Marne 6 sends: Addressing COVID 19 concerns

Maj. Gen. Antonio Aguto
3rd ID Commander

It has recently been brought to my attention that there are rumors of suspected cases of COVID-19 on Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield, involving Soldiers, and I would like to take a minute to address those rumors. Governor Kemp confirmed yesterday that there are now five cases of COVID-19 in the state of Georgia, but none of those are in our local community, or on Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield. Out of an abundance of caution, and due to the spread of COVID-19, I have issued additional guidance to the division and tenant units on both installations to prevent the potential spread of the virus in our community, ensure a timely and focused response to any potential outbreak, if needed, and maintain warfighter readiness.

As the senior mission commander, and in direct coordination with senior medical personnel and our higher headquarters, I have made the decision to enact Enhanced Force Health Protection Measures, and have placed four Soldiers newly arrived to Fort Stewart under observation and monitoring, supervised by the Marne Reception Center cadre and screened regularly by our doctors.

All four Soldiers recently PCS'ed from high risk areas, in this case the Republic of Korea, and my decision falls in line with CDC guidance and recommendations. None of the four Soldiers have shown any symptoms of illness, to include COVID-19, and at this time there are no indications that any Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield personnel have been infected with COVID-19.

The health and welfare of our Soldiers, Family members and civilians, as well as the local community, is paramount and our efforts are directed at detection and the prevention of the spread of this illness. The very best way to prevent the spread of this virus is to avoid other people who are sick, wash your hands often with soap and water, and if that is not an option, use hand sanitizer with at least 60% alcohol.

I ask that you continue to follow the CDC, WWW.CDC.GOV/CORONAVIRUS/2019-NCOV/INDEX.HTML, for the most up-to-date information, as well as the Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield Garrison and 3rd Infantry Division Facebook pages for information related to our local communities. Additionally, the TRICARE Nurse Hotline is available 24 hours, seven days a week at 1-800-TRICARE, Option 1.

3CAB integrates with Hungarian forces

Marne Air Soldiers from 2-3 General Support Aviation Battalion, 3rd Combat Aviation Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division, conducted an Air Assault demonstration called Hawk Strike on March 5 alongside Soldiers from 1st Battalion, 8th Cavalry Regiment, 2nd Armored Brigade Combat Team, 1st Cavalry Division, and Hungarian 2nd Special Operations Forces, near Újdör gd Base, Hungary.

Hawk Strike is a realistic training exercise that demonstrates the ability to work alongside our Hungarian allies in a complex training environment, said Lt. Col. Kenneth Ferguson, Battalion Commander, 2-3 GSAB, 3rd CAB, 3rd ID.

“When we work together we aren’t necessarily trying to teach each other, but we always learn from each other,” Ferguson said. “By understanding how the Hungarian Defense Force tactically maneuvers, we can integrate, fight and operate together seamlessly.”

The open communication and willingness to learn from each other allowed each unit to conduct movements in a realistic, high-intensity environment to ensure readiness and the ability to fully integrate with any NATO partner and ally.

“The most significant tactic we’ve learned from the Hungarian Defense Force is the importance of signals and different ways to communicate,” said Capt. Daniel Bader, Charlie Company Commander, 1-8 Cav., 2ABCT, 1CD. “We used a lot of visual signals, such as smoke grenades and flares, to allow us to clearly communicate what we were doing so that we could fight together, despite the language barrier.”

Training with allies allows U.S. Army units to build interoperability with their European counterparts across the continent. The Army’s presence in Europe offers reassurance to its allies that it remains committed to NATO and the European defense.

“The disciplined professionals of the Hungarian Defense Force gave us the chance to build multinational relationships and showcase our proficiency during Hawk Strike,” Ferguson said. “We’ve formed a strong partnership and an understanding for how they employ their combat power.”

By conducting Hawk Strike, Marne Air Soldiers are able to maintain readiness and proficiency, along with preparing for the upcoming exercise, Defender-Europe 20. Defender 20 is slated to be the largest deployment of Soldiers for a European exercise in twenty-five years, adding up to nearly 20,000 U.S. Soldiers.

Extending mentorship beyond the Army

Sgt. Laurissa Hodges
3IDSB Public Affairs

When most people meet Sgt. 1st class Akia Crutchfield, the first thing they notice is the Drill Sergeant patch, which to many Soldiers means a serious, no-nonsense person, but Crutchfield sees herself in a much different light.

