CACs may be updated online through Sept. 30

Susan Merkner
IMCOM Public Affairs

JOINT BASE SAN ANTONIO, FORT SAM HOUSTON, Texas — Army personnel whose Common Access Cards are expiring between now and Sept. 30 may update their cards online.

Eligible card-holders may log onto the ID Card Office Online at pki.dmdc.osd.mil/self_service to update the certificates on their CACs, Uniformed Services ID Card, and Volunteer Logical Access Credentials within 30 days of the expiration date.

The temporary changes were approved by the DOD April 16 as a safety measure during the coronavirus pandemic.

“The continued operation of ID card facilities is an essential DOD mission,” said Michael C. Klemowski, chief, Soldier Programs Branch, Soldier Programs and Services Division, Installation Management Command.

“We can help maintain health and safety standards by reducing the number of visits to ID card offices for basic actions such as renewing expiring credentials,” he said.

Without the change, users who are teleworking would lose access to DOD networks, systems and email, and would be required to visit a DOD ID card office in person for a new card.

Card-holders who have updated their cards online will maintain access to the gates and post facilities, such as the PX and Commissary, and Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation programs.

ID cards may be updated online within 30 days of expiration. For example, a card expiring May 30 may be updated no sooner than May 1.

Online updates will not work for cards that already have expired.

The new measures are in place through Sept. 30 and may be extended depending on the scope of the coronavirus national health emergency, according to the DOD.

For additional information, including step-by-step instructions, visit cac.mil/coronavirus.

‘Cause-play’ - Dogface Soldier suits up to give back to his community

Sgt. Zoe Garbarino
50th PAD

Sgt. Anthony Licata, a trumpet player with the 3rd Infantry Division Band, donates his time by dressing up as Batman and volunteering for non-profit community events like fundraisers, charities and birthday parties. He dubs his performances “cause-play.”

“It’s a way to give back to the communities I’ve lived in,” Licata said. “I’ve done charities, fundraisers, birthday parties; anything that’s for a good cause.”

Licata said he started suiting up as Batman in college for fun with friends and got the idea to call it “cause-play” when his son was hospitalized after his birth in 2012.

“After seeing the kids in the children’s ward, that’s when it hit me that I could be suiting up and making a difference in their lives and give them something to smile about,” Licata said.

Since he began in 2012 at Fort Bragg, North Carolina, he has continued to volunteer at his follow-on duty stations at Fort Hood, Texas, and Fort Eustis, Virginia, and now on Fort Stewart. In total, Licata has volunteered for at least 50 events across all of his duty stations.

The COVID-19 spread mitigation measures put in place have encouraged Licata to continue to give back to his community. He recently went to a birthday party for a child who could not have friends over due to the pandemic. He said he spoke with the parents in advance, so they could let the child know not to hug Batman and to maintain proper social distancing.

“When I see the kids, we talk about superhero training,” Licata said. “I tell them that even during the pandemic, they can continue to stay active and read, because that is their super power. If it’s their birthday, I will give them a toy as well.”

Licata said that oftentimes, his wife volunteers her time as his handler, and his son and daughter accompany him as Robin and Batgirl.

“I find satisfaction in that I gave something back,” Licata said. “Any chance that I can go out and bring as little as five or 10 minutes of happiness to a child, that’s all the satisfaction I need.”

Veterinary Treatment Facility continues to treat animals during pandemic

Sgt. Zoe Garbarino
50th PAD

The Fort Stewart Veterinary Treatment Facility has been taking precautionary measures to deter the spread of COVID-19 while continuing to provide veterinary services to the Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield community.

The Veterinary Corps is responsible for the care of government-owned animals and provides limited care for beneficiaries in the military community who own animals and pets. They also provide surgical care, food safety, and defense, along with biomedical research and development.

Since Fort Stewart was put under Health Protection Condition Charlie, which indicates there is a substantial risk for sustained community transmission of the COVID-19 disease, many different facilities, like the veterinary clinic, have changed the way they operate.

“We are prioritizing privately owned animals that have more urgent conditions, as well as timely wellness visits like new puppies that need vaccines and health certificates,” said Capt. Adrienne Greenwood, the Fort Stewart veterinary branch chief. “We also continue to have sick call for animals and will work those appointments into our work schedule.”

Greenwood said one of the biggest changes at her clinic is that clients cannot come into the building with their animals. They must schedule an appointment and call the clinic to review the animal’s history over the phone. From there, on the day of the appointment, a technician will go outside and pick up the animal from the owner and bring them inside for services. Owners must wait in their cars while the animal is being inspected. Then, one of the doctors will call the client and review treatment procedures and schedule follow-up appointments as needed.

