Maj. Gen. Lee Quintas, 3rd Infantry Division and Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield commander, adds a battle streamer to the division colors assisted by Command Sgt. Maj. Daniel Hendrex, the division's senior enlisted advisor, during the division's uncasing ceremony May 18 at Club Stewart.

The 3rd Infantry Division headquarters uncased its colors during a transfer of authority ceremony, signifying the unit's official return from Afghanistan, May 18 at Fort Stewart.

The unit deployed for nine months in support of Operation Resolute Support, the mission to train, advise and assist its Afghan partners. The division also served as the headquarters for U.S. Army Forces-Afghanistan to counter and prevent the spread of terrorism.

The ceremony transferred command authority from the provisional headquarters, Task Force Marne, back to the 3rd ID. Task Force Marne ensured Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield provided the best support possible while the headquarters was deployed.

This marks the seventh deployment for the 3rd ID headquarters since 2003, and the third deployment to Afghanistan.

Speaking to reporters prior to the ceremony, Command Sgt. Maj. Daniel Hendrex, the 3rd ID senior enlisted advisor, said that since the division's last deployment, and even during the nine months the division spent in-country, things were changing for the better.

"It's shifted tremendously," said Hendrex, "It's changed dramatically even from a year ago...there was a sense of movement, almost a window of opportunity that you felt. Not only with U.S. and coalition forces, but really the political climate within that country...we're now in a train, advise, and assist mission."

In his remarks, Maj. Gen. Lee Quintas, the 3rd ID commanding general, focused on the accomplishments of the Soldiers, Families, and civilians who supported the division, both at home and abroad.

"We are back and so proud of what our Dog Face Soldiers have accomplished both in Afghanistan and here at Fort Stewart. This uncasing ceremony celebrates the dedication to mission success by so many people," said Quintas. "We could not do what we do, without the unwavering support of the coastal Georgia community. They play a critical role in taking care of our Soldiers and Families when we're deployed."

The ceremony also featured the color uncasing of both the 3rd ID Division Artillery headquarters and the division headquarters and headquarters battalion. Both DIVARTY and DHHB were deployed with the division headquarters to Afghanistan.

The 3rd ID continues to support the mission overseas with units from the 3rd Sustainment Brigade and 3rd Combat Aviation Brigade still serving in Afghanistan; while the 1st Armored Brigade Combat Team is deployed to the Korean Peninsula as part of the Army's continued rotational force to the region.

James C. McConville and Lt. Gen. Gwen Bingham, the Assistant Chief of Staff for Installation Management.

"This award symbolizes the hard work and sacrifice made daily by our team at Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield as we work towards being the Army's premier power projection platform," Wolter said.

McConville lauded Fort Stewart and the other recognized installations for understanding readiness is a key factor towards being an Army community of excellence.

"It's not just about building services... What these winning installations do is provide world class power projection platforms. In support of the services' Voting Assistance Program, the U.S. Army has designated the June 25 through July 5 as Armed Forces Voters Week. During this week, commanders are encouraged to intensify efforts to contact all assigned personnel, ensure they are aware of voting requirements and are provided the necessary information regarding voting resource. Brittany Nelson

Secretary of the Army, Dr. Mark Esper, paid his first visit to the civilian professionals of the U.S. IMCOM while visiting their headquarters in Fort Sam Houston, San Antonio, Texas, on April 17.

IMCOM CG: The Value of Army Civilians

Lt. Gen. Kenneth R. Dahl
Commanding General,
U.S. IMCOM

FORT SAM HOUSTON TEXAS, - One of the great lessons I've learned as Commanding General of U.S. Army Installation Management Command is to value the diversity and contributions of Army civilians.

Before taking command of IMCOM and its 50,000 plus cohort of civilian professionals, I had little experience in leading or working alongside them. I was ambivalent about their role in making our Army ready. I had no appreciation for how vital their leadership is to the continuity and success of everything we do. Now, after witnessing the wisdom, dedication, technical expertise and professionalism of Army civilians in a personal way, I feel obliged to champion their service.

After visiting 80 installation communities around the world, I am as familiar with today's Army as anyone. It is clear to me that our Army could not do all of what it is expected to do without civilians in nearly every command, in some cases side-by-side in theater.

