Raiders blitz for Sullivan Cup

Maj. Pete Bogart
1ABCT Public Affairs

CAMP HUMPHREYS, Korea – Tankers from the 1st Armored Brigade Combat Team, 3rd Infantry Division are traveling back from the Republic of Korea to compete in the Sullivan Cup competition at Fort Benning, Georgia from April 30 to May 4.

The crew from Blitz Company – Company B, 3rd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment, was selected from 87 tank crews to represent the Raider Brigade. currently deployed to Korea, supporting the 2nd Infantry Division/ROK-U.S. Combined Division.

The tank commander, Staff Sgt. Travis Connelly, has served in the Army for more than seven years and is competing in the Sullivan Cup for the first time. Connelly, who is a Vernon, New Jersey native, said his favorite part of being a tank commander has nothing to do with the M1 Abrams tank itself.

“I love leadership and having a greater sphere of influence to facilitate growth in my section,” said Connelly. “Nothing is more satisfying to me than empowering Soldiers and junior NCOs to strive for greatness and not settle for average in all aspect of their lives.”

The Sullivan Cup is held every other year and is named after retired Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan. Sullivan was commissioned as an armor officer and commanded numerous armor formations throughout his 36 years of service, which culminated as the 32nd Chief of Staff.

Crews from across the Army, the Marine Corps, and international militaries travel to Fort Benning to test their physical and mental prowess in maneuver, maintenance, and gunnery skills during the competition.

Command Sgt. Major Alan Hummel, the U.S. Army Armor School senior enlisted leader, stressed the importance of the non-commissioned officer in a welcome letter to competitors.

“The key to success for the winning crew will be the training provided at their home station by their unit's master gunners and tank commanders,” Hummel said.

“The tank commanders, primarily junior NCOs, are overall responsible for training each crewmember, ensuring proficiency in their assigned position and cross-training their crewmembers in other positions,” Hummel added.

Review the Stewart Facebook Town hall

Jeff Whitten
Coastal Courier

Have questions about what's happening on post or with the 3rd Infantry Division?

Try asking them on Facebook. Seriously.

Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield, with the support of the 3rd ID, hosted a live “town hall” yesterday, on its social media site at www.facebook.com/FortStewartHunterArmyAirfield.

Hosted by the garrison command, the event included updates on 3rd ID redeployment, information about the Month of the Military Child, National Child Abuse Awareness Month, Substance Abuse Awareness Month and the Army's Exceptional Family Member Program.

The site opened Sunday afternoon for questions and comments. It addressed those concerns during the one hour event, according to Fort Stewart spokesman Kevin Larson, adding installation representatives will continue to follow-up on questions throughout the week.

Officials have offered some encouragement to get the ball rolling.

Prizes for the “first on-topic question and the question with the most positive reactions were awarded by the installation's FMWR, the page said. FMWR is the acronym for the Army's Family Morale, Welfare and Recreation programs.

The stage set, questions began coming in Tuesday afternoon ranging from how deployment impacted a Soldier's orders to another duty station, to suggestions on how to reduce traffic congestion on certain roads or at gates. Posts about an abandoned vehicle, upcoming deployments and soldiers leaving pets behind were also addressed.

Several of the posts drew early responses from garrison officials, including one regarding the abandoned vehicle.

“The vehicle in question has been identified, tagged as an abandoned vehicle and should be towed tomorrow. Please let me know if this vehicle is still there on Wednesday,” it said.

COMMUNITY & LEISURE

DPTMS Range Control representatives Thomas Hollis and Mike Etheridge, explain range operations, safety, and the land management to attendees of the 2018 Spring Historic tour, April 5, at Fort Stewart's observation point four.

Spring tour revisits history at Stewart

Pat Young
Fort Stewart Public Affairs

More than 30 community members revisited the past, April 5, as the Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield Historic Communities Council hosted its annual Spring historic site and cemetery tour.

The visit included stops at Taylors Creek Campground, Brannen, DeLoach, Bethany and Wells cemeteries.

