3rd CAB Public Affairs

The 3rd Combat Aviation Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division, and subordinate battalion commanders gathered at Forsyth Park in Savannah, July 18, to uncasing the brigade colors for their redeployment from Afghanistan in support of Operation Freedom Sentinel.

The deployed Soldiers supported the ground forces with aviation operations including medical evacuation, aerial reconnaissance, and security, as well as troop and cargo transport throughout the country of Afghanistan.

"The Soldiers before you today have accomplished a tremendous amount in the past nine-months," said Col. Mark Johnson, commander for 3rd CAB. "From providing aviation support to U.S., coalition, and NATO partners in Afghanistan.

While the priority in Afghanistan was readiness, the CAB's rear detachment also had the same priorities at Hunter Army Airfield.

"These Soldiers worked day and night both here and abroad to sustain readiness within the Army and to support the strategic objectives of the United States," said Johnson.

The uncasing of the colors is an Army tradition that symbolizes the movement and transition of a unit from theater operations to home station operations. The uncasing of the colors honors the Soldiers who made it home to love ones and the nation.

The mission that was bestowed to the 3rd CAB did not just comprise of operations but Soldiers from the 1st Battalion, 151st Aviation Regiment from the South Carolina National Guard and other National Guard counterparts.

"The National Guard Soldiers mobilized for active duty almost a year ago and fought as integrated members of Task Force Falcon," said Johnson. "We recognize the tremendous contributions from these Soldiers as they return to service in their respective states and communities."

During the ceremony, Soldiers within the formation were recognized with awards for their work and dedication to the mission in Afghanistan and at Hunter Army Airfield.

Johnson accredits the families of 3rd CAB for their support to service and volunteer work throughout Savannah, Fort Stewart, and Hunter Army Airfield communities.

DoDEA preps for school year

Special to the Frontline

ALEXANDRIA, VIRGINIA - In preparation for the upcoming school year, the Department of Defense Education Activity Southeast District hosted its 2018 Summer Leadership Conference at Fort Benning, July 9-13.

Nearly 90 principals, assistant principals, administrators, and educators attended the conference. The participants were from schools located at Fort Benning, Georgia; Fort Campbell, Kentucky; Fort Jackson, South Carolina; Fort Knox, Kentucky; Fort Rucker, Alabama; Fort Stewart, Georgia; Maxwell Air Base, Alabama; and Marine Corps Air Station Beaufort, South Carolina.

"We are ready for the start of another great year of teaching and learning," said Dr. Judith Minor, the DoDEA Americas Director for Student Excellence. "A lot of meticulous planning and thought was put into designing this leadership conference. We take pride in fulfilling our mission to educate military-connected children to be college and career ready."

The theme for the conference was "Leading Change: Our Iceberg is Melting" based on the book by John Kotter. The book "Raising the Bar and Closing the Gap: Whatever It Takes" was also used as a conference resource. DoDEA recently rolled-out its 5-year strategic plan, the Blueprint for Continuous Improvement. The Blueprint is the foundation for all DoDEA's plans and efforts which aligns to the vision of educational excellence. Some of the initial improvements included making changes to the curriculum and also rolling out the new literacy and science standards for pre-kindergarten to fifth grade. These standards progressively build college and career readiness and support our mobile, military-connected students as they move in and out of DoDEA schools.

Future leaders now in Army CDCs

Lt. Gen. Kenneth R. Dahl
U.S. Army IMCOM

Toddlers playing in Army child development centers today are learning the cognitive, emotional and social skills that will equip them to succeed as America's future leaders. The Army doesn't merely provide daycare for our children and families, we provide our nation's best child development curricula.

The Army's nationally recognized child development programs offer families quality, consistent and convenient services that enable Soldiers to focus on their mission and spouses to pursue professional ambitions. In the process, we're creating the next generation of American leaders. It is the Army civilian professionals in our Child and Youth Services system that make the difference.

Army child development services, managed and delivered by Installation Management Command professionals at 192 Child Development Centers around the world, are held up as a national model of what excellence looks like. Our services have evolved and improved across time in response to changes in the military force itself.

Following the move to an all-volunteer military force in 1973, the Army no longer consisted primarily of single men, but instead attracted married career-oriented personnel with families. Base commanders recognized that developing children was linked to military readiness and retention, allowed spouses to work, and contributed to families' financial stability. These programs were quickly faced with growing demand from families, including dual-military couples.