Civilian professionals provide foundational continuity in times of turbulence; design, test and field our weapon systems; play critical roles in supporting Soldiers and their Families; maintain our training facilities; and myriad other critical tasks that give Soldiers the freedom to focus on warfighting. Army civilians are integral to readiness, and a part of the team I have grown to accurately value and appreciate.

Can we improve the system? You bet, but we should not paint all Army civilians with the same brush based on limited experiences where a small number have made a bad impression or had a negative impact. Detractors of employing civilians should think through the alternatives. Totally contractors? Have Soldiers do everything? These solutions are often more expensive and can negatively impact Army readiness in serious ways.

Army Civilians are probably the most efficient and effective way to sustain readiness. Their contributions are priceless; our nation simply cannot purchase their level of loyalty and commitment. They are part of the Army's DNA. I encourage more Army leaders to learn and understand this important truth sooner than I did.

Vietnam Native Shares Story at Asian-American, Pacific Islander Observance at Fort Stewart

Spc. Zoe Garbarino

1st Lt. Diana White, a military intelligence officer and Vietnam native with 603rd Aviation Support Battalion, 3rd Combat Aviation Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division, was the guest speaker at an Asian-American and Pacific Islander Observance, May 16, at Fort Stewart.

This year's observance theme was about conflicts Asian immigrants face in the U.S. and how their contributions help make the U.S. what it is today.

"Being of American-Vietnamese descent, the Vietnamese community and I take great pride in seeing the success of my country's men in the U.S. military, despite the struggle they faced when they arrived here," White said.

White comes from a lineage of military members - from her grandfather to herself. She said she moved to the United States from Saigon, Vietnam when she was 14 years old.

"My mom married a retired marine, and they had me. From there, we started applying for our citizenship and moved to America in 2004," White said.

White, her mother and grandmother migrated to Savannah, Georgia to start their journey in the states.

"Everything fascinated me," said White. "I was amazed of little things like how easy it is to rent a car or how easy it is to travel."

Not knowing much English, White had to take English lessons in high school and was encouraged by her dad to join her school's Junior Reserve Officer Training Corps program.

"I remember thinking to myself, 'wow, this is different,'" White said. "I loved everything about it; the comradery, the discipline and the constant drive to become better."

White said after high school, she had a passion to be in the military. She attended college at Armstrong State University in Savannah and joined their Reserve Officers' Training Corps.

In 2016, she commissioned as a military intelligence officer.

White's mother, ThuSang White, said that she is proud of her daughter for chasing her dreams and joining the Army like her dad and grandfather.

"I love it here in America, and I can tell my daughter loves it too," said ThuSang White.

Diana said coming from Vietnam, the U.S. has offered her a lot of opportunities since she naturalized and even more since she joined the military.

Students explore careers in medicine

Kaytrina Curtis
 Winn ACH, Public Affairs

A Georgia Liberty County School System bus pulled up to the curb at U.S. Army Medical Department Activity-Fort Stewart, Winn Army Community Hospital, and 24 medical students disembarked for what the staff at Winn ACH hoped would be a life changing tour May 4.

Liberty College and Career Academy, along with local businesses provide students, from both Liberty County high schools, training and skills needed to find worthwhile work in Liberty County after graduation. According to Dr. Pamela Scott, LCCA's goal is to teach students the basic fundamental skills in healthcare in subjects of medical terminology, microbiology and basic life support.

The prospective medical students were greeted by Sgt. Joseph Drumgold and the Winn non-commissioned officer in charge of the Department of Pathology, Sgt. 1st Class Justin Auschwitz. Auschwitz said it was important for the students to take a tour of the pathology department, because many times the lab in most television and movies settings are often overlooked, which gives students a narrow view of the medical field.

"We're the unsung heroes... because without a laboratory you can't really conduct a lot of the operations that a hospital would normally be able to," Auschwitz said. "From blood banking, and hematology, well you need those in order to perform surgeries. Microbiology and chemistry, you need those to also help out with surgeries, but also help diagnose patients."

As the students toured the various parts of the pathology department, they were able to visit sections of the hospital not often, and most hope to never see, such as the morgue. Most of the students appeared highly interested in the various parts of the morgue.