The Directorate of Public Works Cultural Resources archeologist Brian Greer explained the installation maintains nearly 60 active cemeteries and historic sites on the installation; which are the few remaining historic vestiges of an earlier time.

Greer referenced a pamphlet the DPW Environmental Division prepared for the tour, explaining about the areas earlier history.

"A few of the early camp meetings occurred near the little Canoochee Causeway on Sunbury Road," Greer explained to attendees about Taylors Creek camp meetings; which were once held on the first site visited. The pamphlet said after 1819, the annual event continually took place at the Taylors Creek campground.

"The square shaped campground lay in a grove of hickory and oak trees and contained a centralized red tile covered tabernacle building," he said.

With the exception of the Glisson Pond mill and store in Evans County (established in 1914), the other buildings that belonged to the area were removed.

Dina McKain, Fort Stewart community relations officer explained the lands were purchased by Congress to create Camp Stewart in 1940-1941 to help prepare the U.S. for entry into World War II, as an anti-aircraft defense training facility, included areas that were inhabitable by settlers dating back to the 1760's, with the Taylors Creek community being established around 1790.

An added stop to the site, community members were provided a briefing at one of the installation's observation posts overlooking the artillery impact zone. Range control officers Mike Etheridge and Thomas Hollis, from the installation's Directorate of Plans, Training, Mobilization and Security, Range Control Division, explained how the land was used to help train Soldiers, and the installation's efforts to ensure the installation remained good stewards of the environment, so training could remain effective well into the future.

Several of the attendees were familiar with the land, as they themselves were former residents of the area. Author, historian and vice president of the Cemetery Council, Wyman with his wife Faye helped draw attention to specific details in each area the tour visited.

The installation supports two historic cemetery tours every year – in April and early November. Information about these visits and other activities are shared on the Fort Stewart Facebook site at <https://www.facebook.com/FortStewartHunterArmyAirfield/>.

IMCOM establishes culture of service

Adriana King
IMCOM Headquarters

The Installation Management Command's Service Culture Campaign focuses on caring and engaged leadership, seen as key to developing highly effective teams capable of supporting installation senior commanders and Army readiness requirements.

Lt. Gen. Kenneth R. Dahl, IMCOM Commanding General, launched the Service Culture Campaign in April 2017, with the basic premise that when personnel feel valued and respected for the work they do, are properly trained, and live the Army values, they in turn pass on a positive attitude to their coworkers and customers.

IMCOM's Service Culture emphasizes leader and workforce engagement by providing new command team members with an impactful on-boarding program, employee recognition, communication, establishing a sense of pride in serving within IMCOM, and standardized customer service training implemented garrison wide. These foundations help support Soldiers and their Families in their contributions to the nation.

Alexandra Smith, plans specialist in the plans, analysis and integration office at Fort Huachuca, said, "If you treat your personnel with dignity and respect, making them feel like part of the organization, empowering them, and providing opportunities for training and succession planning, a feeling of job satisfaction most definitely will show in all interactions with internal and external customers."

Training the Trainer

As IMCOM's enterprise approach to standardized customer service training, OPEX, or Service Culture training as it is commonly referred to, develops participants' knowledge, skills and values from experiences, rather than lectures in a traditional academic setting.

From its roots within IMCOM's G9 Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation program, OPEX has expanded to all members of the command's workforce.

To accomplish this, IMCOM's College of Installation Management (CIM) instituted a train-the-trainer program in 2016 to prepare Appropriated Fund (APF) professionals to serve as OPEX facilitators/trainers. The program certifies trainers in OPEX and OPEX for Leaders. The course design helps the entire workforce learn about the Service Culture concepts and principles, and places a special emphasis on leader and supervisor responsibility to engage with their most valuable asset, their employees. To date, the CIM has trained 80 high-performing APF OPEX facilitators from all IMCOM garrisons.

"This class surprised a lot of people," said Debonie Wagener, management Analyst at Rock Island Arsenal. "Participants liked the level of engagement from the activities, working in small groups, role playing and the message itself."