The Military Child Care Act of 1989 directed the DoD to appropriate funds to each service to improve childcare staff training, compensation, child abuse prevention and safety measures, and to provide an age-appropriate curriculum that emphasized "development" over "daycare."

The Army's child development program is based on the premise that the best preparation for adulthood results from developing the social and emotional skills needed to succeed, rather than just being able to recite the alphabet at a young age. Since the 1997 White House Symposium on Childcare, the military's child development program has been seen as a national model.

CDCs on Army installations provide convenient access for Soldiers and their families, and to other groups on a space-available basis.

"We are excited about the new Blueprint," said Dr. Christy Huddleston, the DoDEA Americas Southeast District Superintendent. "This whole week is fully connected to Blueprint as we address meeting the DoDEA mission and vision as well as leading change."

The conference focused on incorporating these new changes and best practices into the schools. The Southeast District also partnered with the DoDEA Americas Center for Instructional Leadership starting in February to plan, design, and develop the leadership conference. The CIL and district leaders met monthly using the Addie Model to ensure that the school administrators received high quality professional learning.

Throughout the week, administrators analyzed, interpreted, and evaluated how they are leading change in continuous school improvement cycle using focused collaboration, excellence in instruction, and professional learning. This tied in to the Blueprint, which emphasizes the use of accurate and timely analysis of key data as essential to success. The Southeast District worked with Columbus State University's Leadership Institute to examine different conflict styles to manage change and work on team building activities.

Also, at the conference, Dr. Huddleston shared her expectations for the upcoming year, highlighted success stories, and identified areas of growth.

"This school year we are continuing what we already started," said Dr. Huddleston. "We are in year three of implementation of DoDEA's College and Career Ready Standards. We are digging deeper and embedding practices to sustain in some areas and implementing new CCRS for literacy and science for pre-kindergarten to fifth grade. Our teachers are embracing this change, our administrators are leading the change, and our students are benefiting from this change. I am proud of all the work everyone is doing and I look forward to an excellent school year."

DoDEA strives for excellence in education for every student, every day, everywhere.

For more information about DoDEA schools in the Southeast district, visit <https://www.dodea.edu/Americas/southeast/>.

Local commanders factor in local considerations to decide how to best serve their populations. Army CDCs follow developmental curricula for each age group, and recordkeeping is consistent across the Army to facilitate changes of station.

Some parents, after seeing their children flourish in CDCs, decide to pursue child development as a profession themselves. The Army offers a professional pathway for certified providers, in essence "growing our own." These homegrown providers understand what it takes for family members to meet the unique demands of Army life. Their structured curricula and personal interactions with children naturally develop a resiliency that strengthens them for future challenges.

The intent is to raise happy, well-adjusted and confident children, and that does not occur by happenstance. The Army invests in the compensation and continuing development of a cadre of passionate, compassionate and dedicated professionals who offer regulated care options in safe, functional facilities. These professionals all pass stringent background checks, and all providers are certified and evaluated to ensure they meet training, health and safety standards. Centers and their staff are subject to four unannounced inspections per year.

Army CDCs must meet national accreditation standards through an external evaluation process. Programs are accredited by the National Association for the Education of Young Children for ages birth to five or by the Council on Accreditation for ages 6 to 12 years old. Army CDCs maintain a 98.8 percent accreditation rate compared to about 10 percent nationally. High quality child development is measured by ongoing compliance with defined program standards with clear and routinely measured metrics.

Simply stated, all these things work together to make Army childcare significantly better than what is available off the installation. It is this commitment to quality in people and programming that is producing our nation's next generation of leaders. As our children grow into adulthood, the head start they got at Army CDCs will position them ahead of peers who grew up in systems of ordinary daycare.