"One of the benefits that we have here is the archives ... for things that we've found in the human body that are either naturally occurring or unnaturally occurring," Auschwitz said.

These findings help the pathologist determine not just cause of death or illness, but they are also able to help doctors evaluate and diagnose patients with various diseases.

LCCA Business and Community Coordinator, Connie Bragg, initiated the field trip. Bragg said she was excited for the opportunity to tour Winn ACH, because although students may think they are interested in a particular field of work, actually meeting the laboratory professionals is important.

"In the classroom they're taught, and they hear about these things, but going to Winn hospital gave them the opportunity to actually see some of it in action," Bragg said. "A lot of times they think it's the nurses or doctors, no look at all these people who have degrees in the medical field and the different jobs and opportunities they have to work in that field."

Jada Naftzinger, a Bradwell Institute and LCCA student, said she found the tour exciting and fun because of her interest in the medical field.

"They just showed us the different slides and little plates of the different bacteria," Naftzinger said. "I know there's a lot of different kinds out there. They are totally different things and they have their own smells and characteristics." Specialist Kiara Drumgold, a medical laboratory specialist at Winn, a self-proclaimed lover of microbiology, said she did not have an opportunity to tour a hospital in high school. Drumgold said she thought the tour is beneficial for the students because it helps them plan for the future.

Once the students complete their Allied Health curriculum at LCCA they would have taken classes in introduction to healthcare science, application of therapeutic services, nursing essentials and complete a nursing internship.

Georgia National Guard Soldiers train for Afghanistan

Special to the Frontline

Georgia Governor Nathan Deal and Maj. Gen. Joe Jarrard, Georgia Department of Defense Adjutant General, visited Soldiers from the Georgia National Guard's 48th Infantry Brigade Combat Team, last week, during the units rotation at the Joint Readiness Training Center at Fort Polk, Louisiana.

The 48th Infantry Brigade Combat Team is training at JRTC in preparation of mobilizing to Afghanistan in December.

"The bravery and selflessness shown by the men and women of the Georgia Army National Guard represent the finest principles of our state and nation," said Deal. "These individuals are always ready to put service above self to safeguard the lives and property of our state and its citizens, as well as the freedoms of those abroad."

He said it was a true honor and privilege to visit the 48th as they prepared for the upcoming mission.

"From the commanders to the youngest members of the brigade, I've seen firsthand how tough and intelligent these extraordinary individuals are. I was deeply impressed by all of our Guardsmen, and they are well-prepared to complete their missions. As they prepare to mobilize and we await their safe return home, we take comfort in knowing our Soldiers are mission-ready and prepared to face any adversary that poses a threat to our nation and people."

3rd ID bids farewell to two Army generals

Sgt. Arjenis Nunez
50th Public Affairs Detachment

The 3rd Infantry Division held a farewell ceremony for two of the division's deputy commanding generals at Fort Stewart, May 17.

Brig. Gen. John B. Richardson IV, the 3rd ID deputy commanding general for maneuver and Brig. Gen. Sean C. Bernabe, the Task Force Marne commander were honored for their contributions and service to the division.

Today's farewell signifies the end of a tour of duty with the 3rd Infantry Division for two outstanding general officers and their families, said Maj. Gen. Lee Quintas, the 3rd ID commanding general. "The ceremony today is an opportunity for the division to recognize the Bernabes and Richardsons for their amazing contributions to Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield, the 3rd Infantry Division, and the Army."

Bernabe served as the installation's senior commander during the division headquarters' nine-month deployment to Afghanistan.

Some of Bernabe's major contributions included the supervision and preparation of the 3rd Sustainment Brigade and the 3rd Combat Aviation Brigade's deployment to Afghanistan, as well as the 1st Armored Brigade Combat Team's deployment to the Republic of Korea.

"As an economy of force and supporting effort, Sean was tasked with executing a division headquarters mission with a much smaller element – he had to do more with less," Quintas said. "[He] managed to get it done every day, allowing me and the division headquarters to focus on the fight in Afghanistan."

Quintas said Bernabe's wife, Jayne, did her part and successfully contributed to the Liberty County school district and the greater coastal Georgia region.

