself behind an older couple driving uphill

Keep your cool

With all the possible accident causes when riding, it is easy to overlook the danger of becoming dehydrated. Yet, if it's important to stay properly hydrated when you train and fight, why would it be any less important while cruising down the road? Here are some tips to help you ride safely.

- Drink plenty of water before and during your ride. Avoid coffee, tea, soda or sports drinks with caffeine or sugar, as they promote dehydration. However, sports drinks that don't have caffeine or sugar can be helpful in maintaining your electrolyte balance.
- Consider wearing a hydration system that will allow you to sip water as you ride.
- Exposing your skin to the sun's heat and wind will accelerate dehydration. Instead, wear riding clothing designed to both cover you and keep you cool.
- Wear your helmet to reduce the effects of the hot wind and help retain body moisture.
- Schedule rest stops so you can get out of the heat and into air-conditioning.
- Ride during the cooler parts of the day, such as the early morning or late afternoon.

at maybe 25 mph.

As I was following them, the effects of my dehydration set in, causing me to pass out and hit the guardrail. As I did, I apparently woke up and put out my right arm to catch myself. When the bike fell, it shattered the ulna bone in my right arm and the radial bones in my hand. I didn't realize my arm was broken until I tried moving it. I wouldn't have wished that pain on my worst enemy.

A few drivers stopped to help and eventually called the California Highway Patrol. When I finally stood up, I realize how close I'd come to being killed. I'd only survived because I was going slowly when I hit the guardrail. Had I been going any faster, I'd have gone over the guardrail and down a 175-foot cliff onto some

My discovery of mild traumatic brain injury

BY HEATHER MARSH
Defense Centers of Excellence Strategic Communications

The phrase, "can't see the forest through the trees" seems to describe a bout of cluelessness I recently experienced. Or perhaps, the more common "if it was a snake, it would have bit me" is truly the best fit.

Either way, the fact is I work at the Defense Centers of Excellence for Psychological Health and Traumatic Brain Injury with top subject matter experts in the field of traumatic brain injury, and I couldn't even recognize that the weird symptoms I had, after a recent good bump to the head, were symptoms of a concussion. How's that for irony?

Put a name to the pain

In March, I spent about 10 days of feeling a little disoriented and helpless — having no clue as to what was going on with me. After a few conversations with a variety of military health care providers, to include an emergency room resident and former chief of neurology, I finally was able to "put a name to the pain." It turns out I had sustained a mild TBI as a result of a recent fall — hardwood floor, meet Heather's face. It wasn't a pleasant introduction and resulted in five stitches and a severely bruised ego.

With a huge sigh of relief and several deep breaths later, I began my recovery process by talking to friends and family, and combing through resources and facts. The first tidbit that jumped off one fact sheet — courtesy of Defense and Veterans Brain Injury Center — was that falls are the leading cause of a traumatic brain injury.

I know much more about mild TBI now, like the fact that you should give yourself a little slack and let your brain heal, which can take one to three months in most cases. But, as my neurologist insists, that doesn't mean you should stop doing routine tasks, like reading. He reminded me how amazing the brain is and it's important to keep working it because, in time, it will learn new tricks to help self-correct.

Gratitude

I also have a newfound appreciation for deployed service members who have sustained not one, but multiple concussions, and yet they still continue to put themselves in harm's way when they've recovered. This gratitude was even more apparent during a recent commute.

I was driving home from work one day, not too long after my diagnosis, taking my usual route along a scenic parkway. I drove along my curvy path and watched the sunlight flicker through the trees and shimmer off the flanking river crests — this sounds like a tranquil moment until I mention that the flickering light quickly caused my brain to hiccup and feel overloaded — like someone pushed the pause button. I felt a sudden rush of panic as if I was intoxicated; I felt disoriented and blinded all at once. Luckily, I was able to pull over to the side of the road — thank goodness for a nearby outlet — and regroup.

Almost as quickly as I thought that maybe I shouldn't be driving, my thoughts shifted to our nation's warriors. As a patriot and veteran, I feel a connection to our service members and their families frequently. I've lived the life and still do as a military spouse. I had visions of uniformed service members and wondered what it must be like to have the responsibilities they have down range. I imagined them walking around on patrol, on high alert, charged with keeping their unit, local civilians and themselves safe in the middle of an unfamiliar, wartorn city, catching glimpses of sparkling metal or debris that just seem "off."

jagged rocks.

I was taken to the hospital, where doctors placed two rods and 14 screws in my arm. It took 50 staples to close the wound. Due to the bones not healing properly, I had to go back for another surgery five months later.

Four months after that, I had a third operation where doctors did a bone graft by taking bone marrow from my hip and putting it in my arm. The pain was excruciating.

In the state of California, if you pass out or blackout while driving or riding, your driving privileges are automatically revoked. The Department of Motor Vehicles revoked my driver's license because of my blackout and I had to get a CT scan and be interviewed by a physician. It was later determined that I blacked out because I was dehydrated.

After the results of the CT scan and the documentation from the physician, my driver license was reissued.

As a youth, I was taught the importance of staying hydrated. It was a lesson I had to relearn the hard way as an adult and I'm glad I survived to tell my story. Before I take any long rides now, I not only make sure my bike's fluid levels are where they should be, I make sure mine are too!

Sound like an intense scenario? Let's make it more realistic by mentioning that the group of service members experienced a jarring blast from an improvised explosive device during a convoy to deliver supplies a few days prior. Oh, and it's the third blast this month. Wow.

So, I'm pulled over on the side of a picturesque road worried about driving impaired while there are men and women, with guns, fighting to keep my family safe who may be experiencing the symptoms I have right at this moment? Again, wow. Another TBI fact: In the military, the leading causes of TBI are bullets, fragments and blasts.