So, if you are one of the more than 200,000 children enrolled in an Army CDC or one of their parents, you should recognize the advantages you've been given as a result. The tiny hands which today finger paint or stack blocks, share toys with classmates, or count fingers to work out math problems will one day hold

ENGINEERS HOLD SAPPER TRAINING

Staff report

The 10th Engineer Battalion, 1st Armored Brigade Combat Team held a pre-sapper train-up session, July 18-21 at Camp Casey-Hovey, Korea, to help certify Soldiers for Sapper school

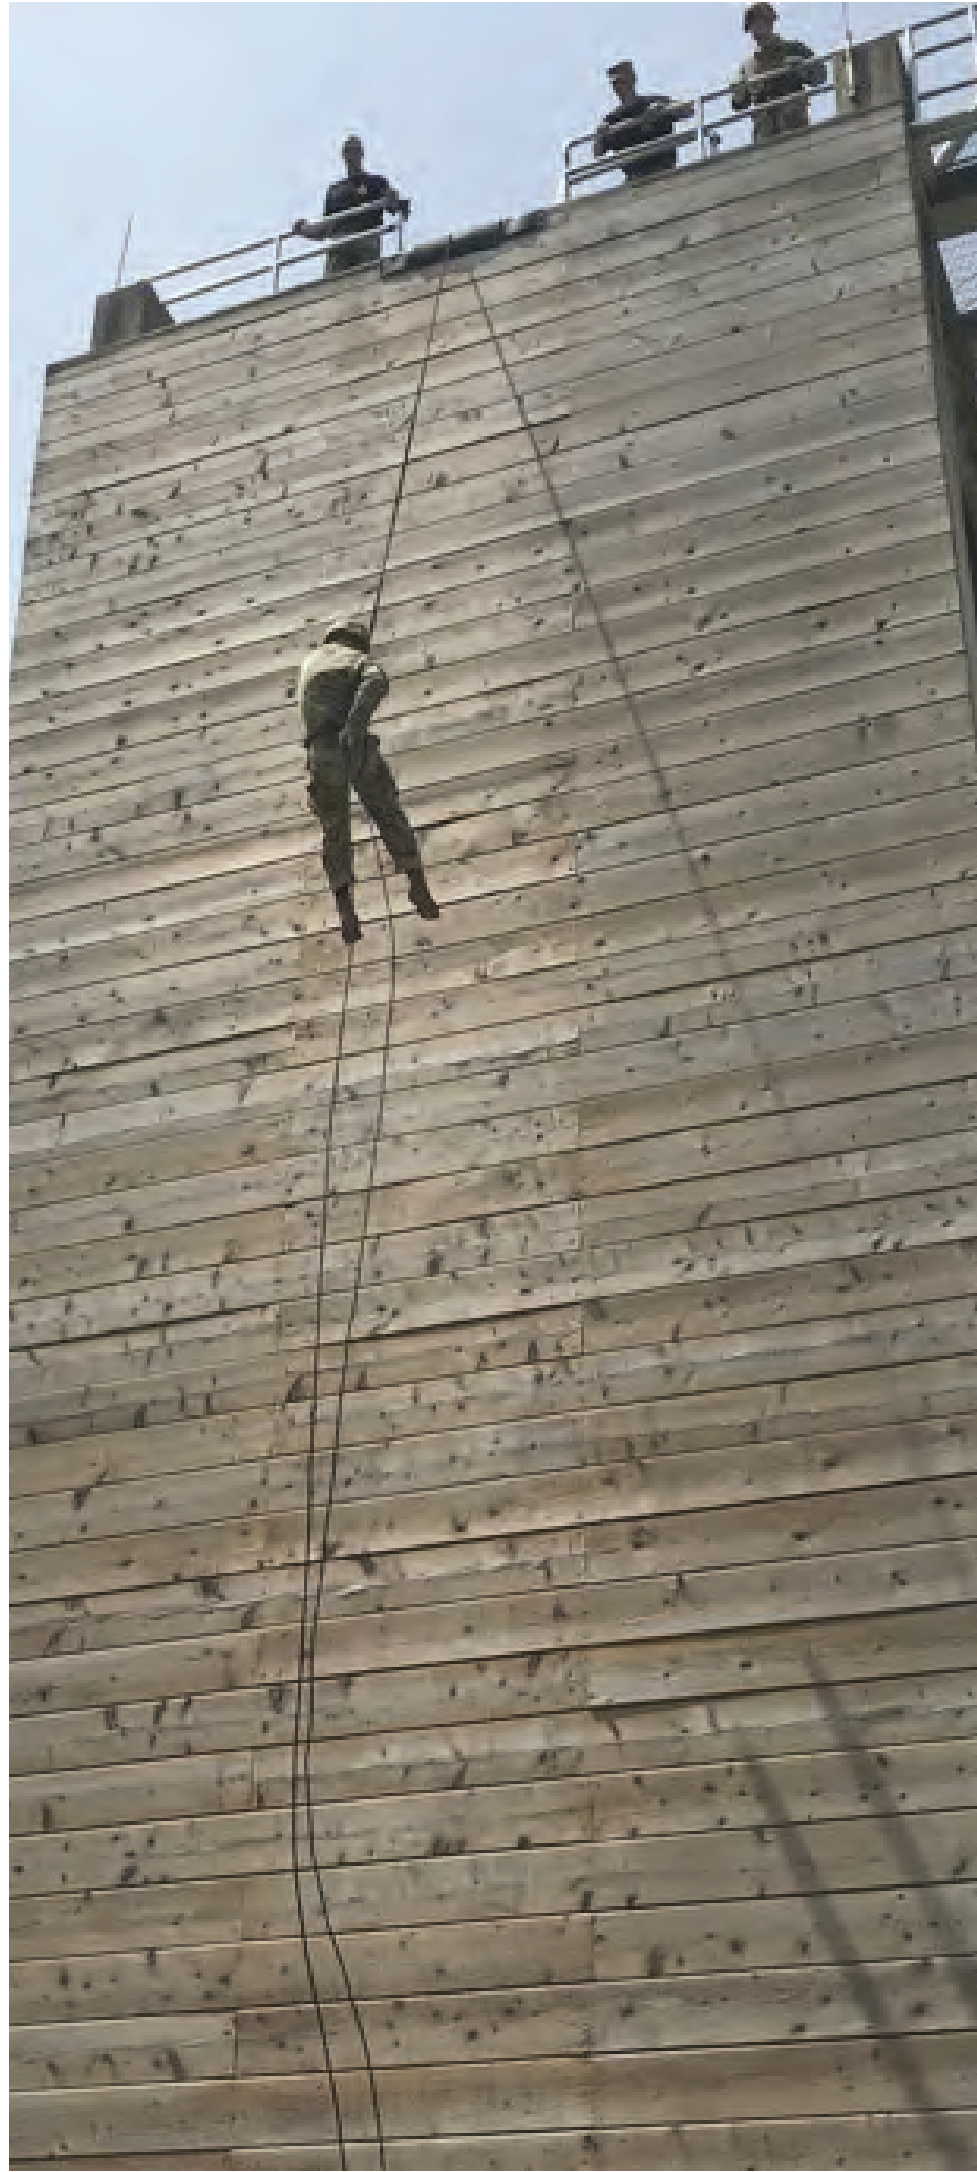

The six-day training event started with physical training and included medical care, sapper knots and mountaineering. During the first two days Soldiers participated in a 12-mile ruck-march and performed ranger tactical tasks, and conducted water survival training.

On the third day physical training using boats, rappelling, and land navigation was the challenge. Day four included a confidence course, an introduction to patrolling, practical exercises and base operations.

Evaluating the training and getting after-action feedback concluded the week; along with a rescue scenario that included much of the training provided.

“There is another group I wish to recognize that took care of sick children and made families run while spouses were away,” said Johnson. “They are the Family and friends of 3rd CAB.” The Soldiers here at 3rd CAB served the country in many ways, such as giving back to the community in Savannah or deployed to an unknown location. Nothing says welcome home like being greeted by loved ones and extended family within the Fort Stewart community.

“We are fortunate to serve here in Savannah,” Johnson said. “We fully embrace the hospitality and support we receive from the local community. I would like to thank those from the community who served our Soldiers and Families.”

As the history of the 3rd CAB continues, we are reminded of where we came from by honoring the past, he said.

“This week marks the 100 year anniversary of the second battle of the Marne,” Johnson said. “It is during this famed battle in World War I that 3rd ID earned the moniker ‘Rock of the Marne.’ These Soldiers before you today stand as the most recent combat veterans of 3rd ID and carry on the tradition of steadfastness set by their predecessors 100 years ago.”

Soldiers throughout the 3rd Infantry Division participated in an Affirmation of Life event hosted by the 3rd ID Artillery at Fort Stewart, Georgia, July 20.