The Richardsons were also recognized for their contributions to the Marne Division.

Quintas said Richardson succeeded in a deployment to Operation Inherent Resolve as a deputy commander, a training rotation as a senior trainer for a brigade combat team and a deployment to Afghanistan as the Train, Advise, Assist, Command – East commander.

Quintas also added that Richardson set the conditions for the Afghan National Security Defense Forces to integrate a deliberate air campaign during Operation Spartan Nike.

During the ceremony, Bernabe was awarded the Army's Legion of Merit and Richardson was awarded the Defense Superior Service Medal.

Bernabe said, "There are few places where you'll find such a positive command climate where collaboration, cooperation and teamwork are the norm. You won't find loyalty to each other and loyalty to the unit like you will here at the Marne Division."

At the conclusion of the ceremony, Quintas thanked the two and said, "Remember – once a Dogface Soldier, always a Dogface Soldier."

Artillery SGM offers advice to the NCO Corps after 32 years of service

Staff Sgt. Sierra A. Melendez
50th Public Affairs Detachment

Sgt. Maj. Eugene Johnson III has an impressive career chock-full of accomplishments that stack up as high as his towering stature.

The Detroit native will be retiring this year from the United States Army after 32 years of service to the land of liberty.

"In my senior year of high school, I attended a career day," said Johnson. "A recruiter approached me and showed me all these cool posters and told me I could see the world."

"He got me," chuckled Johnson.

Shortly thereafter, Johnson said he found himself in Fort Sill, Oklahoma – home of the artillery – building the foundation for the start of his vocation as a fire control specialist.

"Honestly, I didn't look to make it a career," said Johnson. "In Detroit, there really wasn't any installations near me so the military life was very foreign to me. I had to give myself some time to figure out if it was really what I wanted."

Johnson said he was lucky enough to have Germany as his first assignment. He reminisced on the words of his recruiter in Detroit and how they came to fruition.

"Once I forced myself out of the barracks and began to see the world, I realized it wasn't that bad," said Johnson. "I began to really integrate myself with my unit and build relationships."

"After that, the rest is history," said Johnson. "I was hooked and knew this was absolutely what I wanted to do with my life."

Johnson reflected on the leadership he has had throughout his career, both beneficial and deficient, and attributes the experiences from both as the bedrock of his leadership style.

Johnson said he adopted a 'cafeteria' frame of thought by picking and choosing the characteristics he wanted to amass and throwing away those that he felt didn't reflect the type of leader he wanted to evolve into.

Johnson urges today's noncommissioned officers to do the same.

"I've been around for three decades, so I've seen some changes," said Johnson. "We talk about 'toxic' leaders, but I think at their core, they don't intend to be malicious. I believe they weren't developed right."

Johnson offered up some advice to both junior and senior NCOs on how to prevent that occurrence.

"The minute you get a Soldier fresh from basic training and AIT [advanced individual training], keep up their momentum," said Johnson. "They have spent the last few months with their sole focus on training. Sustain that momentum and take it to the next level."

Johnson said the profit of continuous training is two-fold.

"It develops that individual – that future leader," said Johnson. "It also makes the organization more efficient – whether it be a company or a platoon."

Johnson said that the developmental process doesn't stop once a Soldier gains their stripes.

"Chevrons don't equate to being all-knowing," said Johnson. "Never stop learning. Never stop seeking knowledge and development just because you're an NCO."

Johnson offered up professional development sessions conducted by senior leaders as a mean to combat that issue. He said he regularly expressed to sergeants first class the urgent need to conduct NCO development programs at their level.

"When I first enlisted, the operational tempo was drastically different than what it is now," said Johnson. "Back then, rotations at training centers were our versions of deployments. Now you have young kids graduating basic training and going straight into combat. There is little room for error so we have to continue to train and develop."

Johnson said the high OPTEMPO can sometimes create stressful scenarios for Soldiers. He noted a pivotal moment in his career where a Soldier succumbed to the pressures and stressors of life.

"In addition to training, we have got to remain engaged with our Soldiers," said Johnson. "Before the modular barracks that we have today, we were each other's counselors. There were three or four of us to a room, we knew when something was up. We have to do better and talk to our Soldiers. Get to know them so we can recognize symptoms and indicators."