Richard Martinez, chief of the administrative services division at White Sands Missile Range, said opinions about the program changed as soon as it was presented.

"In the beginning, garrison personnel said, 'Not another training!'"

But as the first few OPEX sessions took place, "Employees told their coworkers that OPEX was different, and it wasn't death by PowerPoint," Martinez said. "It was described as a fun, interactive learning experience. From the promotion of OPEX, classes began to have an impact on the garrison leadership and employees."

OPEX facilitators are serving as garrison lead trainers to continue program delivery to all garrison staff members outside FMWR. In the long term, they will facilitate OPEX as part of the garrisons' onboarding programs for new team members and will provide shorter annual refresher training to maintain the program's momentum and keep IMCOM professionals focused on the importance of service excellence.

In its first year, IMCOM's customer service training has brought personal leadership to the forefront. Now integrated into the command, OPEX has reached more than 15,000 installation management professionals in 80 locations worldwide.

"I attribute this success to all the hard work that was done up front, our patience to coordinate with the garrisons and incorporate their feedback, and the excellent instruction of the facilitators," Dahl said.

Next Gen: Sustainment

Garrisons that have delivered OPEX to most of their workforce now are starting OPEX refresher training. To address projected facilitator turnover and to provide opportunities for other members of the team to maintain Service Culture momentum, the CIM will be offering OPEX Train-the-Trainer courses in FY2018 and beyond. In FY2019, IMCOM will conduct a second command-wide customer Service Culture survey to re-evaluate, from team members' perspectives, how IMCOM is doing in establishing the conditions needed for a culture of service excellence.

Creating culture of intervention, prevention

Special to the Frontline

In the Army, Soldiers and leaders spend a lot of time together during field exercises, combat training center rotations, deployments and temporary duty missions. The time spent together can create a tight-knit unit, but it's important each person is treated with dignity and respect.

The tight-knit group mantra should not be a mechanism that allows inappropriate behavior to slowly build varying levels of sexual harassment and potentially sexual assault.

Each April, civilian and military communities observe Sexual Assault Awareness and Prevention Month and shines a light on a continuing problem, while highlighting available resources and develop/provide primary prevention initiatives.

The best way leaders and Soldiers can prevent sexual harassment and sexual assault is by encouraging a culture of intervention and prevention within their unit.

A culture of intervention and prevention aids in unit readiness and builds trust amongst leaders and Soldiers and can be achieved when leaders go beyond the annual training.

It is vital that leaders and Soldiers speak up and say something immediately when there is sexual harassment happening in their ranks. Tolerating inappropriate behavior and sexual harassment creates division within a unit and degrades readiness Focused, engaged leadership, where leaders know their Soldiers and develop relationships with them creates awareness of potential high-risk behavior.

Understanding and working to mitigate these high risk behaviors is a key element to preventing sexual harassment and assault.

Strong bonds and relationships in a unit make early intervention more likely and also make Soldiers less likely to engage in inappropriate behavior.

It is important for Soldiers to know their team members care about them. This builds trust in the unit and goes a long way in preventing sexual assault and sexual harassment.

The Army SHARP Program Office has piloted a perception program, Mind's Eye 2, and combines multiple levels of prevention with bystander intervention techniques, and cognitive/behavioral process learning.

The training is discussion-based through practical exercises. The pilot program has been conducted at Fort Stewart this year and Soldiers to the 3rd Infantry Division have received the training.

Soldiers participating in ME2 as facilitators were chosen based on their level of influence on other Soldiers, regardless of rank. Influencers receive a skill sets needed to identify, prevent, and eliminate problematic behaviors.

The training provides leaders, at all levels, with a foundation to engage in meaningful dialogue, recognize and reflect on personal biases and develop the confidence needed to build a climate of dignity and respect.

The goal is to provide another tool for intervention and prevention by focusing on the identification of problematic behaviors.

Call the Fort Stewart SHARP Hotline at 912 271-9958 or the DoD Safe Helpline at 877 995-5247 24/7numbers to report sexual assault or sexual harassment.