Lessons learned

Fortunately, my story has a happy ending, and I learned some stuff too. I made it home safely that day and as I write this, almost all of my concussion symptoms are gone. I learned that people use different words to describe the way they feel, so it's important to talk to someone who can help decipher when a response or feeling is normal and when it's not. I also know a lot more about the human brain than I ever thought I would, which is pretty cool.

I've found among all that I have learned, the two things I want to share from my experience are:

- 1) I discovered simply knowing what was wrong with me offered relief and comfort — proof that it's crucial to talk to others and reach out for help.
- 2) Because of the amazing people I work with at the Defense Centers of Excellence, things are changing on the battlefield for men and women who experience TBIs. New guidance and research are helping health care providers ensure injured service members get the right treatment at the right time, when it's absolutely critical to their mission, the lives of others and themselves.

Lyster officials encourage immunization awareness

BY RUSSELL SELLERS
Army Flier Staff Writer

August is a time of transition for many in the Wiregrass region as children prepare to go back to school or go to college, and also as medical professionals prepare for flu season.

This month is also National Immunization Awareness Month, and Lyster Army Health Clinic officials said this is a good time for people to make plans for updating immunization shots or for parents to make appointments to get their children vaccinated.

“Prevention is really the most important part of fighting disease,” said Lt. Col. Andrew Powell, Nursing and Patient Support Services deputy commander. “It’s vital not just to health, but in the case of the Army, to the mission.”

Soldiers are required to have a longer list of vaccines than other Americans because of the frequency and distance they may travel, due to potential deployments. This means they, and their Families, will probably have more immunization treatments than others, Powell added.

Some immunizations are only given at certain points during a person’s life, such as measles, mumps and rubella and Hepatitis A and B. Others, like the influenza vaccine, should be taken annually, said Carolyn Peterson, Lyster Allergy and Immunology licensed practical nurse.

“The flu can be very dangerous for people with weaker immune systems, like the elderly or the very young,” she said. “If left untreated it could become pneumonia, which can be fatal.”

While it’s not flu season yet, it’s not far off, said Powell.

“We’ll let Soldiers and Families know once it gets closer, but they should always remain vigilant and be prepared for the upcoming season,” he added. “There are some antiviral treatments for the flu, but the best course of action is prevention.”

Powell also addressed the still-persistent rumors that vaccinations have led to diseases like autism in children as a result of mercury content in certain vaccines.

“There have been a number of studies that show there are no increases of cases of autism in children who’ve been vaccinated,” he said. “There was a concern about vaccines that contained the preservative thimerosal, a mercury-containing product. But, there’s more mercury in a can of tuna than in any of these vaccines. We do have thimerosal-free flu vaccines for young children and pregnant women, for those who want it.”

Powell said the childhood vaccines do not have thimerosal in them now. According to the Center for Disease Control and Prevention website, it was removed from all childhood vaccines in 2001.

The CDC website also notes that no link between autism and thimerosal has ever been found.

“People sort of think of vaccines as not being very important, but these diseases have killed thousands upon thousands of children throughout history,” Powell said. “Vaccination has been one of the most successful medical breakthroughs to increase public health and extend life.”

These schedules indicate the recommended age groups and medical indications for which administration of currently licensed vaccines is commonly indicated for adults ages 19 years and older, as of January 1, 2011. For all vaccines being recommended on the adult immunization schedule, a vaccine series does not need to be restarted, regardless of the time that has elapsed between doses. Licensed combination vaccines may be used whenever any components of the combination are indicated and when the vaccine's other components are not contraindicated. For detailed recommendations on all vaccines, including those used primarily for travelers or that are issued during the year, consult the manufacturers' package inserts and the complete statements from the Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices (<http://www.cdc.gov/vaccines/pubs/acip-list.htm>).

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES
CENTERS FOR DISEASE CONTROL AND PREVENTION

Library preserves Army Aviation history

BY DAVID AGAN
Fort Rucker Public Affairs

FORT RUCKER — From 1955 to 1995, the Aviators of Fort Rucker chronicled their story in the pages of the Army Aviation Digest.

Since publication ended nearly two decades ago, the only place to find old issues were in large, bound collections, but that all changed earlier this year when the U.S. Army Aviation Technical Library made ever issue available online.

It took months of preparation and hard work, but the end result is an amazing piece of Army Aviation history, according to Beata Totten, head of public services for the U.S. Army Aviation Technical Library. Every issue of the Army Aviation Digest is now available online at <http://www.rucker.army.mil/usaace/techlibrary/avdigest.html>.

“It’s something we’d wanted to do for a long time but we just didn’t have the resources to do it ourselves,” said Totten. “It’s such a unique part of Army Aviation. We thought it was something that was important to make available to the Aviation community.”

The first issue of the Army Aviation Digest was published in February 1955. At that time, Gen. Matthew Ridgway, Chief of Staff of the U.S. Army, wrote of his confidence that the publication would be of great value in stimulating professional military discussion and in disseminating information concerning the increasingly important role of Army Aviation.

For the next 40 years, Army Aviation Digest did just that, according to J. P. Hughes, Ph.D., Army Aviation Branch Historian.

“The Army Aviation Digest has really uniquely captured a lot of the things that were of concern to the Branch,” said Hughes. “It’s one way that we have to go back to the years that the Aviation Digest covers and allows us to find out what the branch was focusing on at that point in time and what sort of work was being done to develop the fleet we presently have.”

Digitally preserving the Digest was an arduous process, said Totten. The issues had been bound together in large volumes, but they did not lend themselves well to the scanning process.

“We had to find the copies loose leaf,” said Totten. “The U.S. Army Aeromedical Research Laboratory library gave us some. We got more from the U.S. Army Aviation Museum. We had to hunt them down until we got all of the issues from 1955 to 1995.”

Once collected, the issues were sent to a company that had been contracted to cut them apart and scan them.