Although there have been no confirmed cases on domestic animals at Fort Stewart, Greenwood advises people wash their hands after touching animals and avoid touching someone else’s pets or strays. She said even though the animal itself may not have the virus, they could be a carrier and possibly spread it.

Robin Jones, a retired Soldier and current veterinarian who works at the clinic, examines privately owned animals needing treatment.

“It feels good knowing that in these trying times, we are making pets and their owners feel better by bringing them relief and helping them with their health,” Jones said.

Jones said she was a veterinarian while serving in the Army more than 20 years ago, and the mission has remained the same ever since. Even though there are a few limitations with how animals are seeking treatment during the pandemic, her mission and end goals remain the same, to diagnose and treat as many animals as possible.

Although people are not allowed into the clinic, they are more than welcome to adopt pets at this time,

2020 Census

Make sure you get counted so that our community has the funding and data necessary to plan for your future needs such as crises like COVID-19. Congress has approved that military will be counted at the station they are currently assigned or deployed from. Military households are responsible for submitting their own 2020 Census form online, by phone or by mail. Deployed Soldiers and those living in the barracks will be counted separately. All housing area residents on Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield will receive a Census invitation. It has never been easier to respond on your own, whether online, over the phone, or by mail—all without having to meet a census taker. For information on the 2020 Census, visit 2020census.gov. For information on how military and Families will be counted go to census.gov/library/stories/2020/02/counting-all-military-service-members-and-their-families-in-2020.

DOD employees may do Census work

Matching Ad Grant Program

We are deeply committed to the community

The Frontline has established an advertising fund to help local business get back to full strength by subsidizing their marketing through matching grants. Area businesses can now apply for a grant to help them recover from the effects of the coronavirus crisis.

How Will It Work for My Business?

The fund is open to all locally owned and operated businesses impacted by the coronavirus, whether or not they are current advertisers. Grant money can be used for local print newspaper and special product advertising between April 15 and June 30, 2020. Grants are available for a minimum of $200 and a maximum of $5,000 of matching funds each month. Eg: spend $200 in advertising, we match with a grant of $200 additional advertising dollars to equal $400.

"We want to help our locally owned businesses, big and small, continue to move forward during these trying times.

We feel by offering this grant fund we can help keep the wheels moving for our local economy. Contact me directly so we can form a partnership that will make our community stronger!" --- Dee McLelland, Publisher, The Frontline

How Do I Apply?

For a dollar for dollar matching advertising grant, send email to dmcllland@coastalcourier.com to receive your application. The Frontline will respond within 48 hours. A community newspaper is only ever as strong as the community it serves. We know businesses and workers are hurting, we're hurting too. But if we can pull together as a community, we can weather this.

Soldiers prepare for Ranger School amidst pandemic

Sgt. Andrew McNeil
3rd CAB Public Affairs

Soldiers of 1st Battalion, 64th Armor Regiment, 1st Armored Brigade Combat Team, 3rd Infantry Division, completed a 4-mile ruck march April 16 while adhering to the CDC guidance of social distancing and face mask usage during the COVID-19 pandemic, as part of the battalion's Ranger School preparation.

The Soldiers participating maintained a minimum distance of 6 feet from one another, as the columns gradually moved closer to the starting line and a voice yelled out "go" every 30 seconds, alerting Soldiers to begin movement.

"These Soldiers are investing in their sweat equity," said Capt. Douglas Sparrow, officer-in-charge of the program. "The ultimate goal of this program is to create better prepared men and women and Soldiers in physical and mental preparedness."

Though precautions are in place to minimize the risks of COVID-19, the program has not wavered in its goals. The Ranger-qualified instructors adapted the program to fit the new guidelines of public health and safety.

Instead of having formations every day, the instructors of the program required the Soldiers to report to two informal group workouts each week: one on Tuesday and the other on Thursday. The workouts on those days are ruck marches or runs and are done with a focus on individual improvement, Sparrow said.

Soldiers from 1-64 AR, 1ABCT, 3rd ID, complete a 4-mile ruck while participating in the battalion's Ranger School preparation program.

On Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays the Soldiers in the program workout on their own. They are required to record the workout using a fitness monitoring device, such as a heart rate monitor, or a fitness app of their choosing. They share their completed workouts in a group chat.