Leaders who would like assistance in SHARP training from subject-matter experts contact Angela Pate, SHARP Program Manager, by e-mail angela.d.pate.civ@mail.mil. Mosquito surveillance now available

Now that it is springtime, USA MEDDAC Environmental Health will be conducting weekly mosquito surveillance on HAAF and FSGA. Trapped mosquitoes will be used to determine if mosquito control is needed (via DPW) and tested for disease causative agents (Chikungunya, Dengue, Eastern Equine Encephalitis, West Nile, & Zika). Feel free to request that we set up a trap near you, as we make our rounds: <https://www.surveymonkey.com/r/G3NTRKF>

TRICARE launches in Japan, South Korea

Military Health System Nurse Advice Line Launches in Japan and South Korea The Military Health System Nurse Advice Line (MHS NAL), a service available to TRICARE beneficiaries living in the U.S. and Europe since 2014, is now available to those living in Japan and South Korea. TRICARE coverage after retirement

Retiring from active duty, whether a medical retirement or a regular retirement, is a significant life event. You should know before you retire which TRICARE programs best suit your and your family's needs. Once you retire, you'll only have 90 days from your retirement date to enroll in a TRICARE plan to continue TRICARE coverage. During the time without selection of plan coverage (TRICARE Prime or TRICARE Select) you will be eligible in DEERS as "Direct Care". This term only means "access to use the Military Healthcare System (MHS)", but with limitations. "Direct Care" should never be considered as insurance. Sustainment operates at Camp Arena

Spc. Elizabeth White
3rd Sustainment Brigade

BAGRAM AIRFIELD, Afghanistan - On a small, quiet base in western Afghanistan sits Camp Arena. Intermingled between government buildings, cafes and monuments, troops from all over the world work together in this country to accomplish a common goal.

The 3rd Infantry Division Resolute Support Sustainment Brigade provides the primary sustainment support for the Combined Joint Operations Area - Afghanistan, but the unit wouldn't be able to reach its full potential without the cooperation of coalition forces spread throughout the country. Even at the Italian-run Camp Arena, several countries are represented, including Lithuania, Albania, Slovenia, Ukraine and U.S. military, and this doesn't even begin to cover the Department of Defense agents, contractors or civilians.

The U.S. Forces - Afghanistan Sustainment Support Team at Camp Arena ensures that base life operations run smoothly. The team controls the flow of food, personnel and equipment through the base. They also work with coalition forces to provide any sustainment assistance that partners may need.

"It is a joint mission here," says U.S. Army Capt. Stephanie Opheim, the 3rd Inf. Div. RSSB liaison officer to Train, Advise, Assist Command - West. "We can provide support for anything that coalition or U.S. forces need that isn't provided by the Italians."

Opheim works alongside the TAAC-W Sustainment Support team. The shop works as both the logistics management and support operations section and use the USFOR-A SST fuelers for train, advise and assist missions.

SST demonstrates how diverse the arena teams can be. It consists of Slovenian, Lithuanian, Albanian and Italian military members.

"We exchange experiences and learn from different cultures to find solutions," said Albanian Army Capt. Vojsava Kuçuku, the logistics operations planner for the TAAC-W Sustainment Support team. "It is a combined operation for building and executing an operation plan."

"You have to know what you're briefing," said Opheim. "If you can't explain it simply then it also shows you don't know the concept you are briefing."

"In the beginning it was challenging, we didn't know how to interact and had different experiences with styles of leadership," said Kuçuku. "We now have a friendly environment despite the language differences and we are more productive as a team."

"It's interesting to learn about other cultures and see how the rest of the world views us," said Opheim. "We have more similarities than you think."

Capt. Stephanie Opheim, the 3rd ID RSSB liaison officer to Train, Advise, Assist Command - West, discusses personnel and cargo movement with Slovenian Army Master Sgt. Mirko Mežan, the head of movement operations and planning for TAAC-W, at Camp Arena, Afghanistan March 19. RSSB Soldiers and coalition partners work together all across the Combined Joint Operations Area - Afghanistan to ensure sustainment operations can function at the highest potential.