Johnson is rounding out his career in the 3rd Infantry Division at Fort Stewart, with his final assignment being the operations sergeant major for the 3rd Infantry Division Artillery.

"Time flew by," said Johnson. "I'm sad it is coming to an end, but I'm excited for this Army – my Army's – future."

A moment in Marne history, when 3rd ID raised the nation's colors following the liberation of Berchtesgaden in World War II.

MP company celebrates liberation of Berchtesgaden

Special to the Frontline
18th Military Police Brigade

BERCHTESGADEN, Germany— The 48-star flag is raised high above the town of Berchtesgaden, Germany, as the American and German national anthems are played.

The color guard stands with the American and German flags side by side. In 1945, no one could have imagined a time when these two countries would stand together to commemorate a significant event of World War II.

The U.S. 3rd Infantry Division liberated Berchtesgaden, May 4, 1945, receiving the formal surrender of the town on the Schlossplatz. The division conducted a flag-raising ceremony over Berchtesgaden the next day. This year marks the 73rd anniversary of the liberation, and Soldiers from the 529th Military Police Company Honor Guard, 709th Military Police Battalion, participated in the anniversary celebration.

“It was a defining moment for the war and for the 3rd Infantry Division,” said retired Lt. Col. Timothy Stoy.

Stoy and retired Capt. Monika Stoy dedicated a plaque in 2008 on behalf of the Outpost International Society of the 3rd ID in the location of the liberation in 1945. The 48-star flag has been raised on May 5 every year since 2008, to commemorate this defining moment in WWII. This year, the honor guard presented the American and German colors side by side during the ceremony.

The ceremony may have been a small, private event, but the list of VIPs was extensive. Consul General Jenifer Gavito, the U.S. Consulate in Munich, Germany was one such VIP.

“It’s amazing to see that 73 years later, we (Americans and Germans) can stand side by side and recognize the sacrifices that were made by individuals on both sides,” Gavito said.

The Outpost International Society of the 3rd ID takes extreme pride in the history and sacrifices made by the 3rd ID during WWII. This ceremony is just a small piece of appreciation to help keep the history alive for generations to come.

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

The battle within

Capt. Jeremy E. Plevka
DHQB, 3rd ID Chaplain

The battle rages. The struggle is real. The options are endless. The fight is always abounding. The victory is never final. The end is never realized. The choice is yours. Are you going to be a pessimist or an optimist? These two words are constantly at odds.

An optimist sees the good in a situation; a pessimist see the bad side.

Two people may see the same thing yet view a different outcome. I bring this up because as of late, I have been struggling with being more a pessimist than an optimist. I know, I know... I am a chaplain and a person of faith. How can one in my position be subject to the allure of pessimism? Easy - life! Like you, I live in a depraved world. I like you, find difficulty around each corner. I like you, find the challenges to be challenging and the successes few. I like you, get down, depressed, sad, dejected, upset, hurt, tired, worn out and worn down. Like you, I sometimes find it easier to see the bad in things rather than the good.

However, I realize this fight in myself, and try to quell the raging fire of pessimism with positivity and optimism. How in the world do I do this? I do this by surrounding myself with people who are optimists in nature. I do this by hunting the good stuff. I do this by realizing that the bad is only temporary, and that the good times are only an attitude adjustment away. I know that we are taught to hunt the good stuff, but seriously we should not have to look that far or that hard for all the good that is surrounding us at any given moment. If we were honest with ourselves and really stopped to take stock of what we have, what we are, and where we are, we would realize that we are blessed beyond measure. We have more than we deserve and we are living in a nation that allows us to realize any dream our minds can conceive.

So, as you go through this day and you begin to drift off into the land of "woe is me," may I ask you to consider this simple phrase: today is a good day! This phrase is painted on a canvas that hangs in my office. It is the first thing I see each time I walk into my office. It reminds me that no matter what is going on, today is a good day. If you can say this statement with sincerity each day, I believe that you will find your attitude shifting from one of pessimism to optimism. Fight on. Choose well. Be the change. Today is a good day!