Soldiers in the program have been using installation resources including the Quick Track, various pull-up and dip bars and BeaverFit equipment at the Newman Fitness Center.

"We are still accountable for our physical readiness, mental readiness, and health readiness," said Staff Sgt. Miguel Zarate, a Bradley Fighting Vehicle System maintainer participating in the program.

Though things in the world may be slowing down due to travel bans and quarantine requirements, the Army is always moving forward, Zarate said. That is why it is important for Soldiers to maintain their overall readiness.

Air Station Savannah changes command

Daniel Malta
Hunter Army Airfield Public Affairs

U.S. Coast Guard Air Station Savannah held a Change of Command Ceremony April 17, where Cmdr. Brian Erickson relinquished command to Cmdr. Brendan Hilleary.

In the midst of the COVID-19 crisis, the ceremony was heavily modified and attendance was kept to a minimum. The ceremony officiant, Rear Adm. Eric Jones, 7th Coast Guard District commander, presided over the event via teleconference.

Taking over the command in the midst of this pandemic, Hilleary stated that his primary concern is protecting his crew, stopping the spread and sustaining the mission. While his posture helps protect the force, he knows this presents a unique challenge to him as a leader.

"The immediate challenge for me is getting face-to-face interactions with my crew, getting my command message out to them and also getting the information I need from them," Hilleary said.

When asked about any future plans or changes for Air Station Savannah, Hilleary stated that change wasn't needed because of the astute leadership of his predecessor.

"Cmdr. Erickson has laid such a strong foundation here and as Rear Adm. Jones said, my goal should be to optimize and carry on what has already been started here," Hilleary said.

USCG Air Station Savannah consists of approximately 110 personnel and five aircraft, which conduct search and rescue and law enforcement along the coast of South Carolina Georgia, and Northern Florida. While these missions are carried out by Coast Guardsmen, their operations rely very heavily on the support of Hunter Army Airfield.

"We are blessed at Air Station Savannah to have such a strong partnership with Hunter Army Airfield and the 3rd Infantry Division team," Erickson said.

"Thank you (Erickson), for being a good friend and an even better leader," said Lt. Col. David Escobar. "Brendan, I look forward to growing our relationship further and helping keep those orange helos flying."

MCU warns video-conference calls are target for cybercriminals

CID Public Affairs

QUANTICO, Va. – More people have turned to video-teleconferencing during the COVID-19 pandemic to stay in touch with loved ones, collaborate with coworkers and even attend medical appointments. The increase in video-conferencing browsing trends has garnered the attention of hackers who are looking for innovative ways to infiltrate computer software systems.

“Cybercriminals are conducting sophisticated phishing campaigns and exploiting vulnerabilities within various video-teleconferencing platforms to steal sensitive data,” said Edward Labarge, director, Major Cybercrime Unit. “A lot of this stolen data is already being sold on the darkweb. This highlights the importance of using only approved Department of Defense software, tools and platforms for official government business.”

The use of collaboration tools enhances the military’s mission attainment and day-to-day business process capabilities. However, the use of unauthorized collaboration tools on Government Furnished Equipment has the potential to expose critical information or introduce vulnerabilities. Commands should remind personnel that use of unauthorized commercial collaboration tools or using commercial email for official business could be a violation of Army policy.

“Official Army business should only be done on Government Furnished Equipment,” Labarge said. “Even though many of us are working from home, that doesn’t mean our duties to protect Army information stops. Emails containing sensitive data must be encrypted and we should never use personal email for official business.”

CID officials also stated some VTC software companies may not have the user’s best interest in mind. One well-known VTC company is currently being sued for allegedly selling user data to third parties, including a popular social media company. According to the lawsuit, a VTC company has provided the third-party with customer information, including details of the device used.

“Like all online accounts, it’s important to use complex passwords coupled with two-factor authentication,” Labarge said. “The majority of online platforms offer two-factor authentication in the form of SMS text messages or even through the use of an Authenticator App. Additionally, it’s important to never use the same password for all your accounts.”

As always, you should apply cyber best practices and weigh associated risks to ensure privacy and protect critical information. Consider the following steps:

- Verify the link to the meeting you attend is legitimate.
- Make sure to download the VTC software from the correct website.
- Verify the meeting ID and dial-in information is legitimate.
- Do not make meetings public.
- Do not share a link to a teleconference in an unrestricted, publicly available social media post. Provide the link directly to specific people.
- Avoid remote desktop sharing.