"I think many people see me as I see myself; a positive, very motivated and inspirational person," Crutchfield said. "I can be rough around the edges due to my strong personality, but over time that smooths out depending on the relationship that I and that person develop."

Crutchfield, a senior supply sergeant with Headquarters and Headquarters Company, Special Troops Battalion, 3rd Infantry Division Sustainment Brigade, stands out amongst her peers when it comes to mentoring Soldiers.

"When I first met Sgt. 1st class Crutchfield, it was during Warfighter last year," said Sgt. Troy Johnson, a signal support systems specialist with HHC, STB, 3IDSB. "Leading from the front, she showed a lot of positive energy and was proud to mentor Soldiers."

Crutchfield began her military career when she joined Dec. 28, 2005, with a personal mission to lead and mentor Soldiers on a larger scale which led her to attendance and graduation from drill sergeant school on Fort Jackson, South Carolina, September 2015.

"Becoming a drill sergeant had always been a dream of mine ever since I joined the Army," Crutchfield said. "I respected the poise and discipline that I saw in drill sergeants and I wanted to be an example to new Soldiers. Becoming a drill sergeant gave me the opportunity to reach (more than) 2,000 trainees whether they graduated or not."

Four duty stations later, Crutchfield came to 3IDSB as a senior logistical enlisted advisor to the brigade commander.

"I manage subordinate battalions and 12 subordinate companies' supply room," Crutchfield said. "I also manage financial liability investigations, provide internal support in the form of transportation planning, food services support, supply and equipment distribution and logistics personnel movement."

to junior and senior enlisted Soldiers in 3IDSB, her mentoring ambitions exceed beyond her military occupation.

Crutchfield volunteers with Camouflaged Sisters, where shedding awareness on successful women who have served and are still serving the military. She is also an advocate for spreading awareness about the increase in homeless female veterans through Final Salute, Inc.

Crutchfield also volunteers with Children and Youth Sports on Fort Stewart, Georgia, as the basketball and track coach while also being the host of a podcast and managing a Facebook page.

Crutchfield hosts a podcast called 'I Can't Make This *ISH Up' where she provide tips and tricks to surviving adulthood, motherhood and Army life while shedding light on the talented Soldiers that the Army has.

While participating in those extracurricular activities, Crutchfield found the time to independently publish a short compilation of poems and be a part of two anthologies while currently working on her second independent book.

"What drives me is my dedication for success and my need to be a positive example for my children," said Crutchfield.

Crutchfield aligns her goals around mentoring and seeks to reach an audience in need of personal and professional growth.

"Stay true to the positive you, and do not let an organization or a group of people steer you away from what makes you wonderfully you," Crutchfield said. "Be a leader and take care of your subordinates because the mission cannot happen without our greatest tool: the Soldier."

Army Reserve app keeps Soldiers connected to units

Joe Lacdan
Army News Service

FORT MEADE, Md. – The Army Reserve's mobile application, the Double Eagle, is now being developed by the 75th Innovation Command, lawmakers were told.

The Army Reserve originally planned to release the app in 2019, said Lt. Gen. Charles Luckey, chief of the Army Reserve and commander of the U.S. Army Reserve Command. He touted the app early last year as a powerful recruiting tool to help the Army meet its end-strength goals.

"It's better than it was when I reported last year," Luckey told the House Appropriations Committee's defense subcommittee hearing Tuesday, but added "It's still not where I want it to be."

Luckey said that he would like the app to remain current and relevant for Army recruits in the 18- to 20-year-old age group.

The mobile app has a user-friendly interface similar to messaging applications like WhatsApp. It's designed to help increase Soldier readiness by providing a secure medium to connect Soldiers to their commands and one another.

Soldiers can also use a special capability in the app called "Refer a Friend" where they can refer potential recruits immediately by tapping a button. The potential recruits will then be in immediate contact with an Army Reserve recruiter.

Other interactive features include push notifications, live polling, a group messaging capability and an option to share locations. Soldiers can also provide accountability simply by using the check-in option when arriving at a new duty station, training exercise or unit meeting.

The Army Reserve has set a 189,800 end-strength goal for fiscal year 2021 -- a marginal increase from its 2020 goal, and Luckey said the app should be able to help in reaching that number.

The app's ability to connect Soldiers to command teams could also have an impact in helping prevent Soldier suicides, Luckey said. Using an "Emergency Safety Check" option, leaders and commanders can communicate with Soldiers by locating them.

Unit leaders can access the "leaderbook" tool, which allows them to send alerts to their units and manage command information.