Sustainers simplifying slingload for Soldiers

Spc. Elizabeth White
3rd Inf. Div. RSSB

BAGRAM AIRFIELD, Afghanistan - Soldiers with the 3rd Infantry Division Resolute Support Sustainment Brigade conducted a slingload class Apr. 2-3.

The RSSB slingload team showed students proper inspection and rigging procedures and helped them rig up cargo to be transported throughout the Combined Joint Operations Area - Afghanistan.

Slingload consists of securing cargo to helicopters, either with nets or sling legs attached to the containers themselves. The Soldiers inspect the nets and sling legs before securing any cargo. They ensure there are no tears that could result in a broken net and lost load.

Over the course of two days, students learned all of aspects of slingload operations. The first day consisted of classroom training, filling out paperwork and going through regulations. The second day of class was hands-on training. The students were able to rig cargo loads at the Bagram Slingload Yard.

"We are training incoming personnel just getting into theater on sling load operations," said Spc. John Owens, a slingload team instructor with the 3rd ID. RSSB. "We're doing inspections of the equipment we have and how to properly slingload cargo, basically, everything needed to have a successful day at slingload."

Soldiers from various forward operating bases and units came to Bagram to participate in the training. Operations are limited at small, outlying bases, but with this class, they can increase capabilities of their location.

"I'm taking this class to better serve my unit," said Pvt. Bradley Cooper, an ammunition specialist with the 704th Brigade Support Battalion, 2nd Infantry Brigade Combat Team, 4th Infantry Division. "We can get more supplies in and operations will go smoother."

With choppers flying overhead, 60-pound hooks swinging underneath them, and thousands of pounds of cargo that could potentially come crashing down, slingloading can be a dangerous job for untrained individuals.

The students were able to get hands-on and secure cargo to helicopters.

"My heart shook a little bit the first time, but afterwards it was like a roller coaster. It was really fun," said Cooper. "People talk about it but when you're actually doing it it's a different experience."

"For the incoming personnel, I hope it influences them to think about everything that we've been showing them," Owens said. "When the time comes, hopefully our teachings will pass down, so they will not have any problems when it comes to them doing their own loads by themselves."

Sgt. Elizabeth White

For two days, the Soldiers learned all aspects of what makes a successful slingload operation, from inspecting equipment to rigging up cargo for transport.

Pfc. Thomas Deegan of Chicago, Illinois, has been in the Army for 17 months and is on his first overseas tour in Korea. He enjoys the camaraderie of life as a tanker.

"Being a tank driver for my crew enables me to be a part of a team," said Deegan. "Everyone on the tank has a role and mine is to drive the 70 ton beast."

The competition will feature 16 to 18 teams and will last five days. Crews will be evaluated on physical fitness, problem solving, and tactical and precision gunnery skills to identify the top tank crew.

U.S. Army tactics, techniques and procedures are used as the foundational reference to ensure the competition is conducted with the highest of standards.

For more information on the competition, go to <http://www.benning.army.mil/armor/sullivan>.

3rd Sustainment Brigade

BAGRAM AIRFIELD, Afghanistan - Soldiers of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, Special Troops Battalion, 3rd Infantry Division Resolute Support Sustainment Brigade, executed a base defense exercise at their compound on Bagram Airfield, Afghanistan, Mar. 29. The Soldiers trained on several key tasks, such as treating and evacuating casualties, establishing observation posts and executing troop leading procedures. "In total, we trained on 47 individual tasks and 50 battle drills," said Capt. Cory Sullivan, the HHC commander supervising the entire event. Several senior Soldiers with previous combat experience oversaw the planning of the exercise and evaluated troops during, ensuring they were performing their tasks correctly and to standard. Several teams of Soldiers set up observation posts on top of the buildings on the compound, while other teams patrolled the entry points and reacted to simulated attacks. They treated and evacuated casualties, and sent reports via radio to their leaders. The exercise culminated with a car bomb attack on the front gate. "I was very excited with the motivation level that everyone put into it," said Sullivan. "We had no blanks to fire, no artillery simulators, no smoke; we basically had to build the scenario in people's heads."