DES CORNER:

Consider snake safety as warm weather approaches

Richard W. Rudolph
AFSBn Safety Office
Commentary

Now that the weather is getting warmer with the approach of summer, there will be more people enjoying their favorite outdoor activities, such as hiking in our state parks. However, snakes are one of the outdoor dangers that we must be vigilant of as we move about since the warmer weather usually attracts snakes. While snakes are beneficial to our environment by helping keep the rodent population down, some snakes are very harmful to humans. These snakes are poisonous, and their venom can attack different organs in our bodies. In Georgia, we have several common snakes such as the eastern barter, brown water, scarlet king, hognose, eastern ribbon, crown, queen, earth, black swamp, pine woods, pine and rainbow snakes.

However, only the crown and the pine woods snakes are mildly venomous, causing just a mild irritation to human. The rest are all venomous and can cause severe pain or death. The eastern diamond back rattlesnake, cottonmouth (water moccasin), coral snake, copperhead, timber rattlesnake and the pigmy rattlesnake are all great at camouflaging themselves with the surroundings and will strike without hesitation. Some snakes are more active than others in the evening when it is a little cooler outside, but enjoy sunbathing during the day. You can find them everywhere from the woods and under leaves, to rocky hills and mountains. Some snakes spend most of their time in lakes and rivers catching frogs and lizards. So if you are going hiking, it is best to wear heavy leather or high-topped rubber boots and heavy gloves. Also, wear your trouser legs outside of your boots. Other tips are at <http://www.i4at.org/lib2/snakes.htm>

- Be extremely careful around debris. Use rakes, pry bars, or other long-handled tools when removing debris.

- Never expose your hands, feet, or other parts of your body in a place where a snake might hide.
- Always be on the lookout and if you realize you are near a snake, avoid sudden movement, which may cause the snake to strike. If you remain still, the snake may leave.
- If the snake does not move away from you, back away from it, slowly.
- If you kill a poisonous snake, use a stick, rake, or another long-handled tool to carry the snake away for disposal. Snakes may bite even when they appear dead.

These are just a few safety tips you can find more on the internet. It is best to know the basics about snakes before you find yourself or a family member in striking distance of a poisonous one.

Rodeos bring finance to Soldiers in Afghanistan

Sgt. Elizabeth White
3rd Sustainment Brigade

BAGRAM AIRFIELD, Afghanistan - A team of Soldiers with the 2153rd Financial Management Support Detachment, Special Troops Battalion, 3rd Infantry Division Resolute Support Sustainment Brigade, are corralling finance issues during rodeos on bases around Afghanistan.

Since arriving in theater approximately two months ago, the finance team has traveled to various posts providing Soldiers and civilians with finance assistance.

"A lot of people don't have the time to get out to Bagram in order to take care of their financial needs," said Spc. Keon Sands, a finance management technician with the 2153rd FMSD, a Florida Army National Guard unit. "The rodeos are awesome because we get to bring finance to the Soldiers."

"Our mission is to provide financial services to troops, vendors and contractors all throughout northeastern Afghanistan," Sands said. "To pay these vendors, pay these Soldiers and put them in a position where they can take care of their finances, their families back home and give them some financial stability."

At each base, the team spends a few days helping as many Soldiers, contractors and vendors as possible. Large amounts of people take advantage of the short amount of time the team has, asking questions and filling out paperwork the team can process once they return to Bagram.

During the rodeos, the team assists with cash exchanges, setting up or answering questions about the Savings Deposit Program and fixing pay issues, said Spc. James Lovett, another finance management technician with the 2153rd FMSD.

Spc. Keon Sands, a financial management technician with 2153rd FMSD, HHB, 3rd ID RSSB, assists Lt. Col. Martin O'Donnell, the officer in charge of the Resolute Support public affairs office, with setting up his savings deposit program at the Resolute Support Headquarters, Afghanistan, May 13. The finance team is able to assist U.S. military personnel and vendors from various bases with financial questions and issues. During their deployment, Sands and his team expect to visit 15 different locations to serve personnel.

"We're just going out to a more remote location or a location that doesn't have a finance office so we are able to offer the services that all the Soldiers and contractors deserve," he said.