Below is a list of approved collaboration software for Army personnel to use for official telework purposes. Contact a system administrator for additional guidance on approved VTC software.

- DISA Global Video Service
- Defense Collaboration Services
- Skype for Business
- Intelink
- milSuite

According to CID officials, there is also an approved option of “Zoom for Government,” still available for DOD use with prior approval.

Soldiers across the 3rd Infantry Division and Fort Stewart are collecting meals in to-go packaging at the installation dining facilities during the COVID-19 pandemic to ensure everyone stays healthy and safe.

Further spread mitigation measures include requiring all personnel who enter the dining facilities to wash their hands and wear an approved face cover mask at all times while inside.

“The most challenging thing about COVID-19 is making sure everyone wears a mask and does not get sick while entering the DFAC,” said Spc. Angelica Mizzelle, a culinary specialist with 1st Battalion, 64th Artillery Regiment, 1st Armored Brigade Combat Team. “Being essential personnel, we risk our lives everyday but our leaders make sure everyone is feeling well and following the right steps to prevent sickness, germs and bacteria in our work area.”

According to leaders at Fort Stewart, the DFAC will continue to practice sanitation, safety and hygiene in order to provide the

Winn ACH evolves care for COVID-19 contingencies

Pat Young
Winn ACH Public Affairs

The 3rd Infantry Division, Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield, and Winn Army Community Hospital leadership continue to express their appreciation during the weekly Town Hall Meetings –thanking Soldiers, Families and retirees for following Centers for Disease Control guidelines to slow the spread of the coronavirus.

Winn ACH continues to evolve programs and services to provide the best possible care for beneficiaries during this pandemic. Lt. Col. Christopher Ott, chief of Department of Surgery at Winn ACH, described how Surgery has shifted their focus from routine and elective surgical procedures to urgent and emergent type cases due to COVID-19.

“We - providers, nurses and support staff - are on a standby basis to provide the care they need,” Ott said. “If and when it arises.” They instituted significant types of training, care methods, and techniques in anticipation of patient needs.

Jerrilynn Long and Maria Rodriguez, both recovery room nurses at Winn ACH, said the hospital’s innovation helps maintain readiness and they have integrated the COVID-19 procedures into their daily regimen.

Lt. Col. Christopher Ott, chief of Anesthesia at Winn ACH, right, briefs 3rd ID Commander Maj. Gen. Tony Aguto regarding readiness capabilities, April 15 on Fort Stewart.

“If we are not helping a patient, we are training,” Long said. “We do training every day.”

Rodriguez said, for post-op or after surgery patients, they suit up, describing their wear of personal protective equipment.

“We manage every patient as if they are a COVID patient. These precautions help protect the patient and the staff,” she said.

Community members can follow the most current COVID information and installation updates during the weekly COVID-19 Town Hall Meetings broadcast live at 6 p.m. every Wednesday on the Fort Stewart Hunter Army Airfield Facebook site.

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

A father sheds light on autism awareness

Lt. Col. John Hubbs

Plans and Operations Chaplain

With our current all-consuming concern with overcoming the coronavirus threat, some other things have understandably taken a back seat. One of those things, unfortunately, is the observance of April as Autism Awareness Month. This is a topic which has become important to me because I have an adult son who lives at level 2 on the Autism spectrum. Now, I am not a behavioral health professional, so I don't pretend to know exactly what that diagnosis means in medical terms, but I can speak with experience regarding what it means in real-life terms.

One of the things it means is that I am a very lucky dad. My son is one of the most pure-hearted people that I know. Because he doesn't understand the dynamics of the polite dishonesty which characterizes most people's social interactions, he doesn't play those games.

Having him in my life is a continual reminder of something I am supposed to be myself, but often am not. He is also an amazingly grateful person. No one in my family utters the words "thank you" as often as Dave. Simple gestures the rest of us take for granted – he doesn't. Again, every day, by his example he reminds me to be a better person than I otherwise probably would be.

Another thing that autism means, however, is that my son has faced struggles that I will probably never fully understand. The form of autism that Dave deals with does not make him immediately identifiable as someone with a disability. This is good in the sense that there are many things he can do that those more severely affected cannot. But, it has been tough for him in the fact that his disability has often been misinterpreted as a deficiency in his character. One of the people guiltiest of that misinterpretation was his own dad. I will live the rest of my life with the memories of treating my son as if he simply was not putting forth the effort to accomplish certain tasks. Unaware of his struggles, I made them significantly worse.