Sullivan said this exercise is the first big step in preparing for a large-scale live-fire exercise early next year, at the unit's home station of Fort Stewart. He said even though these Soldiers are already deployed, it's important that they keep training on their basic Soldier skills to prepare for whatever their next mission will be. "We're going to be much better prepared to take on sustainment operations anywhere in the world because we took the time to train now," he said.

Logistics Soldiers' skills put to action in live fire exercise

Sp. Noelle Wiehe
50th Public Affairs Detachment

Soldiers with the 3rd Sustainment Brigade Special Troops Battalion honed in on their basic Soldiering skills as they executed a base-defense live fire exercises April 3-5, at Fort Stewart. The 258th Movement Control Team, the 90th Human Resources Company and the 274th Movement Control Team participated in the exercise. "The exercise was held in conjunction with Soldiers from the different units to simulate a tactical environment with multiple units operating collectively to achieve the same mission, similar to what they may see on a deployment," 2nd Lt. Evan Farlow, platoon leader, 258th MCT said. The Soldiers gained knowledge and experience in the concept of unit area defense and worked toward proficiency in those collective tasks to meet the mission-essential task, Farlow said. Pulling the warrior tasks and individual Soldier tasks helps us achieve the main goal of base defense, Farlow said. The 3rd SB is responsible for providing logistical support to the 3rd Infantry Division, but while deployed, they take conduct the unit area defense mission, said Maj. Scott Wellman, rear detachment commander to the Special Troops Battalion. "The Special Troops Battalion is really a conglomerate of very specific sustainment companies. Every company has their own function," Wellman said. "Usually a lot of garrison support missions, so we're doing that, but every one of us has a unit defense METL task." Soldiers participating in the exercises conducted base defense task such as security, reacting to enemy contact, engaging enemy targets from secure tower positions, reacting to a chemical/biological attack and first aid. "We always train for events where we have to defend ourselves," Wellman said. Spc. Charon White, 258th MCT, said he found value in learning the safety parameters of base defense. "I felt very prepared and highly motivated, HOOAH," White said. "The more training you get, the better Soldier you will be."

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

Hitting delete to negativity, more

Maj. Drew Billingsley
63 ESB Chaplain

I deleted Facebook. I held down the icon on my phone, waited until they all started to jiggle, and firmly pressed the "X" to watch the alluring blue "F" disappear. I was immediately awash in the strange cocktail of relief and satisfaction followed by regret, and anxiety. How will I know that my friend who I have not talked to in 12 years went to a baseball game last night? How will I know what my cousin ate for lunch today? Where will I go when I want to debate with people (the online equivalent of slamming my hand in a drawer) whom I do not even know about things that in the past were saved for serious discussion among personal friends? Most importantly, where will I focus my attention when my wife is talking to me or my kids are trying to show me something? Alas, all of those things are gone in the press of a small black "X."

Please do not misunderstand me: Facebook is not the problem. Facebook is the manifestation of many problems that have come to fruition in our culture. My decision to delete Facebook was based on two key factors. First of all, I realized the ratio of time spent on Facebook that was rewarding versus the time spent in the spectrum that includes frustration, anger, aggravation, annoyance, and even sometimes sadness was not good. No matter how many pictures of someone's cute dog are on my feed, it only takes one narrow, ignorant, racist, sexist, or just mean comment to change the entire experience.

Facebook has become our own platform for confirmation bias. Basically, this means that I can use Facebook to support the beliefs that I already have while ignoring any information or belief that contradicts mine. It is impossible to have constructive discussion or debate in a medium that allows anonymity, or at the very least, rudeness without having to say it to my face. I came to the conclusion that Facebook spent more time making me frustrated or sad than it did making my life better. So it needed to go.

A second major contributing factor in my decision was the realization that, many times, I was neglecting the relationship with a person in the same room in an attempt to keep up with people with whom I have very little actual connection. I began to be more aware of how many times I was scanning Facebook while my wife was talking, or while my kids were talking or showing me something.

