Dogface Soldiers vie to be best in Iron Spartan competition

Capt. Sean Minton
2nd ABCT

The 2nd Armored Brigade Combat Team, 3rd Infantry Division, call sign Spartan, conducted a company-against-company timed competition on June 25 on Fort Stewart. The competition named “Iron Spartan” spanned the entirety of the Fort Stewart satellite installation on Highway 144 and included nine events that tested the mental cognition and physical prowess of each company. This brigade-wide competition was a first of its kind for the Spartan Brigade because such extensive and comprehensive physical competitions are more commonly conducted by airborne and light infantry units.

The nine events included a weapons lane, road wheel drag, tire flip, knee tuck, ball throw, t-pushups, deadlift, medical lane and a final knowledge lane. The knowledge lane tested the commanders and first sergeants on their personnel, such as the number of Soldiers living in the barracks, on-post, and off-post. The top team received bragging rights and the “Iron Spartan” streamer.

“Iron Spartan was an event designed to build and foster teams within teams. The event included physical ACFT focused tasks, cognitive learning geared toward the EIB and ESB, and tested the 37 company command team’s leadership on the knowledge of their formation and unit history,” said Col. Terry R. Tillis, commander of the 2nd ABCT, 3rd ID. “The event was officer-led and NCO-run. We are a brigade combat team whose mission when called upon is to win our nation’s wars, and in order to do that we must be a cohesive team of disciplined professionals always seeking to learn and get better each day.”

Iron Spartan began at 6:30 a.m., and the company command teams were given intent-based guidance to guide them during the competition. The company commanders were in charge of navigating their company formation while the first sergeants and other noncommissioned officers pushed the formation to complete the individual tasks. Together, the officers and NCOs worked to build a cohesive team to complete the mission.

“The competition was great because it got after team-building and letting the NCOs step up in a fun yet challenging environment,” said Maj. Brandon Scott, executive officer of the 3rd Battalion, 67th Armored Regiment, 2nd ABCT, 3rd ID. “The competition reminded Spartan Soldiers of all specialties that their purpose in the Army as a Soldier isn’t just doing their specific profession day-to-day but being able to fight in a tactical environment and not be a liability.”

The competition lasted nearly three hours with a final ceremony to announce the top three teams and present the Iron Spartan streamer to the winning team. The first-place team was awarded the streamer for their guidon and a four-day weekend. The second and third place team was awarded a three-day weekend. The winning team was Bravo Company, 3rd Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, 2nd ABCT, with a time of one hour and 57 minutes.

“You don’t build a team right away, you focus on developing your people first, and then the team cohesion follows,” added Capt. Shawn Borland, commander of Bravo Company, 3rd Bn., 15th IR.

The Iron Spartan Competition was planned to be the first of more to come for the brigade. Many enjoyed the cohesive atmosphere of working toward a common goal and enabled the companies and individuals to see how they performed and improve.

“I liked the competition. It brought out the best in me personally because I’m not very good at running but I ran to almost all nine events while holding the guidon,” said Spc. Christopher Lule, an infantryman assigned to Charlie Company, 3rd Bn., 15th IR. “I felt closer to my company afterward and our leadership really pushed us.”

The comprehensive, timed competition sought to build a team inside a team in company formations, demonstrate the physical capability of an armored brigade combat team, and show that “People First” really means preparing Soldiers to fight, win, and come home from the nation’s wars through tough, realistic training.

Army aims to assist Soldiers during turbulent moving season

Joseph Lacdan
Army News Service

WASHINGTON — To aid Soldiers during a challenging permanent change of station season, which is seeing some delays with household goods shipments due to the current environment, the Army has widened the window for Soldiers to report to their next duty station.

Soldiers scheduled to report to a new assignment between July 6-Sept. 30 can now check in up to 30 days before their scheduled report date and as much as 20 days after. Often a Soldier's report date can be dependent on when a government-arranged moving company can transport their household goods, said Scott Kuhar, deputy chief of the Operations Management Division, or OMD, at Army Human Resources Command's Enlisted Personnel Management Directorate.