“It was a couple of months before we got the first CDs back. We went through them, page by page, comparing the scans to the originals,” said Totten. “We spent a lot of time on this. It was tedious but I think it was well worth it.”

The finished product was every issue of the Army Aviation Digest, scanned in full color in PDF format. The next step was to make them available to the entire Aviation community online.

“It’s out there,” said Totten. “You can get it at your home, on your desktop, 24 hours a day, seven days a week. You don’t have to wait until the library is open to get a black-and-white copy. You’ve got exactly what it looks like in the library.”

Compared to today’s Army Aviation magazine, published by the Army Aviation Association of America, the Army Aviation Digest “was not as glossy, a little bit more of a tight community of Army Aviators and not so industry-oriented,” said Hughes.

“One thing the Digest had that I don’t see in our more contemporary magazine was a lot of traditions and customs of the service,” said Hughes. “They did not hesitate to have jokes in there or to talk about customs and traditions of the Aviation community. Of course, that’s completely missing in modern publications, which are much more polished products.”

While the Army Aviation Digest was being preserved, the U.S. Army Aviation Technical Library was also digitally archiving 40 years of annual command histories. These are narrative accounts of historically significant events and activities of the command in the context of the history of the Army and serve as a guide for future operations, according to Totten.

“These are historians’ versions of ‘What happened this year at Fort Rucker,’” said Totten. “It’s unclassified, unlimited information that is uniquely Fort Rucker. You aren’t going to find it anywhere else.”

The annual command history archive is located online at <http://www.rucker.army.mil/usaace/techlibrary>.

Hughes says that future histories will be created and published digitally.

“I am extremely grateful that the librarians have digitized these two works because the entire Aviation community can use them as a resource,” said Hughes. “I constantly talk to veterans who ask ‘Do you have anything on...?’ I’ll say ‘I can look it up for you but did you know that you can look it up now?’ and now they do.”

This month in Army Aviation history

August 1967, Volume 13, Number 8 (Editor’s note: This is a new column that highlights Army Aviation history as noted in past issues of Army Aviation Digest, which people can find online at www.rucker.army.mil/usaace/techlibrary/digest.)

In this issue:

- Find the enemy – airmobile style by Lt. Col. Kenneth D. Mertel — In an airmobile infantry unit in Vietnam today, intelligence and reconnaissance, always a difficult problem in the past, have been improved to a point where the enemy is located more rapidly than before in a counterinsurgency environment.
- Passing the weather buck by Capt. Robert D. Kelley and Cletus N. Youmans — Blaming the weather for the loss of lives and destruction of perfectly good aircraft in thunderstorms is too often the easy way out.
- Here comes the CH-47B — Think of Vietnam and you think of the helicopter. Think of the helicopter and among those that immediately come to mind is the CH-47A Chinook. Since its arrival in Southeast Asia in September 1965, the tandem-rotor aircraft has been one of the mainstays of the Army’s aerial assault against the enemy. Now it has passed its 56,000th flight hour in Vietnam.

GI Bill changes include actual cost for in-state tuition

BY VETERANS AFFAIRS
Army News Service

WASHINGTON — The Department of Veterans Affairs is reaching out to inform veterans of recent changes made by Congress to the Post 9/11 GI Bill that take effect this year.

“The Post 9/11 GI Bill is incredibly important because it reduces the financial burdens of higher education so that veterans have an opportunity to achieve their education goals,” said Gen. Allison Hickey, under secretary for benefits. “The VA believes it is important for veterans to be aware of changes to the GI Bill this year and learn more about how these changes may affect them.”

Hickey said that today, more than 537,000 students have received more than $11.5 billion in GI Bill benefits to help them take charge of their future.

Changes to the Post-9/11

GI Bill that took effect Aug. 1 include paying the actual net cost of all public in-state tuition and fees, rather than basing payments upon the highest in-state tuition and fee rates for every state.

Another change involves capping private and foreign tuition at $17,500 per academic year, as well as ending payments during certain school breaks to preserve veterans’ entitlement for future academic semesters.

Additionally, certain students attending private schools in select states can now continue to receive benefits at the same rate payable during the previous academic year.

Beginning Oct. 1, eligible individuals will be able to use the Post-9/11 GI Bill for programs such as non-college degrees, on-the-job training, and correspondence courses. They will also be eligible to receive a portion of the national monthly housing allowance rate when enrolled only in distance learning courses.

The VA is implementing the latest round of changes to the Post 9/11 GI Bill and has already begun processing fall 2011 enrollment certifications.

Outreach by VA has helped to increase participation by colleges and universities in the Yellow Ribbon program, which helps students avoid out-of-pocket costs that may exceed the benefit. More than 2,600 schools are participating in the Yellow Ribbon program.

“VA is committed to ensuring veterans have the information and tools they need to succeed,” Hickey said.

Families: Some don’t realize they’re eligible

Sept. 16. Some other activities will include “Story Time” at the Center Library Sept. 23. No time has been officially set for the event yet. The stories will focus on children with disabilities and the event will also serve to get Families more information about EFMP and to broaden their perspective as to what is a qualifying condition for enrollment, Cornish added.

“Sometimes, Families don’t realize they may be eligible or need to enroll in EFMP,” she said. “For example, if you have a child who has been diagnosed with Attention Deficit Disorder or Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder, they need to be screened for possible enrollment.”

Being part of EFMP can also help Families find and be assigned to posts that are better equipped to deal with their needs.

Enrollment allows the assignment manager at Army personnel agencies to consider the documented medical and special needs of exception Family members in the assignment process. When possible, Soldiers are assigned to an area where the medical and special education needs of their EFM can be met.

This will depend on a valid personnel requirement for the Soldier’s grade, specialty and eligibility for the tour. All Soldiers are still eligible for worldwide assignments.

Having the support and training that comes from being part of EFMP has made some parents’ lives much easier.