Capt. Romia Freeman, a behavioral health officer from DIVARTY, said the idea for Affirmation of Life stemmed from a routine suicide prevention training plan but with a more positive twist. It focuses on the importance of life and why each day is valuable.

The event kicked off with a physical training competition between companies. Each company wore their unit training shirt to represent their unit.

“Soldiers build resilience through athleticism, and we wanted them to know it’s more than just working out,” Freeman said. “It’s about coming together, building comradery and learning that you’re not alone.”

After the physical training session, everyone gathered at Newman Gym to discuss the meaning of life.

Spc. John Calderon, a fire control specialist from 1st Battalion, 9th Field Artillery Regiment, DIVARTY and an attempted suicide survivor, spoke on how his life-changing event changed him for the better.

“If it were not for the noncommissioned officers above me, I would not be here,” Calderon said. “A suicide prevented is a life extended. Since then, I found that my purpose is to help those who are struggling the same way I was.”

Following the speeches, attendees were encouraged to play various sports. Kickball, ultimate frisbee, basketball and a bounce house for the military were available for Soldiers and their Families to enjoy.

“I really enjoyed today,” said 1st Lt. Antoinette Wilson, a chemical, biological, radiological and nuclear officer from 83rd Chemical Battalion. “(Physical training) this morning boosted everyone’s morale, and the speakers from earlier weren’t strangers; they were people we interact with every day who felt comfortable enough to tell us their experiences.”

Wilson said the experience opened her eyes because appearances alone won’t tell what’s going on behind closed doors, so it’s important to build healthy relationships with everyone you come across.

“Problems are temporary; suicide is permanent,” Calderon said. “You wouldn’t know how many opportunities you might miss or how many solutions you would have if you follow through with it.”

If you or someone you know is in need of help, contact a Military Family Life Counselor at 432-8980. Numerous other resources are available to Soldiers and their Families.

This year Winn benefited from their giving spirit of the volunteers as they worked in 10 departments at Winn and the Richmond Hill Medical Home, saving Winn an estimated more than $26,000.

“Whether it be volunteering for the nurses in Labor and Delivery, providing customer support in the Richmond Hill Medical Home or assisting staff with urgent needs in the Emergency Department; these teens are learning valuable skills while simultaneously enriching the experience that our active-duty Soldiers, Family Members, and retirees have at this hospital,” said Synclaire Lawson American Red Cross volunteer coordinator.

Sisters Breanna and Christianna Fayson, who come from a family known for their volunteer efforts, were “voluntold” by their mother, Naomi Fayson, an information referral and follow-up program manager at the Soldier and Family Assistance Center. These sisters have literally made a full circle at Winn.

“Every year they gain new skills and observe how professional people conduct themselves at work, whether it’s good or bad, which has helped them to learn and grow as young ladies,” Fayson said. “I never imagined they would one day volunteer at Winn, where they were born years ago!”

Over the past year 142 volunteers have logged more than 22 thousand hours, saving Winn more than $340,754 from June 2017-July 2018, which is an increase by 20 percent from last fiscal year.

For the summer youth volunteers, their summer is coming to an end tomorrow having volunteer more than 2,000 hours between them, yet many said they cannot wait to return to Winn next summer.

Fort Stewart Garrison Commander coins firefighters

Michelle Cowart
Frontline Staff

Firefighters at Fire Station No. 1 received a visit from Fort Stewart garrison commander Col. Jason Wolter on July 19 for their successful efforts in fighting a structural fire that took place recently at an on-post residence.

Assistant Chief James Ashdown, Capt. Jordan Chancey, Capt. Matthew Pearce, Inspector Wayne Reinhardt, and firefighters Leonard Washinski, Alan Carson, Jesse Poole, and Spc. White each had a hand in successfully completing the mission and received a coin to commemorate their achievement.

This structural fire was especially challenging because it already reached a portion of the home's attic. It did not take long for firefighter Poole to realize the fire was going to be formidable. The rest of the crew arrived, worked together and completed the task.

Poole credits his company for working together to get the job done. "It tested their skills," Poole said. "I was among the first to arrive on the scene then the rest of the team showed up and took care of business."