However, regardless of a Soldier's report date, they must complete the process and report to their new assignment no later than Nov. 10, when the service begins transitioning to its new Integrated Personnel and Pay System-Army. Kuhar said the service will shut down its personnel systems shortly after that date in order to make the transition.

If Soldiers find they cannot begin in-processing within 20 days of their original report date, they can turn to their installation's military personnel division, or MPD, which can then authorize a deferment of up to 60 days from the original report date if necessary, provided that the extra time does not extend past Nov. 10.

"We know this year is more challenging than usual, and we are working to give our Soldiers and families options, resources, and flexibility to reduce as much stress as possible," said Gen. Edward Daly, commander of Army Materiel Command.

The added flexibility may help ease some of the stress Soldiers face when moving this summer as well as contribute to readiness. Jon Finke, chief of HRC's OMD, said that Soldiers will often request a shipment date, only to learn they will have to wait an extra month for an available moving company.

"You're kind of at the mercy of the moving system," Finke said. "And the Army is realizing that and trying to work with Soldiers and families so that they can move, but we have to honor what the transportation companies can do and how they can support us at the same time."

Last month, Derrick Candler, head of the Transportation Policy Division in the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Army Logistics, said the Army had experienced the ripple effect of labor shortages across the country. High demand on the shipping industry has impacted Soldier movement, exacerbated by shortages of drivers and laborers.

In extreme cases, Soldiers have had to report to their next duty assignments without their household goods, temporarily leaving their spouses and family behind during an ongoing moving process.

Finke hopes that providing additional time will eliminate that possibility.

"We are doing our best within our control here to keep family units together during the movement process," Finke said. "By saying 'Soldier, go ahead, report' that leaves a spouse and possibly the children stuck to do the moving process, which would very much be a strain on a family."

Chris Fursman, OMD human resource specialist, said that the HRC receives about 40-60 requests per day to either extend or reschedule report dates.

Previously, Soldiers had to file a request through their chain of command to HRC, a process that took up to 60 days for approval. Now, Soldiers can receive an extension authorization locally through their chain of command within a few days.

"What we've done now is we've taken that long process ... and we're crunching it down," Fursman said, "so we can assist the Soldiers and take some of that burden off of them."

Soldiers will still need to make sure their scheduled leave matches their adjusted report date.

Unpredictable obstacles

Soldiers, Army civilians and families preparing for a PCS move in the summer months should anticipate the unexpected, Candler said.

Some other options to assist Soldiers include extended storage for household goods at the location of origin, and allowing Soldiers to apply for cost reimbursements higher than government rates to hire a commercial moving company.

Candler said Soldiers scheduled to change duty stations may experience delays due to labor shortages and a booming housing market throughout the country.

In addition to reduced travel restrictions, moves across the country have significantly increased, Candler said. Soldiers have reported waiting for up to six weeks before moving companies could transport their household goods to their next residence.

The surge in home sales have presented challenges for military families looking to extend their temporary rentals. Soldiers have reported that some landlords have asked them to vacate rental homes earlier than expected in order to sell the home, find another renter, or move in themselves, Candler said.

"Right now homes are selling very quickly, which is putting extra strain on the moving industry during the busiest time of year," he said.

Combined with the extra demand, labor shortages have exacerbated the challenges. In April, the Wall Street Journal reported that the country posted a record 9.3 million job openings. Candler said because of pandemic restrictions, moving companies trained fewer truck drivers, packers and loaders.

"The biggest [factor] we face is the labor shortage," Candler said. "There is a nationwide labor shortage in numerous industries ... the moving industry is having problems finding enough employees to provide the required services."

To assist Soldiers and families during a busier than expected moving season, the Army has enacted measures to make moves smoother. The service recently announced that it has extended the window for Soldiers scheduled to report to a new assignment between July 6-Sept. 30. Soldiers can now check in up to 30 days before their scheduled report date and as much as 20 days after, provided that the final report date is before Nov. 10.

Candler said moving companies used by the Defense Department accept moves based on available resources and labor.