“We’ve been in the Army 10 years and with EFMP for nine,” said Kelli Reynoldson, military spouse and mother of a son with special needs. “Being with EFMP can only make your life easier. When you’re about to move and you need to establish a point of contact that understands special needs at the next post, they do a lot of the leg-work for you.”

Reynoldson said meeting other Families with similar situations to her own was also helpful in her four years at Fort Rucker.

“Sometimes you just need to talk with someone who understands what you’re going through,” she said. “If you feel like you have no support or just need a break sometimes, EFMP can open a lot of doors.”

If you are a Soldier with a Family member with a special need or disability, or have knowledge of someone who is disabled or with a special need, contact the EFMP at Lyster Army Health Clinic, 255-7431. Lyster’s EFMP conducts EFM screenings, enrollments, updates and disenrollments. According to Army Regulation 608-75, EFMP requires Soldiers to update EFM enrollment every three years or sooner if services for special needs are no longer required.

For more information on EFMP, call 255-9277.

Music: Families should arrive early with blankets

The 98th Army "Silver Wings" Band will perform about 20 minutes of patriotic music followed by a traditional Streamer Ceremony, featuring re-enactors from the Wiregrass area. The evening will conclude with a rock concert and should last about an hour and a half, according to CW4 Jesse Pascua, bandmaster.

"The music is ready, and I'm tweaking the script. I encourage families to arrive early with their blankets, lawn chairs and coolers to settle in a nice shady spot," Pascua said.

The Streamer Ceremony is traditionally conducted in celebration of the June 14 Army Birthday, according to Pascua.

"When the 13 original colonies began their fight for freedom at Lexington, they had neither an established Army nor a national flag," Pascua said. "Militia units of this period had local banners, which reflected in many cases the sentiment of the times. Banners included mottos such as 'Hope,' 'Liberty,' 'Don't Tread on Me,' 'Live Free or Die,' and symbolic representations such as snakes, beavers, pine trees and anchors.

"The Army flag, as we have come to know it today, was dedicated and unfurled for the first time on the Army's 181st birthday, June 14, 1956, by then-Vice President Richard Nixon at Independence Hall, Philadelphia, Pa.," he added.

"The 178 streamers attached to the Army flag represent campaigns fought by Soldiers throughout our nation's history. Each streamer is embroidered with the designation of the campaign and year in which it occurred. The colors of the streamers are derived from campaign ribbons authorized for service during that action or war," Pascua said.

"The Army flag and its multi-colored streamers are symbolic of the heroism, valor, courage and dedication of patriots who served our nation in time of need. Our Army was there at the birth of the nation and serves today, as a beacon of light around the world in the cause of liberty," he said.

CSM: Stidley to focus on increasing off-duty safety

"My initial goal will be to try to reduce the off-duty fatalities we're having throughout the Army," he explained. "We do a good job with on-duty, but do a poor job with off-duty safety. As a Soldier and now a command sergeant major, I've led Soldiers my entire career and can't understand why we lose our standards when we go out the gate or at 5 p.m. when we fire the cannon."

That experience, he said, provides the focus for keeping our Soldiers safe.

"That's my goal: get out there with the Soldiers and senior noncommissioned officers to try to find out why we can't maintain those safety standards off the installation."

Stidley's last duty assignment was at Hunter Army Airfield, Ga., where he was the brigade Command Sgt. Maj. for the 3rd Combat Aviation Brigade. He served 11 years with 3rd CAB, beginning as a battalion first sergeant, before rising to the brigade senior enlisted position.

ARMY BRIEFS

ARMY ANNOUNCES CIVILIAN REDUCTIONS

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Army announced Aug. 4 it will reduce the size of its civilian employee workforce by more than 8,700 people by Sept. 30, 2012. These cuts are based on Department of Defense resource decisions as reflected in the fiscal year 2012 President's Budget and require a reduction of Army civilian employees to comply with decreased funding levels.

The Army has identified more than 30 different commands and agencies affected by these reductions, with nearly 80 percent of the cuts taking place within Installation Management Command, Army Material Command, Training and Doctrine Command, and Headquarters, Department of the Army.

"We are in a very challenging fiscal environment and understand the impact these cuts will have on our civilians and their families," said Thomas R. Lamont, assistant secretary of the Army for Manpower and Reserve Affairs. "Tough choices have to be made, but we'll make them in a thoughtful and deliberate manner that best supports the Army's mission."

RAPID EQUIPPING FORCE DEVELOPS 'ENERGY TO THE EDGE' PROGRAM

FORT BELVOIR, Va. — The U.S. Army's Rapid Equipping Force has partnered with the Defense Technical Information Center's Weapon Systems Technology Information Analysis Center to procure, deploy and assess hybrid alternative and renewable energy systems in an effort called "Energy to the Edge."

The effort is a response to the growing energy demands among troops in theater and in distant, hard-to-reach locations, referred to as the "tactical edge." The initiative also seeks decreased reliance on JP-8 diesel fuel for military vehicles and equipment.

Energy to the Edge is a subset of Rapid Equipping Force's or REF's, Net Zero effort, which focuses on meeting energy and water requirements at locations that are hard to reach with logistical aid, while simultaneously reducing dependence on ground and aerial resupply operations.

ARMY AIRBORNE ISR PLATFORM SLATED FOR EARLY 2013 ARRIVAL

WASHINGTON — Army acquisition officials say they expect the service's newest airborne intelligence, surveillance and reconnaissance asset to be available to the force within 18 months.

"What we're hoping is to be able to have the first platform deployed as a Christmas present in the 2012, early 2013 time-frame," said Lt. Col. Dean Hoffman, product manager for the Medium Altitude Reconnaissance Surveillance System, or EMARSS.

The EMARSS will consist of a commercial derivative aircraft — the Hawker Beechcraft King Air 350 — that is equipped with an electro-optic and infrared full-motion video sensor, a communications intelligence collection system, an aerial precision guidance system, line-of-sight tactical and beyond-line-of-sight communications suites, two operator workstations, and a self-protection suite.