The 75th Innovation Command, which is designing the app, is a Reserve command headquartered in Houston. It was established two years ago to help drive modernization and technology advancement in support of Army modernization and to advance readiness and lethality.

"They are now supporting this element with some of the best app developers in the country," Luckey said.

The Army's Futures Command, located three hours west in Austin, Texas, works in coordination with the two-star Reserve command to drive modernization efforts. The 75th IC provides access to private-sector innovation and recruits technology innovators to the Army Reserve.

"This is an ongoing effort to make sure we are not missing opportunities to make sure we are very closely connected with the private sector," Luckey said. "And making sure we are gaining and retaining talent that is working in the private sector and in other aspects of the public sector."

While suicides within the reserves has declined in recent years, Luckey said that the problem continues to remain a concern. The general said that Soldiers who remain unemployed or underemployed will be closely watched. A recent report showed that 50 percent of Soldiers who committed or attempted suicide either were unemployed or did not have sufficient employment.

"That obviously becomes an added stressor for them," Luckey said. "I would argue that it probably increases their sense or lack ... of self-worth. The app is going to be critical for us to be able to increase that connectivity in the other 28 days of the month. But also enables to help better help our Soldiers find meaningful employment."

Provisions added to Tenant Bill of Rights

Devon Suits
Army News Service

WASHINGTON – The tenant bill of rights, signed by Defense senior leaders last week, may soon include three more key provisions to help rebuild trust about privatized housing, officials said.

The document has 15 provisions to ensure servicemembers and their Families receive fair treatment under the Military Housing Privatization Initiative. It was signed Feb. 25 by Secretary of Defense Mark Esper, Secretary of the Army Ryan McCarthy and the other service secretaries.

The three additional provisions propose to provide military tenants a dispute resolution process, the right to withhold rent until a dispute is resolved, and access to a building's maintenance history before the move-in date, officials told the House Committee on Appropriations' military subcommittee.

"Since early last year, the DOD has been working to address the concerns of our military Families," said Pete Potochney, the acting assistant secretary of defense for sustainment, in written testimony to the Capitol Hill hearing.

"We recognize and acknowledge that our oversight of the program had not been up to the standards established at the outset," which includes leadership engagement, he added.

The tenant bill of rights included inputs from close to 200,000 households. Within the original provisions, Soldiers are given the right to reside in a house and community that meets health and environmental standards. They are also assured the right to report inadequate housing or deficiencies without fear of reprisal or retaliation.

Additional provisions under the document include the right of access to a military tenant advocate or a military legal assistance attorney through their installation's housing management office.

maintenance staff. Further, they were assured access to an electronic work order system, where they can request maintenance and track progress of the work.

The National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2020 included significant modifications and additions to the MHPI legal framework, Potochney said, rendering the initial bill of rights insufficient. To fix the issue, Defense officials are working with MHPI partners on improved dispute resolution and rent withholding processes, he added.

The tenant bill of rights, along with an MHPI tenant responsibilities document, "will help provide consistency across the program for all residents, many of whom live on multiple installations during their career," Potochney said.

"Rebuilding trust with service members and their families will take time, and we are committed to this effort," he added. The reconstitution of program oversight will restore "trust with military families living in privatized housing, and enhance the spirit of collaboration with our private sector partners ... ensuring the viability of the program well into the future."

Putting the green in St. Patrick's Day

Amanda Price
DPW Environmental Division

What began as a religious feast day for the patron saint of Ireland has become an international festival celebrating Irish culture with parades, dancing, special foods and a whole lot of green. Although the original color associated with St. Patrick was blue, the color green represented both the emerald green landscape of Ireland as well as the shamrock, which St. Patrick used in his teachings of the holy trinity.

So, now that we're caught up on our history, let's take the green theme up a notch with the added flair of sustainability. Bit by bit, the world is going green and what better way to celebrate eco-progress than on the greenest of holidays.

Included in the list below are some tips on how you can embrace your inner Irish and lower your carbon footprint at the same time.

- Don't litter. Whether you're at a parade or simply walking through the city, be sure to clean up after yourself. Make sure that your trash is put in a trashcan and all recyclable items are placed in a recycling container.

- Walk, ride a bike or use public transportation to get to the festivities. By not driving, you'll reduce your carbon footprint and save money on gas and parking.

- Use reusable, compostable, or recyclable plates and cups.

- Save your decorations, plastic jewelry and crazy costumes for use at future St. Patrick's Day festivities.