If Soldiers find themselves in a situation where they must wait for an extended period before movers can deliver their household goods to their next duty station, they can contact their chain of command, turn to their installation's transportation office, or use the new chat function in the Army's PCS Move app to speak with a live transportation specialist for more information on how to successfully plan a move or address unique challenges that come up during the move process.

Finally, Army leaders remain committed to supporting Soldiers and their families throughout the PCS process and this summer's unpredictable challenges, Candler said. Army leaders have worked to provide transportation officers with tools to address moving emergencies and dilemmas.

"We are in this together; patience and flexibility will be essential in making it through this peak PCS season" Candler said.

The Army PCS Move app is now available for free download on Android and Apple devices.

The Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield transportation offices are ready to help. For more information call 767-8130/4208. You can also visit the DoD Customer Moving Portal at move.mil/customer-service or reach out to the Army PCS Help Desk at 800-521-9959.

Soldier-Olympians share training experiences as Tokyo awaits

Joseph Lacdan
Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Sgt. Amro Elgeziry knows the rush that comes with competing at the Olympic Games. At 34, he will make his fourth Olympic appearance in the modern pentathlon after previously representing his native country Egypt three times.

But this time will be notably different. Competing for the first time as an American, Elgeziry hopes to become the first U.S. competitor in the sport to win Olympic gold in more than 100 years.

“This is a special Olympics for me, because I to get to represent the United States,” Elgeziry said during a live panel discussion Wednesday. “I have a big chip on my shoulder. I really want to represent Team USA and the U.S. Army well.”

After emigrating to the U.S. he joined the Army’s World Class Athlete program in 2017 with his wife, fellow WCAP member Sgt. Isabella Isaksen.

Fortunately Elgeziry had mentors throughout his storied career, from Cairo to Fort Carson, Colorado. His older brother Emad set the example, piquing Elgeziry’s interest in the sport when Emad qualified for the 2000 Olympics in Sydney as a pentathlete. At the time Elgeziry and his three other brothers had been training as swimmers.

Enamored with the prospect of competing on the world stage, Elgeziry began training for the multi-disciplinary sport, eventually qualifying for the Olympics in 2008, 2012 and 2016. He had been ranked as high as No. 4 in the world but finished the 2016 Games in Rio de Janeiro at 25th place.

“I’ve learned something after every Olympics,” said Elgeziry, currently ranked No. 62 in the world.

After WCAP’s Olympic training center closed last summer, Elgeziry and his wife transformed their backyard into a makeshift gym, where he lifted weights and practiced pistol shooting and fencing. “It was definitely hard,” he said. “But we did the best we [could.]”

The modern pentathlon draws inspiration from traditional military disciplines. Athletes battle each other in fencing, freestyle swimming, equestrian racing and a combination run and shoot race. The most renowned American athlete was Gen. George S. Patton, who competed in the first pentathlon tournament at the 1912 Summer Games in Stockholm.

Joining Elgeziry in Tokyo will be Sgt. Samantha Schultz, a first-time Olympian in the pentathlon and WCAP coach Sgt. 1st Class Dennis Bowsher.

Staff Sgt. Sandra Uptagrafft also qualified for the Tokyo Games in the 10-meter air pistol after taking the gold at the 2019 Pan American Games in Lima, Peru. Uptagrafft will be returning to the games after competing in shooting at London in 2012.

“It’s an honor to be able to serve in the Army and still pursue my sport at the highest level,” she said. “And I’m grateful to WCAP for giving me the resources to put myself in contention at the Olympic Games.”

Spc. Benard Keter, a Soldier-athlete in the World Class Athlete Program, crossed the finish line of the men’s 3,000-meter steeplechase with a time of 8:21.81 at the U.S. Track and Field Olympic Trials June 25, earning his spot to compete at the Summer Olympic Games in Tokyo.

Uptagrafft, wife of former Olympian Eric Uptagrafft, began competing in the sport as a student at the University of Southern California. The Los Angeles native credits the Army with giving her the discipline to compete at the Olympic level.