The EMARSS operates as a single platform in support of tactical missions, but through connectivity to tactical and national networks, also contributes to the joint overall airborne intelligence, surveillance and reconnaissance, or AISR, constellation.

Deployments shorten for Soldiers

BY ROB MCILVAINE
Army News Service

ARLINGTON, Va. — Jan. 1, most Soldiers will deploy for nine months, meaning more time at home with their families.

Secretary of the Army John McHugh signed a directive instituting a nine-month "boots on the ground" policy for deployed Soldiers, providing more "dwell" time at home for Soldiers and Families.

"Implementation of this change is based on the projected demand for Army forces, and remains contingent on global security conditions and combatant commanders' requirements," said Lt. Col. Peggy Kageleiry, an Army spokesperson.

Lt. Col. Brian Hughes, commander of the 2nd GSAB, 1st Avn. Regt., is lowered on a hoist from a UH-60 Black Hawk medevac helicopter during training on Fort Riley, Kan., July 28. This is the first time the battalion's medevac company has conducted hoist training since its return from Iraq this March. Like the rest of the Combat Aviation Brigade, 1st Inf. Div. the medevac company is back in the full-swing of its training cycle, and is working around the clock with ground units across Fort Riley.

Aviation brigade spins up aircraft for training with ground troops

BY SGT. ROLAND HALE
CAB, 1st Infantry Division, Public Affairs

FORT RILEY, Kan. — Fort Riley's aviation brigade hit the skies heavy this week to train with its 1st Infantry Division counterparts on the ground.

The Combat Aviation Brigade, 1st Infantry Division, used its arsenal of Black Hawk and Chinook helicopters Aug. 3 to conduct air assault training with troops from the 1st Battalion, 28th Infantry Regiment.

Air assaults are the movement of ground troops to targets by use of helicopters. The events served to train both the helicopter crews and their passengers.

CW2 Dwayne Williams piloted a UH-60 Black Hawk on one of the missions. He has been with the brigade's 3rd Assault Helicopter Battalion, 1st Aviation Regiment, for three years, and knows what it takes to pull off an air assault in combat.

"I'd say 90 percent of it goes to the planning," he said. "They tell us where they want to go, and it's up to us to figure everything else out."

Williams said the troops were dropped at their objective within seven seconds of their goal. In the context of Iraq or Afghanistan, every moment can count, he said.

"Time is big, and we have to consider everything — like the added weight of the passengers effect on the aircraft and wind speed — to make sure we're on time," he said.

In the back of Williams's aircraft, Pfc. Matt Jordan crewed his first air assault mission with the battalion. During air assaults, crew chiefs are responsible for watching their aircraft's distance to other aircraft, keeping the passengers safe, and monitoring the area for enemy activity.

"I thought it went pretty well," said Jordan. "This was my first time here, and one of my first times period. It's good to train like this."

Deployments: Army plans full implementation

12-month deployments.

The goal for the corps units is to eventually get to nine-month deployments.

Most augmentees — those with particular skills or those in low density skill sets and grades — will remain on 12-month deployments.

This change in policy, to be fully implemented by April 1, will affect Soldiers in all named operations, including Operation Enduring Freedom in Afghanistan, Operation Noble Guardian in Kosovo, and Multi-National Forces Sinai in Egypt.

Reserve and National Guard unit tour lengths will be the same as active duty — nine months. In their case, though, deployment and mobilization are two different issues. Even though these units may still be mobilized for 12 or more months, they will only spend nine months of that mobilization deployed.

It is clear to Army senior leadership that there are still issues tied to Guard and Reserve Forces that will need to be worked out, said Kageleiry.

Soldiers deploying under the change in policy will not be granted environmental morale leave — known as R&R — but commanders will retain the option of granting emergency leave and leave for special circumstances, according to Army regulations and local policy.

“This policy will enhance operational success by reducing the friction that comes with having 10 percent of a commander’s personnel being away on leave in the middle of a deployment,” Kageleiry said.

“Operational continuity is enhanced and risk to the individual Soldier is reduced by not having to move a warrior around on the battlefield to go on leave,” she said.

Also, Kageleiry said, the reduced deployment length could potentially improve Soldier and family quality of life while continuing to meet operational requirements, and is an important step in sustaining the all-volunteer force.

The goal of the policy is to reduce the amount of time Soldiers are deployed and provide more time for them to spend with their families, depending on the needs of the combatant commander and the potential of decrease operations. Units deployed before the policy takes effect, January 2012, will continue to have 12 month deployments.

Currently, deployment has been 12 months with a goal of 24 months at home.

However, the Army will continue to review how to increase the amount of time Soldiers spend at home depending on the amount of time they are deployed.

“We are constantly analyzing all range of policies to address the issues of the mission, Soldiers, and Families. We believe that the current operational environment allows us to adjust the deployment policy in a way that meets all mission requirements and better serve our Soldiers and Families,” Kageleiry said.

Training: Exercise helps prepare Soldiers for combat zone

The brigade’s 2nd General Support Aviation Battalion, 1st Aviation Regiment, trained with the same unit later that day. They did not conduct a full air assault, but held “cold load” training to familiarize the infantrymen with how to load and exit Chinook helicopters.

The battalion is scheduled to conduct a full version of the training next week. Additionally, the brigade’s crews will continue to train with 1st Bn., 28th Inf. Regt. as that battalion prepares for a deployment to Afghanistan next year.

Dozens of students cross the road on their way to the first day of school at Fort Rucker Elementary School Friday morning.

Safety top priority for new school year

BY ERIN MURRAY
Army Flier Staff Writer

Local children have returned to school, as Fort Rucker Elementary School and Fort Rucker Primary School are already one week into the school year that began Aug. 4, and Enterprise, Daleville and Ozark schools started classes Tuesday.