The team has traveled most of the time they've been in Afghanistan, Lovett said, and they spend the rest back at Bagram Airfield, processing the paperwork they received during the rodeos. But he wouldn't have it any other way. "To be honest, I thought I was going to be cooped up in an office, but it's been a nice change of pace," Lovett said. "I really enjoy getting out, meeting new people and being able to service the Soldiers."

Even though they travel constantly and handle a large amount of customers between a small team, these Soldiers give their all to the mission, Sands said. They are committed to ensuring that the Soldiers, vendors and contractors have all the finance assistance they need to accomplish their missions.

"It's a really rewarding feeling to be able to put a smile on these Soldiers faces or be able to help them out with things they've been trying to take care of for months," Sands said. "It makes me feel as though I've played a big role in this deployment."

Lovett and two Soldiers from the detachment travel around the Combined Joint Operations Area - Afghanistan providing financial support to approximately 15 bases. Lovett said, "since arriving in theater, 80 percent of my time has been on mission and 20 percent is at Bagram recuperating from mission and processing paperwork."

Ribbon cut on Hunter Mile

Service Members on Hunter have a brand-new obstacle course on which to train after the ribbon cutting ceremony for "The Hunter Mile" May 22.

"This obstacle course will enhance readiness and fitness for our service members," said Lt. Col. Ken Dwyer, Hunter garrison commander. "The Soldiers (of Equipment Platoon of the 530th Engineer Company, 92nd Engineers) who constructed this demonstrated the versatility to overcome obstacles and adversity with their versatility to get the job done."

The Soldiers had to remove many trees from the wooded area and work around power lines and pipes throughout the area during the project.

"Our resiliency was definitely put to the test with these challenges combined with our peak optempo at Fort Stewart," said Staff Sgt. Mike Becker, platoon sergeant. "This was a great training opportunity for my Soldiers because they are horizontal engineers and this was a vertical construction project. It definitely brought up our precision engineering skills."

The Hunter Mile is similar to the Marne Mile that the 92nd Engineers built in 2015 except the Hunter Mile includes a 30-foot-long suspended cable bridge.

"We had a ditch that cut through the course that had to be dealt with," said Chief Warrant Officer Lynndon Vinyard, battalion S-3 construction technician. "We had to design the footers due to the ditch, pipes in the ground and the power lines. But this challenge forced us to use our horizontal and vertical construction skill sets to make us more well-rounded engineers."

There is another reason The Hunter Mile differs from Fort Stewart's Marne Mile.

"I think this one's better because we took the lessons learned from the first project and applied them to this one," said Lt. Col. Perry Stiemke, commander, 92 Engineer Battalion.

"With our current fiscally restrained environment, we were glad to take on this project (and save the installation some funds). It was a great opportunity to engage in realistic training to build something that can actually be used, as opposed to our building something for training purposes and then tearing it down."

Sgt. Scott Slater, Hunter B.O.S.S. representative, negotiates an obstacle on "The Hunter Mile." On May 22, leaders from the 92nd Engineer Bn. and the Hunter garrison commander, cut the ribbon on the newest obstacle course on Hunter Army Airfield. The Hunter Mile features eight obstacles. It was constructed by the Equipment Platoon of the 530rd Engineer Co., 92nd Engineer Bn.

Summer safety

Water safety - To prevent drowning, avoid alcohol when swimming or boating. Wear a lifejacket whenever you are on a boat. Make sure young children are supervised at all times when near the beach, on a boat, or by a pool or hot tub. Don't swim alone or in bad weather. Learn to swim and teach your children to swim. We also recommend that you learn CPR in case of an emergency.

Sun safety - Protect against sunburn and heat stroke. Wear sunscreen with at least a Sun Protection Factor 15 or higher and apply it generously throughout the day. Wear a hat outdoors and a good pair of sunglasses to protect your eyes. Drink plenty of water, especially when in the sun or if you are sweating heavily. If you feel faint or nauseous, get into a cool place immediately.

Travel safety - Do not drink and drive or travel with anyone who has been drinking. Take along a first aid kit to help you be prepared for common emergencies. Wear your seatbelt at all times. Make sure your vehicle has been properly serviced and is in good working shape before a long road trip. Familiarize yourself with your surroundings if you are in an unfamiliar place and know where the nearest emergency room is. Also, avoid talking or texting on a cell phone while driving.