“I don’t think I would have the longevity that I’ve had without the Army teaching me certain things like hard work, strength and resiliency to help me accomplish the mission of not only making the Olympic team, but also getting me to where I am today,” Uptagrafft said.

Spc. Benard Keter braved a record heatwave in Oregon to qualify for the Olympics in the 3,000-meter steeplechase on June 25. By competing in Tokyo, Keter completes a journey that began 2010, when Keter first migrated to the U.S. from his native country Kenya.

During the pandemic, all competitions for the steeplechase halted. Without access to a track, Keter measured running distances on street pavements. He credits the WCAP track coaches and the Army for supporting him throughout the challenging training process.

“I love the atmosphere within our track and field program and the coaches and chain of command,” Keter said. “They give us all the support that we need to be better Soldiers.”

Sgt. Terrence Jennings hopes to make an impact on Team USA as an assistant coach. Jennings previously competed at the 2012 games where he took bronze at 68 kg.

Jennings credited WCAP head taekwondo coach Master Sgt. David Bartlett with helping him transition from athlete to coach. Jennings helped train Olympic hopefuls such as heavyweight Pvt. Russell Gresham.

“He really kind of showed me what it meant to be a leader and showed me how to handle situations and things that Soldiers deal with on a day-to-day basis,” Jennings said.

Beyond Tokyo, the Soldier-athletes said they were grateful for the opportunity to serve in the Army. Spc. Alejandro Sancho, who will be representing Team USA in the Greco-Roman wrestling’s 67 kg event, said he hopes to transition from the National Guard to active duty and continue his career as a military police officer once he finishes competing.

“I think the Army has been a really big mentor to me; striving for excellence and being a leader and all that stuff has taught me to become a better human being,” Sancho said.

Army to enact final privatized housing Tenant Bill of Rights

Special to the Frontline

Fort Stewart has joined over 36 other installations in implementing the full Tenant Bill of Rights for privatized military housing after several months of discussion among Army officials.

On May 1, 2020, then-Secretary of Defense Dr. Mark Esper signed the original bill of rights as “a promise we should have made back in the late ‘90s when the Army was laying the groundwork for private companies to take over military housing operations and upkeep.” Many installations eventually initiated 15 of 18 points, with the understanding that the final three would need to be ironed out by July 30.

A year later, Fort Stewart and many other installations have released the bill of rights containing all 18 points. One key item provides the glue for the entire bill of rights, according to U.S. Army Installation Management Command officials.

“It was all tied to coming up with common documents, and the common document was the universal lease,” said Connie Glenn, chief of G4 Housing Division, IMCOM. “The universal lease has been, or will be, implemented Army-wide to all privatization projects.”

By “universal lease,” Glenn explained that Soldier and their Families can expect to see many of the same terms on any lease, whether they are living at Fort Knox, Kentucky, or Fort Wainwright, Alaska. There will be exceptions, however.

“There are some variances to that because these are private companies and as such, those private companies are bound by state and local laws as well,” said Glenn. “There are some specifics that each individual project will have to look at.”

An important decision point was how the dispute resolution process will specifically be handled. Because much of the bill of rights focuses on tenants receiving a residence “that meets applicable health and environmental standards,” some of the steps for tenants and managers resolving issues satisfactorily have required some additional discussion.

What has come out of the discussion is a two-step process: informal and formal.

“The informal is really the Army chain of command trying to resolve issues rapidly at the lowest possible level,” said Glenn. “This leverages the Garrison com-mander’s leadership and proximity, and an outreach ability to the unit chain of command, the tenant and the local partner.”

A dispute can be wide-ranging, according to Glenn.

“It can be, ‘I don’t like the response time for my maintenance call,’ or ‘I think they damaged my household goods when they were moving it to do a maintenance call,’” said Glenn. “If, however, at the end of that informal dispute resolution things are not resolved to everybody’s liking, the tenant can then initiate a formal resolution.”

This process is open only to military tenants, spouses and dependents, Glenn said.

A right found in the document that requires some explanation is Point 17: “Rent segregation.” Glenn said tenants who feel they have been negatively impacted by an unfulfilled work order can request a portion of their rent money be withheld for up to 60 days, if necessary, to encourage the housing management company to resolve the issue.