A new school year brings excitement for both students and educators, but there are also concerns about getting to and from school safely each day, according to Fort Rucker school officials.

Vicki Gilmer, Fort Rucker Elementary school principal, was thrilled to start the new school year, but had to send a letter to parents explaining that children could not be at school before 7:30 a.m., after having many students arrive at school as early as 7 a.m. on the first day.

"We have a little over 300 walkers and bike riders. The supervision of those children is really important. We have lots of eager kids on the first day of school," said Gilmer.

Aside from the early arrival by many of the children, the school year began smoothly at Fort Rucker Elementary School, with students excited about returning from summer break.

"It's been great. I really like my teachers this year," said sixth grader Faith Nicholson about her first week. "Everyone here is so nice."

Like many of her fellow classmates, Faith walks to school each morning, and she's never felt uncomfortable getting to school in the mornings.

She says that the crossing guard, who is also the school's librarian, makes her feel safe and is always friendly.

Gilmer and Peggy Contreras, Fort Rucker Community Police supervisor, both encouraged parents to be aware of the school's policies as well as communicate with their children and teachers about getting to and from school.

"Remind the children who do walk and ride bicycles to make sure they use the bike path and sidewalk," said Contreras, who also encouraged every parent to talk their children about what do to when something unexpected happens.

According to Contreras, Families should "always have a Plan B" in addition to the transportation plan they've made with their children.

Often, that plan includes notifying a neighbor or friend, giving them parents' contact information and making sure children know where to go in case of an emergency or unexpected event.

One event that Gilmer and Contreras urged parents to be prepared for was inclement weather. Gilmer said that each child should have a "rainy day plan" that includes finding alternate transportation.

She said this plan seems even more relevant after the string of severe afternoon storms over the past few weeks.

Contreras added that being aware of weather forecasts and making sure children wear weather-appropriate clothing will help in instances of bad weather.

Preparation, according to Contreras, is key in handling most school safety concerns.

Drivers should also be aware of the changes on roadways that come with a new school year, she said. Children will not only be walking or riding their bikes to school, but also waiting at bus stops for Fort Rucker and off base schools.

"Drivers should be vigilant and more cautious in the school zones," said Contreras, who feels that many drivers have developed a routine in the summer months that might need to be changed to accommodate children on the way to school.

Kim Kozel, School Support Services

liaison, also advises drivers to remember that busses will be running during the school week.

Kozel encourages drivers to "be patient for the first weeks of school," as children and bus drivers develop a schedule.

For children who are attending schools off post, Contreras reminds parents and teen drivers to be especially aware of the school zones when trying to get off base in the mornings.

Communication between Families, students and faculty is another way to ensure that children are safe at school, said Tracy Bergmann, a teacher at Fort Rucker Elementary school, who wants parents to know that their concerns can be brought to the school without hesitation.

"We have an open door policy, so if the parents have any questions, they can come into the school and ask. We want our parents to know that their children are safe and getting a quality education," she said.

Contreras was also eager to help parents this school year. "Any questions or concerns parents have, we're always available to assist them," she said.

For more information on back to school safety, call the Fort Rucker Community Police at 255-9399.

Club's Super Sign-Up helps spouses connect

BY ERIN MURRAY
Army Flier Staff Writer

Military spouses interested in making new friends, having fun and giving back to the community are invited to the Fort Rucker Community Spouses Club's annual Super Sign-Up Aug. 18 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at The Landing.

Providing opportunities for social, cultural, and creative pursuits is one of the FRCSC's primary goals, so this year's event will be different from the "drop-in" events held in the past, said Kim Roedl, FRCSC first vice president.

"We want spouses to plan to come and stay awhile so they can meet the club board members, find out more about the services and resources offered on Fort Rucker," she added.

Among the over 20 vendors and programs featured at the Super Sign Up are local companies; Fort Rucker's Thrift Shop; Fort Rucker Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation; and Protestant Women of the Chapel.

Along with these vendors, many different prizes will be available, including a spa makeover at Hair In Motion of Enterprise. Roedl was also excited about one event in particular, a vintage fashion show at 11 a.m. that will be presented by Enterprise retailer D Couture.

The 98th Army "Silver Wings" Band will also provide a musical backdrop of big band and swing music throughout the event.

The theme of this year's FRCSC Super Sign-Up is "We Can Do It...Together!" Roedl said the FRCSC will use the iconic World War II-era image of Rosie the Riveter to represent "the strength and versatility of the everyday military spouse, who can not only have a career, but also raise a Family," she said.

Darcy Lynch, FRCSC publicity chair, hopes that this year's theme will highlight her favorite aspect of membership.

"One of the things I don't think people realize about the club is what we do for the community. We get together each month and have our luncheons and network with other spouses on post, but while we do that, every month we take collections for organizations around the Wiregrass area," she said. Last year, over $25,000 raised by the club went to scholarships and grants for high school seniors, and continuing education in Fort Rucker and in the surrounding area.

FRCSC's bylaws state that one of the group's purposes is to "foster a spirit of community responsibility," which Roedl said begins at events like Super Sign-Up. "We hope this event reminds [spouses] of just how strong they are on a day-to-day basis. We also want to stress how important unity is in this lifestyle. We need each other."

Male Military spouses cope with added challenges, expert says

BY ELAINE SANCHEZ
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — Brian Campbell knew some challenges were in store for him after he left his Navy career to follow his military wife across the country.

But what he didn't count on were the additional challenges brought on not by his status as a military spouse, but by his gender.

"I was the first [nonmilitary] male spouse in that command ever," Campbell said in a podcast posted on Military OneSource.

Seeking social connections, Campbell looked for a spouses' club at their new installation, but instead, found a wives' club.