While I have learned and repented of my errors, other misinterpretations continue to bring heartbreaking challenges to Dave. People with autism at any level just don't catch the same non-verbal cues that the rest of us take for granted. How often, for example, do we exchange pleasant greetings while simultaneously sending signals that we have no interest in a longer conversation? Dave does not receive those signals. Because of this, my pure-hearted son has been sometimes misinterpreted as weird, creepy, or worse.

I watch him deal with these situations, and I want to scream at folks, "If you encountered someone who was blind or in a wheelchair, you would treat them with kindness and patience. What makes you think it is okay to treat someone with autism so harshly?" But, then I remember – maybe those folks are just like I once was. They simply don't know. Well, I am telling you now. Like a deaf person needs sign language, people on the autism spectrum need us to speak literally and clearly. Sarcasm and body language are to them like a foreign language to the rest of us. If you don't wish to have a long conversation with an autistic adult, that is fine. Just say so. Misinterpretation only leads to mistreatment. Please don't take as long to get a clue as I did.

Sgt. 1st Class Shane Baker, an explosives ordnance disposal specialist with 38th Ordnance Company Explosive Ordnance Disposal, competes during Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield Directorate of Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation Marne Trail Bass Tournament April 18. at Bidd Sands Lake at Evans County Public Fishing Area in Claxton.

Aiden Pluff, son of a 1st Ranger Battalion at Hunter Army Airfield veteran, is presented an award, at the conclusion of Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield's Morale, Welfare and Recreation's Marne Trail Bass Tournament, April 18, 2020 at Bidd Sands Lake at Evans County Public Fishing Area in Claxton.

Ken Jones, a retired Army air defense artillery Soldier, left, and Ken Chipple, retired from the U.S. Postal Service, fish during Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield's DFMWR Marne Trail Bass Tournament at Bidd Sands Lake at Evans County Public Fishing Area in Claxton April 18.

Randell Reynolds, a retired firefighter, displays his catch during Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield's DFMWR Marne Trail Bass Tournament April 18 at Bidd Sands Lake at Evans County Public Fishing Area in Claxton. Reynolds won the day's competition, catching three qualifying large-mouth bass fish, but he said he lost a big one at one point. "I missed a real good one. He came up out of the water, and I saw him. He had a mouth the size of a grapefruit," said Reynolds.

Ken Jones, a retired Army air defense artillery Soldier, left, is presented an award by Bill Cooney, outdoor recreation programmer for Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield, for a large-mouth bass that weighed in at 1.86 lbs.

Right: Staff Sgt. Jerry Brown, a satellite communications operator maintainer with 2nd Armored Brigade Combat Team, 3rd Infantry Division, fishes April 18, saying he only caught one fish for the day, but it did not meet the minimum 14-inch length requirement to enter the competition weigh-in at the end.

The Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield Fire Emergency Services have been carrying out birthday shout outs during the COVID-19 pandemic as a way to celebrate and make military children feel special on their birthday.

In order for a Family to request a fire truck to come to their house and wish their child a happy birthday, Families must submit a request at least 48 hours in advance. From there, the fire department contacts the Family and gives them a slotted time for when they will come. On the scheduled day, a fire truck drives by the house with sirens on, along with a birthday song playing in the background, and announces "happy birthday" for the child to hear.

Steven Kelly, the fire chief for Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield Fire Emergency Services, said he organized the program after he saw the fire department in Richmond Hill do shout outs for kids in their community. He was inspired to bring it back and spread the wealth.

"Kids can't have birthday parties during the pandemic if they're following the social distancing guidelines," Kelly said. "I thought it would be a great idea to go out and provide a service to the community by having birthday shout outs."

Jay McGraw, the assistant chief for Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield Fire Emergency Services, said since the first birthday shout out started on April 10, several Families in the Marne Community have requested to have birthday shout outs.

"The shout outs are restricted to the personnel who live on post," McGraw said. "We get emails from Soldiers in the surrounding areas requesting to have a shout out but unfortunately, we must stay on post in case we have to respond to an emergency."

McGraw said the program shows kids that there are people from all over the installation coming to support them to wish them a happy birthday. He said that after the shout out event, the parents can add onto that and remind the children they are special.

"Once the social distancing restrictions are lifted, kids will probably go back to their normal schedule of being in school and having birthday parties, so this is something fun to do in the meantime," Kelly said.

To request a birthday shout out, email fsfd.birthday.request@gmail.com for Fort Stewart or hunter.aaf.f.d.birthday.request@gmail.com for Hunter Army Airfield.