I noticed that in public places we no longer interact with the people or the world around us. People in a restaurant ignoring the person at the same table, people in the waiting room at the doctor who never look up from the phone, and even Soldiers waiting (by the way, we do a lot of that in the Army) in complete silence while they all gawked at phones.

I stress again, the problem is not Facebook. The problem is that we have brought things into our lives that allow us to get lost in our own world to the detriment of both our personal happiness and the real relationships around us. I have now gone two weeks without Facebook (I feel like I should carry a chip in my pocket). I have not regretted it. The quality of the time that my family receives is much better. I also spend less time frustrated about something that someone said about something that in no way effects my day-to-day life.

Is there something in your life that is keeping you from developing and building relationships with the people around you? Is there something in your life that contributes more negative than positive? If so, simply press the "X."

Safety Spotlight

Georgia's super speeder law explained

Richard W. Rudolph
AFS Bn Safety Office
Commentary

How many time have you been on a road or an interstate highway such as I-95, when a vehicle or a couple of vehicles pass you, and it seems as if they were moving at supersonic speed? Some motorists will even joke that the speed limit for I-95 is 95 mph. Well, as of January 1, 2010, in the state of Georgia; there is the super speeder law, also known as Georgia's House Bill 160 (HB160). Georgia defined a super speeder as speeding at 75 miles-per-hour or more on a two-lane road or 85 mph and above on any street or highway within the state. The law increased the cost of a fine. By how much, you ask? In addition to the regular fines and fees paid to the jurisdiction where the speeding offense occurred; this new law adds a super speeder state fee of $200. Failure to pay the 'Super Speeder' fee results in the addition of a $50 fee to the total amount due and the suspension of the offender's driving privileges and license. Separately, Georgia intends on putting the monies collected to good use. Of course, fees collected under the super speeder law will be used to help fund Georgia's trauma care hospital system, where approximately sixty-percent of all trauma-care-patients from crash-related incidents. This fund will help pay for the hospital beds where crash-victims are being treated. It is imperative drivers understand signs are posted with safety in mind. Any time motorists drive at illegal speeds, they are putting themselves, their passengers and third-party motorists or pedestrians at tremendous risk. In crashes, extreme kinetic forces are at work. The crash forces double on impact with every ten mph increase in speed above 50 mph. Speed reduces the amount of available time needed to avoid a crash. Please inform the drivers in your family, especially the recently licensed drivers. Not only are you helping them adhere to the law; you are keeping them safe! For more on the super speeders law and other laws on Georgia driving go to www.gahighwaysafety.org.

U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Command is seeking first lieutenants, captains