This doesn’t mean that tenants can stop paying their rent.

“Instead of the money going into accounts receivable, they set that money aside, and they await that final disposition,” said Glenn. “[Tenants] should continue to pay their rent and let the process work its way out.”

For the Directorate of Public Works Housing Branch on Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield, the addition of the last set of rights means that Soldiers and their Families will gain a better understanding of the housing process from installation to installation thanks to the addition of the universal lease.

“The Tenant Bill of Rights is designed to provide a common ground for Soldiers and Families in regards to housing,” Doug Delzeith, DPW Housing Branch manager said. “To clarify, this means that Soldiers and their Families will experience a standardized documents process that will enhance their quality of life regardless of where they are stationed.”

Installation leadership hosts housing town hall

Molly Cooke

Fort Stewart Public Affairs

Residents of North and South Bryan Village housing areas who were looking out their windows the evening of July 16 may have been momentarily startled by the procession of Soldiers and garrison employees walking their streets.

The mass was not walking with military precision as one would expect, instead they meandered from one side of the street to the other with no rhythm or rhyme. Starting and stopping in front of houses, under trees and next to play areas.

Installation leaders hosted unit leaders on a walking town hall through the North and South Bryan Village housing areas, July 16 on Fort Stewart.

Leaders saw a diverse range of homes, from best to worst, to give them perspective and awareness on areas that need improvement in the neighborhoods.

"Nobody is perfect but there are things that we can improve upon," Garrison senior enlisted leader, Command Sgt. Maj. Bryan Buchanan said. "If we come together as a team I think that doing a walking town hall will display some of that."

Leaders had the opportunity to walk through two homes during the tour. The first being a model home that prospective residents are given the opportunity to see prior to moving into that particular housing area. The second home highlighted extensive damages that the Balfour Beatty Communities housing team routinely encounters during the move-out process.

"We are here to overly communicate things," Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield garrison commander, Col. Manny Ramirez said. "This is a great venue for all of us to come together as a team. As we go through these walking town halls we are going to identify who the right people are to take care of things. Whether it's Garrison's responsibility, BBC's responsibility or the resident's responsibility, we can all come together and clear all of these [questions] up."

Following the walk, leadership, military housing officials and the Balfour Beatty housing team listened to concerns from residents during a face-to-face town hall.

Residents expressed concerns with lawn maintenance, handicap accessible areas throughout the neighborhoods, pest control and the trash policy.

Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield leaders reassured the residents that they will continue to work together to address their housing concerns.

"Look forward to start seeing more leadership involvement," 3rd Infantry Division senior enlisted leader, Command Sgt. Maj. Quentin Fenderson said.

"We appreciate you coming out. At the end of the day we need to take ownership. We want to own the problem. We owe it to you."

In an effort to improve the face-to-face communication between leadership and residents, installation leaders plan to continue traveling to different housing areas on Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield to hear from residents face-to-face.

Additionally, residents are encouraged to keep open lines of communication with their community Mayors assigned to their housing area along with their chain of command in regards to their housing issues.

"We wanted to do this to bring awareness on both sides of the house and improve upon and fix some of the issues we hear about on a monthly basis," Buchanan said. "If your issue is not getting fixed after communicating directly with BBC, we encourage you to communicate directly with your community mayors or the mayor coordinator so that your issue will come directly to me so I can help field your concerns."

The next housing town hall will take place on July 30 in the New Gannam housing area on Hunter Army Airfield. BBC residents are encouraged to stay tuned to the Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield Facebook page at facebook.com/FortStewartHunterArmyAirfield for updates on future town halls.

What to know about Hepatitis—its treatment and prevention

Claudia Sanchez-Bustamante
Health.mil

Liver functions can be damaged by unhealthy habits like excessive alcohol use, drug use or obesity.

In advance of World Hepatitis Day on July 28, it's important to understand liver disease, the different types, and how to prevent them.