"I didn't fit into that organization very well," he said. "In a lot of instances, when you're talking about a spouses' organization, you're going to be the only male in the room."

Campbell eventually found the social interaction he craved by reaching out to men within his wife's command. These connections are vital, he said, and can "help build that social organization that can be lacking for you as a male spouse."

As a small segment of the overall military population, it can be difficult for service members' civilian husbands to figure out where they fit in, but building strong support networks can help to ward off feelings of isolation, said Scott Stanley, a research professor from the University of Denver and a military Family expert. According to the 2010 Military Family Life Project, just 5 percent of active duty service members' civilian spouses are male.

"While things have changed a lot in society and changed a lot in the military, it's still more typical for people to think of the male as the warrior," Stanley said in a Military OneSource podcast. "There's a lot to work out and a lot to figure out, and it's clear that it's difficult for some couples."

Stanley cited a study he's part of that's following Army couples over time to gauge how they're doing. Evidence shows that civilian men married to a service member are twice or a little more than twice as likely to divorce, he said.

"It's really clear even in the divorce data that this is something that's even trickier than what the average military couple is going through," he noted.

Part of the difficulty, Stanley explained, is people don't understand the male role when it's the female service member who is deployed. "A lot of these men are sort of swimming in a whole new part of the pool, if you will, without really knowing exactly where to go or what to do or what sort of supports to seek."

Compounding this, some men may find their spouse role clashes with their sense of who they are as a male, or their perception of who they're supposed to be. And in some cases, he said, men may be less inclined than women to seek support or to open up about their struggles.

"They may feel extra uncomfortable, at least some men might, because of the nature of this: 'Well, my wife is going off to war, and I'm here watching the kids,'" he said.

Military Families have access to a vast array of support programs, Stanley noted, however, many are focused on connecting with the service members' wives.

"You have all these support systems where it's really easy for the wife of a service member to walk in the room, immediately see a lot of other people like her, and start connecting in an environment that's been created to be female friendly," he said.

While service members' husbands may feel out of place in these settings, they still can create a strong support network and social connections. Stanley suggested they develop friendships with other couples who have the same dynamic. That way, he said, they'll gain a friend with whom they can "blow off steam," as well as someone who can relate to their complaints and concerns.

Chaplains and counselors, he added, are other avenues of emotional support. People can connect with a counselor through the TRICARE military health care system or through their installation's Army Community Service. People who live away from an installation can call Military OneSource at 1-800-342-9647 to connect with a counselor.

Campbell advised his fellow male spouses to look into installation-sponsored trips or to find other men who share the same interests, such as bike riding or chess. The local community also can be a great source of support, he added.

"If you can find an organization, a club, a church, a civic group, something in the local area that you can feel a part of, that's what you need to do," he said. "That's what's important: feeling like you belong in the community."

While male spouses may feel isolated at times, Stanley noted, they're not alone. "They may or may not be talking about it with other guys, but there are a lot of men out there who are going through this and feeling it," he said.

"But you are really in this," he added, "so you have to kind of figure out what's going to work for you to cope with this in the best way you can at this time, because that's going to be the best thing for your marriage, best thing for your family and the best thing for you down the line."

Interstate Compact eases children’s school transitions

BY ELAINE SANCHEZ
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — An interstate compact is spurring sweeping improvements to the school transition process for military parents and their children, while also making inroads into addressing parents’ education-related concerns, a Defense Department official said.

The Interstate Compact on Educational Opportunity for Military Children affects everything from school enrollment and eligibility to course placement and graduation, explained Ed Kringer, director of state liaison and educational opportunity for the Pentagon’s office of military community and family policy. Since its inception in 2006, 39 states have adopted the compact, ensuring inclusion of nearly 90 percent of military children and teens.

The Defense Department developed the compact in coordination with the Council of State Governments’ National Center for Interstate Compacts in an attempt to counter many of the common education challenges military families face, he said.

“All parents want good education for their children; they want them to have a chance to succeed,” Kringer said. “In many cases, many [military] parents have felt there are roadblocks – unintentional roadblocks – but roadblocks put in the way of their children.”

A delay in records transfer has been an ongoing concern, he noted, with some schools taking weeks, or months, to ship records to another state. This delay can result in a delay in course or program placement. Through the compact, however, schools are required to ship records within 10 days.

The compact also looks out for students in honors programs, Kringer said. In the past, school officials have barred students from enrolling in honors programs until their qualifications could be verified. Meanwhile, they’ve lost a semester or more of participation in that program.

“If you’re transferring schools every couple of years and every couple of years you’re losing that advanced training, that can have a serious impact,” he said.

The compact works to avoid these education gaps by requiring the gaining school to presume students are qualified for an honors program if they were in a similar program in another school and there’s space in the gaining program, Kringer explained. The students still can be tested, but meanwhile, they’re not losing valuable learning time.

JAGM
JOINT AIR-TO-GROUND MISSILE

TWO PROVEN PARTNERS.
ONE UNBEATABLE
SYSTEM
SOLUTION.

Raytheon and Boeing have teamed to offer the U.S. Army, U.S. Navy and U.S. Marine Corps the most affordable, reliable and lowest-risk solution for the Joint Air-to-Ground Missile (JAGM) requirement. Combining combat-proven, best-in-class technologies backed by unmatched aircraft integration capabilities, JAGM achieves the highest levels of performance even in the harshest environments — all while delivering a lower logistics burden and lower total lifecycle costs. For superior range, accuracy and lethality against moving and stationary targets, there is only one choice: the Raytheon/Boeing JAGM solution.

Civilian Fitness Program aims for ‘whole health’

BY RUSSELL SELLERS
Army Flier Staff Writer

Being in shape and living a healthy life-style isn't just for Soldiers at Fort Rucker, according to the organizers of the Civilian Fitness Program.

The purpose of the program is to help those with less active jobs put more physical activity in their lives during their work day, said Denece Clayborne, Lyster Army Health Clinic community health nurse and program organizer.