- Use natural, rather than artificial food dye to make your food and drinks a little more festive. Some items that can be used to make the color green are matcha powder, spirulina powder, parsley juice, wheatgrass juice, spinach juice, spinach powder and parsley powder.

Remember, don't just wear green this St. Patrick's Day...LIVE GREEN!

– Soldiers from the 2nd Brigade Combat Team, 3rd Infantry Division, gathered with Polish troops from the Drawsko Land Forces Training Center in Drawsko Pomorskie, Poland and 2nd Mechanized Brigade, to commemorate the 75th anniversary of Drawsko's liberation.

The town was controlled by German forces during World War II, and was nearly destroyed during the battle that took place on March 4, 1945.

Among those participating in the wreath-laying ceremony were Col. Patrick O'Neal, commander, 2nd Brigade Combat Team, 3rd Infantry Division; Col. Paul McCarthy, 561st Regional Sustainment Group, 21st Theater Sustainment Command; Lt. Col. Ryan Perusich, Drawsko Pomorskie Training Area Coordination Center, 1st Infantry Division Forward; and Krzysztof Czerwinski, mayor of Drawsko Pomorskie, Poland.

"Today is a great day to pay tribute to not only our soldiers, but also our civilians who endured the tragic history," Czerwinski said. "This is a great occasion to say thank you to the U.S. Soldiers who are attending the ceremony."

U.S. Soldiers and Polish troops, as well as local citizens, paid their respects to the fallen Polish service-members by placing candles and wreaths on their headstones.

Students from Georgia High School High Tech took a tour of Hunter Army Airfield in Savannah March 6.

GHSHT provides youth with a connection to academic and career development experiences and opportunities. During the tour, students learned about opportunities through the military.

“Rather than sitting in class, the students have an opportunity to talk and interact with people in their desired career fields to make a better decision after they complete high school,” said Carmen Cates, Georgia High School High Tech program manager. “Often students want to become nurses, Soldiers, doctors or a pilot, but they do not always understand what that fully entails. This program introduces people in those particular fields to the students, so they can make a better educated decision on their futures.”

The GHSHT program tour consisted of students from Effingham County

High School and South Effingham High School.

The tour consisted of a question-and-answer session with members of Hunter’s garrison team, a walk-through of the U. S. Coast Guard hanger, lunch at the dining facility, and concluded with a tour of the Georgia National Guard hanger.

During the question and answer session with Command Sgt. Major Tremayne Robbins, Hunter Army Airfield Garrison’s senior enlisted leader and 1st Lt. Eve Sampson, an engineer for Hunter Army Airfield Garrison, students asked questions about basic training and the opportunities that the military offers.

Cates said GHSHT is a program focused on providing students opportunities through interactions with career fields that students are interested in.

Expanding on GHSHT’s goal of educating and informing students, Hunter’s senior enlisted advisor, Command Sgt. Major Robbins, said, “If you stick with your path, your opportunities are endless.”

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

Pursue the ideals of Christ

1st Lt. Geena Start
83rd CBRN Bn. Chaplain

Often, we are faced with the harsh reality of our existence; tragedy and adversity are inevitable. At times it can be a daunting task to wake up and face each day with a positive outlook. In order to maintain a positive outlook we need to look above and beyond our natural state which is fraught with flaws and insecurities. It can be very difficult to look beyond a difficult situation or circumstance. However, we will be much better off if we do. It is important to be present, aware, and grounded in reality but it is critical that we hold ourselves to a higher standard. We need to focus upon an ideal or set of ideals in order to overcome harsh circumstances and come out stronger for it. Ideals also serve us when life is going great and we have no complaints. Having ideals that we constantly strive towards serve to enrich our lives and the lives of all those we encounter.

Webster's dictionary defines an ideal as "a standard of perfection" or "a principle to be aimed at." As a Christian, I look to the standard of perfection found in Christ. Christ's ministry here on earth provides us with a flawless example of several ideals. Two of these ideals are perseverance and love. Jesus' earthly ministry teaches us ideal perseverance. In the face of adversity and doubt Jesus continued his ministry day in and day out knowing that he would be sacrificed as a ransom for our sins. Yet, He persevered with a ministry of love and compassion in order to bring God's mercy upon the world. God has a love so pure that He asks nothing in return for His sacrifice. God's love is so great that not only do we have the opportunity to be saved, we have the opportunity to be sanctified. Those that choose to believe in Him receive the gift of the Holy Spirit so that they can be encouraged and sanctified in the pursuit of the godly ideals that Christ exemplified so well.