Wolter expressed his gratitude to the group for their commitment to public safety and affirmed their critical role in everyday life on the installation.

"Other than our deployed Soldiers, law enforcement and firefighters do the most important jobs (to keep us safe)," Wolter said.

Wolter also took the opportunity to recognize, soon-to-be retired Ashdown for 26 years of dedicated service to Fort Stewart.

Assistant Chief James Ashdown set to retire

Michelle Cowart
Frontline Staff

Assistant Chief James Ashdown watched with pride as his team received coins and kudos from Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield Garrison Commander, Col. Jason Wolter, July 19 during the commander's visit to Fire Station No. 1.

Ashdown described the occasion as bittersweet. His gentle smile and twinge of sadness in his eyes hinted at the mixed emotions he felt about leaving the people and place he called 'a family away from home' for the past two decades.

Ashdown started his firefighting career on Fort Stewart in 1988, following in the footsteps of his father who worked as a driver and operator. Ashdown progressed through the ranks starting as a firefighter and working his way up to assistant chief. He has received numerous accolades and has always been a major asset to the operations of the department.

Ashdown reflected on closing this chapter of his life and starting the next one.

"I'm excited to be retiring but I'm nervous too," Ashdown said, "It's been a good career."

He will take his knowledge and expertise to the Liberty County Sherriff's officewhere he will work in the narcotics unit as an investigator.

Over his career, several missions stood out.

"There have been some bad ones and some good ones," Ashdown said. "This last one, at Jasmine Court, was definitely a good memory because we saved all their stuff, all of their belongings. The guys, as a team, took the stuff out of the place and we were able to salvage computers, just everything."

"Personal belongings that couldn't be replaced, pictures. That's amazing to me because we normally lose structural fires that have been in the attic for a period of time."

Some of his fondest memories and what he will miss the most, according to Ashdown, have to do with the band of brothers, the family away from home that he has been a part of for the past 26 years.

"The guys, the team, the family," Ashdown said. "The relationships with everyone here -- we cook together, we play cards together, I mean, we're here 16 days a month with each other. Technically, we're almost more of a family here than at home. I'm just going to miss that."

COMMUNITY & LEISURE

JULY 26, 2018

ACS behind the scenes: Jenny Walker, EFMP

Michelline Turnbow
ACS Marketing

Walking into the office of Jenny Walker, Army Community Service Exceptional Family Member Program you will be met with a contagious smile and welcoming greeting.

Walker leads the EFMP program at Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield. EFMP as described by Walker is a program designed to assist any DEERS enrolled Family Member with needs that extend past the range of a general practitioner. The reason for the need of EFMP is to protect Family members and Soldiers from being placed at a duty station that does not have the proper resources to accommodate them.

Walker has some deep personal relations to the EFMP, with her children having been a part of the program. Walker acknowledges that parts of the program may be tedious but ultimately appreciates the aid given by the program. A common misconception regarding EFMP is that it is a career killer; this is simply a falsehood created by a misunderstanding of the nature of the program.

EFMP is designed to protect to Families from being placed in a helpless situation. EFMP is comprised of three different pieces that all work together to provide the best service for Soldiers and their Families. EFMP medical handles medical enrollment and paperwork. EFMP human resources will coordinate with EFMP medical for placement to ensure that proper resources are available at selected duty stations for Exceptional Family members.

ACS EFMP provides case management and assistance in finding resources. ACS EFMP is also responsible for ensuring that activities and facilities on post are accessible for members of the Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield community. All three aspects of the EFMP program strive to create the best situation for Soldiers and their Families when moving between military bases.

Walker believes that the importance of the EFMP is ultimately tied to readiness. Navigating a deployment can be straining on a Family, the added stress of needing support when locating resources for an Exceptional Family Member can add tension between spouses in an already apprehensive situation. EFMP can provide support through handling school related issues including individualized educational plans and preventing parental frustrations from rising to their peak if the goals given in an IEP are not being met.

Walker states that she is fortunate to be a part of an amazing team of professionals. Mavis Crowell is an essential part of the EFMP team and has been working for Fort Stewart's ACS EFMP for over 13 years.