"Hepatitis that persists can lead to acute liver failure, which can lead to rapid coma and death as the body loses the capacity to process toxic materials in the blood or produce necessary proteins, or chronic liver failure, where the body gradually loses the ability to process toxins and produce proteins, causing numerous medical complications and leading to eventual death due to liver failure," Lt. Col. Brendan Graham, chief of pathology at Womack Army Medical Center, in Fort Bragg, North Carolina said.

Liver failure can be either acute or it can be chronic, which develops over time.

"The types of hepatitis that lead to acute liver failure include drug-induced hepatitis - which can be caused by acetaminophen, also known as Tylenol - and certain types of infectious hepatitis, such as viral hepatitis caused by the hepatitis A virus," Graham said.

Similarly, he said the types of hepatitis that lead to chronic liver failure include alcoholic hepatitis, fatty-liver disease, and certain types of viral hepatitis, such as those caused by the hepatitis B, and hepatitis C viruses.

Knowing the difference is important because it allows individuals to avoid death due to acute liver failure, said Graham. Additionally, most of the types of hepatitis that cause chronic liver failure are due to lifestyle choices, such as excessive alcohol use and obesity, making this type of hepatitis largely avoidable through lifestyle modifications.

"Service members with chronic liver failure secondary to chronic hepatitis are non-deployable as a result of these complications and the significant medical care they require," he said. "Additionally, service members with viral hepatitis that are not yet in liver failure put their fellow service members at risk of contracting the virus due to exposure to the infected individual's blood in the course of providing medical care to an injured, infected individual or receiving a battlefield blood transfusion from an infected individual."

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

Selfless service: the new revolution

Maj. Kevin Daul

RSO Plans and Operations Chaplain

Selfless service deserves your attention today. Are you preoccupied with your prestige or career? Has your concern for self-absorbed progression overruled relationships at home and work? You live, love, and work in community and how you relate to that community depends on your success domestically and professionally.

Selfless service addresses your relationships, starting at home. Those who live with you know you best. How do you relate to your spouse, children, other family members, or roommates? Are your home relations mostly competitive rather than cooperative? If you find yourself in argument more than agreement your relationships need refining.

Are you selfless in service to your spouse? Do you sacrifice for your children? Do you understand the needs of others help others reach their own personal goals? Your family and friends need a self-denying unselfish companion willing to forgo some of your own needs and pleasures for the benefit of others. Do you feel alone at home? Do you feel friendless? Try giving your time, energy, and emotion to your family and friends.

Selfless service also demands a look within the workplace. Mission effectiveness hinges upon how you interrelate, cooperate, and collaborate with coworkers for a common objective. Make the workplace environment healthy by valuing the opinions of all personnel. If you are a Lone Ranger, perhaps you are a good actor but you can't be an effective work-place team member and your operations will be dismally deficient.

How much do you sacrifice for your team members at work? Devote yourself to both mission and the team. That dog-eat-dog, step on the next head to climb to the top of ladder method of success is a failure; that motivation is all wrong. Personal sacrifice inspires your team to make mission where all members get credit for a job well done. There's no room for self-gratification in selfless service because the team did the job together.

Both home and workplace teams work best when all individuals sacrifice self-interest for the benefit of the team as a whole. Families, friends, and co-workers find true success in self sacrifice for a common goal of the group. True success is not measured by how distinctly independent you are, rather how contributive you are.

Leaders must find creative ways to instruct the inexperienced, discipline the erring, and forgive the offenders. Only honest leaders with humility and internal fortitude will facilitate change necessary to make an efficient team. Humble leaders will admit that the same faults their subordinates face are the very ones that they also face but a successful leader will find ways to correct their own deficiencies opening ways to change personally which in turn makes room for unit growth and advancement of mission.

Selfless leaders inspire a movement within their units for all members to exude selfless service. A transformation revolution avalanches as selfless service rolls from one person to the next, a friendship, into a marriage, a family, into a team, a platoon, into the entire United States Army, and a nation into the world. Now you make this revolution a reality. You are the greatest leader when you are selfless, serving and sacrificing for the benefit of others.