"The program is beneficial to both the Army and civilians because it aims to help keep the civilian work force healthy," she said. "By having healthier employees, it keeps the mission going smoothly. You have less sickness and fewer people getting injured if they are in better physical condition."

The program is also aimed at other forms of health, not just physical activity, she added.

"We try to cover spiritual wellness, eating healthy and the whole health picture," she said. "Army Regulation 600-63 addresses physical health of both Soldiers and civilians, and we're using that as a base for designing the program."

CVP is a six-month event that requires three hours per week of on-the-clock exercise for participants, with supervisor permission. It will also include health and wellness assessments, educational brown bag lunches with guest speakers, fitness center guided tours and more, Clayborne said.

One of the long-term goals of the program is to make sure those who participate stick with the exercising and eating healthy after the six months is over, Clayborne added.

"Some folks aren't familiar with the resources available to them on this post and this will help them get to know them," she said. "We hope this encourages them to spend more time with the gyms and the walking trails and other physical activities available to them here. This post does a very good job of providing Soldiers and civilians with exercise options."

One advantage civilians will have here that they might not get elsewhere is access to a trainer who can help them get used to equipment if they've never used it, or help them come up with an exercise routine that works for them, said Kristi Fink, Fortenberry-Colton Physical Fitness Facility fitness program coordinator.

ity fitness program coordinator.

"We have lots of different equipment at both facilities on post, so they should be able to find just about anything they might need," she said. "Our trainers are available to show them how to use the machines. I wouldn't suggest someone who's brand new to working out to go to free weights, but if they establish a routine, then trainers might be able to help get them started."

Another issue Fink said people should watch out for is staying hydrated during workouts.

"Most people should work out indoors during these hotter months," she said. "Some people do prefer to work out outside, but they should try to utilize the cooler parts of the day like the mornings or late afternoons and early evenings."

For those who might be intimidated by the fitness facilities, Fink said she and her staff are there to help.

"That's where our trainers can really help get them used to being here and using the equipment," she said. "New people should also consider bringing a friend with them. It makes working out a lot easier if you have someone there with you. Once you've been here a little while and gotten used to the equipment and people, it really isn't a big deal."

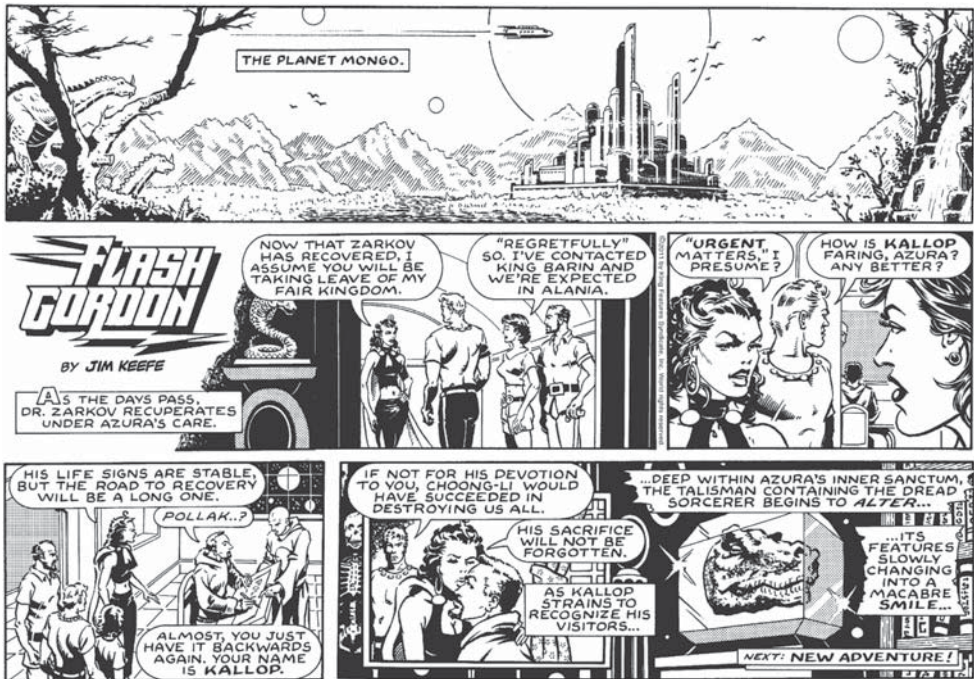

Fink said she participated in the program over a year ago and it helped her to develop some good workout habits and made her enjoy doing it even more.

"It's a lot of fun," she said. "I think anybody who's thinking about trying it should give it a shot. Once you get into the habit of doing it, you don't want to stop."

Participants must preregister before Sept. 6. The first meeting is Sept. 9.

To register for the program, visit Bldg. 5700, Rm. 230 or call 255-9908, Mondays-Fridays from 7:30 a.m. to 4:15 p.m.

IIRKOEN

ARE YOU A SHOE-IN TO SOLVE THIS ONE?

Hidden in the above frame is a famous old saying. You can find it by reading every other letter as you go around it clockwise. The trick is finding the right first letter.

A SENSITIVE STUMPER! Replace the letters on our sun worshiper's chest with the digits 0, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 and 9, so that you will have a correct addition problem. The same letters get the same digits. Try to get the highest total possible.

Our answer: T=0, B=2, L=3, M=4, E=5, O=6, S=7, U=8, N=9. P.S. (9820) + 734 = 10554.

PUZZLES IN PARADISE! Pictured below are two puzzle grids to fill in. Hints are given for each word. The words in Grid A contain the same letters as the corresponding words in Grid B.

1. A military base.
2. A sudden attack.
3. A tasty food store.
4. Great Dutch cheese.

1. Beats out another.
2. What the desert is.
3. Gave false testimony.
4. Produced by constructing.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