Crowell said EFMP can alleviate stress from PCSing by giving Families the vital resources and information they need for their Exceptional Family Members. System navigators Mandy Wilson and Philisa Campbell provide the program with unchallenged support. The system navigators are non-clinical case managers whom assess the needs of Families and create a plan that identifies and satisfies the needs of the Family. Walker with Crowell and system navigators Wilson and Campbell handle cases not only from Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield but also MacDill Airforce Base in Tampa, Florida.

The dedication of Walker and her team to military families of this region are admirable and can be seen when they describe their favorite part of the job: the ability to provide an inclusive environment for all members of a military family and ultimately the relieved faces of Spouses and their Soldiers.

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

Time is precious, use it wisely

Capt. Charles Pridgen
92 EN BN Chaplain

I have long been fascinated with hourglasses. As a little boy, I can remember having an hourglass and turning it over and over again just to watch the sand slowly fall to the bottom. However, my fascination with the hourglass as a little boy is quite different from my fascination with the hourglass today.

As a child, I used to wonder how someone could put sand in a glass container without any opening – was it magic? Now, I have since learned the trick to how the process works. And though I understand today how this invention was put together, it is still fascinating to me.

Now, today if you were to come to my office you would come face to face with a nice size hourglass positioned at the front of my desk. I use it as an object lesson to remind me of my mortality. It helps me at times to stay grounded and not think too highly of myself. It's not that I need an hourglass to remind me of my mortality but there are times when I think and act as if the world revolves around me. You see, unlike the popular slogan that you sometimes hear, I don't believe that "I am the master of my fate: I am the captain of my soul."

Have you ever stopped and asked yourself, how did you get here or why am I here? Simply stated, you and I didn't cause ourselves to magically appear in this world, something or (what I believe) someone else (namely God) is responsible for us being here. Furthermore, this would suggest to me that something or someone else (namely God) is in charge of our destiny.

It is my belief that from the time that you and I entered this world, we were fitted with an hourglass (uniquely-made for us). And like the hourglasses we may have seen, the sand in our hourglass has been falling uninterrupted from the beginning. However, unlike the hourglasses we've had the opportunity handle, we don't get the luxury to stop or start over with our personal hourglass.

Subsequently, while you and I might disagree with how or who set our proverbial sands of time in motion, there are two things for certain; we didn't start it and we definitely cannot stop it!!

The moral of the story and the sobering reality is that one day the last grain of sand in our hourglass is going to hit the bottom – then what? What outlook do you have after the last grain of sand falls – what assurance do you have?

The bottom line is you don't have all of your life to be trying and figure that out because the clock is ticking and time waits for no one. My encouragement to you – please investigate while you still have time, because your destiny depends on it.

Pfc. David Kim, of WCAP, won first in the men's fin-weight class; Pfc. Terrance Jennings, of WCAP, took first in men's light weight class; Pfc. Devon Lewis, of WCAP, earned second in women's fly; and Spc. Nashayla Harper, of All Army Sports, took second in the women's light category.

Record set for TKD Championships

Brittany Nelson
IMCOM

The World Class Athlete program and All Army Sports' Taekwondo team beat an Army record this year after walking away from 2018 nationals with six medals, two gold and four silver.

The team has been training since June 5 at Fort Carson, Colorado. Every year Soldiers apply to the All Army Taekwondo team and the qualifiers train with the WCAP Soldiers on post. The group of athletes prepared with high intensity workouts for the 2018 Taekwondo National Championship in early July and their hard work paid off.

"I am very excited and impressed with our athletes. Looking back at my time with the team this is the best performance and medal count we have had in the history of Army Taekwondo. Last year we tied the most medal count from 1999 and this year we beat that," said All Army head coach Staff Sgt. Jonathan Fennell.

Fennell is also a drill sergeant at Fort Benning. He balanced his duties and the training camp in order to orchestrate success from his athletes. One of his athletes Spc. Nashayla Harper, a member of the New York Army National Guard, won second place in the women's light-weight group.

WCAP's head coach Master Sgt. David Bartlett expressed his satisfaction about Nashayla's performance at nationals.

"I was proud Nashayla Harper got to the finals. She was on fire; she did very well," Bartlett said.

Pfc. David Kim, a member of WCAP, was among the two gold medalists of the competition. Kim has been going to nationals since he was eight years old. After winning his final fight in the men's fin weight class, he discussed a key element of preparation and his emotions after winning.