Special to the Frontline

QUANTICO, VA - The U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Command is seeking first lieutenants and captains, from all military occupational specialties, interested in becoming CID Special Agents to submit applications to transition to a CID Special Agent warrant officer, MOS 311A. MILPER Message Number 18-054, Officer Application Requirements for Appointment to CID Warrant Officer (MOS 311A), outlines the specifics of the program. "Applications will be accepted through May 18, 2018," said Lisa Dodd, chief of Special Agent Accessions Branch. "Approved applications will be considered by the warrant officer accession board which convenes in July 2018, so qualified applicants are encouraged to visit the closest regular Army CID office to start the process as soon as possible. Please keep in mind that one does not have to have a police background- it's not a requirement to qualify and be accepted into this specialized program. A complete list of CID offices can be found www.cid.army.mil. In addition to the CID Agent application, qualified officers must also prepare a warrant officer application. The warrant officer application, and the CID application and packet submission checklist are available at your local CID office. The warrant officer application requirements, packet submission checklist, and Warrant Officer Recruiting Team points of contact are located on the U.S. Army Recruiting Command website at <http://www.USAREC.army.mil/hq/warrant/>. For more information, visit www.gowarrantnow.com or contact the Warrant Officer Recruiting Team at usarmy.knox.usarec.mbx.9sbnwo-team-questions@mail.mil. As CID Special Agent warrant officers are subject matter experts and leaders who manage all aspects of felony criminal investigations in all operational environments. They plan, organize and supervise criminal investigations, protective services and rule-of-law operations. According to senior CID leadership, the Commissioned Officer to Warrant Officer Program is open to all specialties. It's a unique model because company grade officers have a great deal of leadership training early in their career versus a great depth of technical training and our warrant officers have an extensive amount of technical proficiency. This blend between the commissioned and warrant officers is viewed as synergistic because those junior agents can share lessons of both leadership and technical work with the newly transitioned officers. This is the third consecutive year this particular recruiting program has been offered. Prior to that, transitions were on a case-by-case basis. "The officers that choose to go down the warrant officer path are bringing a wealth of knowledge and experience to the criminal investigation table, when coupling specialty performance differences between the commissioned and warrant officer ranks," said Chief Warrant Officer 5 Edgar Collins, CID's command chief warrant officer. "They are already bringing the leadership traits and skills that are learned as an officer, and they will be applying them once they are a warrant officer." Dodd added that qualified officers who are interested in becoming CID special agents are encouraged to contact the CID Special Agent Accessions Branch for specific details at USArmy.Join-CID@mail.mil. They can also contact the nearest CID office, where personnel can help answer questions about the special agent program. Those selected for appointment will be scheduled to attend the CID Special Agent Course at Fort Leonard Wood, Missouri, and the MOS 311A Warrant Officer Basic Course. Acceptance into the CID program is contingent upon successful completion of all training and a favorable Single Scope Background Investigation. Appointment to warrant officer incurs a six year active duty obligation.

Baby boot camp for dads

According to a recent survey, 86 percent of dads spend more time with their children today than their fathers did with them. However, seven out of 10 people also reported that they could use tips on how to be a better parent. The smallest moments can have the biggest impact on a child's life. Take time to be a dad today. MCOM

OPEX is one of the foundations in the larger Service Culture framework. Progress reports show that IMCOM garrisons are embracing all pillars of the Service Culture Campaign because they resonate with leader and employee beliefs, and they reinforce and revitalize existing programs.

"Leadership's buy-in has created an atmosphere that truly supports the employee, and employees are being energized to improve the community," said Michael Noyes, Army substance abuse program manager at USAG Ansbach.

"Onboarding prior to the Service Culture Campaign was left up to each directorate. It was hit or miss for employees," Noyes said. "Now, the in-processing is a very organized process, and all employees receive the time and support that helps them integrate into the workforce and community."

Scottie Thomas, lead management and program analyst at Fort Jackson, said employee recognition "satisfies the thirst for positive feedback. The emphasis on service contributes to a culture of appreciation and is celebrated at all levels of the command."

Vicki Hamblin, chief of the plans, analysis and integration office at Fort Leavenworth, said the garrison has made communication one of its top priorities for its 2018 strategic plan.

Sean Sparks, director of human resources at Fort Rucker, noted, "Garrison leadership signed the charter in front of the entire garrison workforce and commended the team for their ongoing customer-focus efforts."

Matthew Margotta, co-lead/developer of the Service Culture initiative, said persistence is needed to continue the effort in the long term.

"Changing the culture of an organization does not happen overnight. It requires sustained effort, leader engagement at all levels, and the buy-in and support of all within the organization," Margotta said.

"IMCOM's Service Culture represents a long-term campaign to return to the basics through engaged and caring leadership, commitment to service, self-reliance, and adherence to the Army's core values," he said.

"As a supporting command and a service-provider organization which provides a unique and special contribution to Army readiness, service excellence should be at the forefront of all we do. The Service Culture Campaign provides us the tools and a daily reminder of how to get there."

IMCOM has a lasting commitment to providing the best possible customer service to Soldiers, Families and communities. Excellence in customer service is a result of how an organization treats its employees.

Dahl said he envisions IMCOM's Service Culture as a sustained campaign, not a one-time effort. "I want to be sure we continue our focus and sustain our effort to see this through, and make it a routine part of IMCOM operations and culture."