"The most important thing is rehydration and putting the right stuff into your body throughout the day," Kim said. "I feel awesome, I feel like I was supposed to win."

As a member of WCAP, Kim takes part in Total Soldier Enhancement Training, a way for Soldier athletes to give back to the Army and help other Soldiers with their knowledge of sports and a winning mentality.

"TSET is good, we interact with the Soldiers. We start with a mental skill -- ours is imagining targets -- and we explain what that is like. We discuss how we mentally imagine our opponents before we fight and then we teach them some kicks, stretching drills, and we finish with sparring," Kim said

Kim plans to stay in the Army after WCAP and possibly join Special Forces or partake in the Ranger Assessment Selection program.

Spc. Terrance Jennings won the second gold medal of the tournament. Jennings, a member of WCAP, won first place in the light weight class. He has been in the program for two years and is grateful for the opportunity.

"To compete with U.S. Army on my uniform is a very proud moment for me, I've been on several national teams and an Olympic team but it is something different knowing you are representing your country and a great group of people who all have the same passion and drive toward the end goal," Jennings said.

Jennings faced WCAP member Pfc. Charles Buset, who has been practicing taekwondo for 17 years, in the third round.

Ultimately Jennings won the fight.

"Beating a teammate is bitter-sweet, our sport is an individual sport; someone has to lose and someone has to win. I would have preferred it not have been him but that's how the sport works," Jennings said.

Another medalist among the team was Spc. Devon Lewis, the only woman on the WCAP team. She won second place in the women's fly-weight class. Devon mentioned how WCAP and All Army athletes are different than the rest of the competitors.

"As Soldiers, we have been through things no one here has been through. We've been through basic training, advanced individual training, and we have daily missions so no one here can contest to that, and it makes us stronger mentally and physically," Devon said.

Like Kim, Lewis takes part in TEST missions as well as Total Army Involvement Recruit missions. TAIRs are designed to educate a community about the Army and what it has to offer as a career.

"We went to two schools in New York City where we talked to students about the Army in general. We all told them our stories and how they can apply for the Army, the National Guard and Army Reserves," Lewis said.

Kim mentioned the team goes to elementary, middle and high schools and the kids really enjoy it.

Other medalists included Pfc. Niklas Poland, a WCAP Soldier who placed second in the men's welter-weight class and an Army recruit Russel Gresham who placed second in the men's heavy-weight class.

After the completion of the camp and national tournament, team members were selected by the coaches for the International Military World Council games, better known as CISM.

The following will be competing at the 2018 taekwondo CISM games in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil in November: All Army Soldiers Pfc. Taylor McLeod, Spc. Nashayla Harper, Sgt. Kevin Prieto, 1st Lt. Ryan Kim, Spc. James Rohleder; and WCAP Soldiers Pfc. Devon Lewis, Pfc. David Kim, Spc. Terrence Jennings, Pfc. Charles Buset, Pfc. Miklas Poland and an Airforce airman, Tech. Sgt. Sara Sayles.

The athletes have started to prepare for CISM and hope to bring home medals for the United States while representing the Army.

Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield Public Affairs values your feedback. We are conducting a readership survey regarding The Frontline newspaper with respect to the Team Stewart website, social media platforms, and Marne Messages. Help us determine how we can better assist the community in getting information to you. The survey only has 20 questions and is anonymous. A link to the survey is on the Team Stewart Website or can be reached at <https://www.quicktapssurvey.com/survey/3bf6d3eeeff845a07f8d096e3825569f>.

Youth Volunteers and Supervisor

A thank you to American Red Cross volunteers

Angela Pearson & Bob Norman
Fort Stewart Red Cross Volunteers

We are grateful to take a moment to shine the spotlight on each of our American Red Cross Summer Youth Program volunteers for their involvement in putting smiles on the faces of people at many of the Fort Stewart community facilities. They have been willfully volunteering to make the day easier for others while also using this summer as an opportunity to gain a compelling ethical work background along the way. They have been such an important part of our organization. Caring for people as a way to give back to the soldiers and their families deserves great recognition and thanks for all their contributed time and talents.

Volunteerism is alive at Fort Stewart and if you would like to participate in the many events spearheaded by the Fort Stewart American Red Cross, please contact our office at 767-2197.