We are all human and we will make mistakes, however, the pursuit of perfection is what we are called to. We can all benefit from adopting ideals and pursuing them relentlessly. As a Christian, I have chosen to believe and pursue the ideals of Christ. I can testify that as I seek Christ more and more and allow the Holy Spirit to work within, encouraging and sanctifying me, I have been able to maintain a more positive outlook on life, even within the midst of tragedy. I know that my pursuit of the ideals found in Christ has given me great strength and reassurance and that this pursuit will continue to benefit my life and my ministry.

Chatham County JROTC cadets take post tour for their futures

Chatham County Junior Reserve Officers' Training Course cadets receive a walkthrough of the different aircraft Army Warrant Officers train to fly in March 4 during the Hunter Army Airfield JROTC Day.

The Assignment Interactive Model 2.0 or AIM 2, for example, highlights the recognition of the need to keep senior officers on active duty by giving them the opportunity to choose the location at which they wish to continue their service.

"The ability to put on that Army uniform and go to desired locations all over the country and overseas was a driving force for me as a warrant officer," said Brian Farrell, an instructor-operator at the Hunter flight simulation complex and a retired chief warrant officer four. "These cadets hear that, and see the different jobs available, and you can almost see the gears turning in their heads with possibility."

Not every cadet in attendance plans to enlist or commission into the Army or other branches of service, but the cadets left the day with more knowledge in their pockets than they came in with, Burns said.

"The best part of the event is the ability to interact with real Soldiers and Airmen and hear their stories about what they've been able to accomplish through the military and give these kids hope for a future they have chosen," Burns said.

For information about enlistment, Reserve Officers' Training Course and what the military branches have to offer, visit your nearest recruitment office or visit www.GoArmy.com.

The 3rd Combat Aviation Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division, hosted a Junior Reserve Officers' Training Course Day where Chatham County cadets were treated to various Army presentations, March 4, at Hunter Army Airfield in Savannah.

The JROTC day included static displays, a tour of the Hunter aircraft hangar, a discussion panel and a flight simulator.

"When the students get the chance to come to a place like this and see the equipment and the Soldiers and Airmen working in real time, it shows them that there are many paths to choose from in the military, and they can still acquire a higher education that the military can pay for," said retired Navy Chief Petty Officer Russel Burns, a naval science instructor in the Jenkins High School JROTC program.

Many of the cadets were unaware of the jobs that exist beyond infantryman or Army Ranger. One such cadet was Aleeyah Williams, a Naval cadet attending Jenkins High School.

Williams said she was pleased to hear about jobs being available in the military where servicemembers can support the fight without being the front line of defense against the enemy.

Williams believes she is best fit for a career in nursing, and she is exploring different universities to further her medical goals. The discussion panel portion of the JROTC day gave her a chance to ask questions related to her pursuit.

Burns spoke of a field trip where he took the cadets to see a Navy band which gave the cadets insight to another option, should they choose to enlist into military service.

"The cadets were able to see that they can be anything from engineers to musicians through military service," Burns said. "They don't have to be combat engineers if they don't want to, but still want to serve their country."

The Army is adapting to modern-day recruitment strategies widely used in the civilian sector in order to recruit potential Soldiers and retain the best it has to offer.

A tank crew from the 2ABCT, 3rd ID, display the Sullivan Cup after earning the top spot in the Sullivan Cup competition May 4, 2018, on Fort Benning.

Sullivan Cup slated for May

Special to The Frontline

FORT BENNING – The rumble of Abrams tanks and the orange flash of their cannons as they blast targets downrange will be center-stage at Fort Benning May 4 - 8 when top Abrams crews from the Army, Marine Corps and three partner countries take part in the prestigious Sullivan Cup Tank Crew Competition.

The 3rd Infantry Division will be compete as they defend their title from 2018 when Company B, 3rd Battalion, 67th Armored Regiment, 2nd Armored Brigade Combat Team, 3rd ID, earned first place in the competition.

Staff Sgt. Johnathan Werner, tank commander, Cpl. Justin Harris, gunner, Pvt. Brandon Zacher, loader, and Pvt. Dekken Sanders, driver, the winning tank crew had only worked together for a few months before joining the competition in May 2018.

Competing crews undergo five days of events that test how well they can apply their skills to the crew tasks and physical and mental stresses they'd face in combat.

"We're gonna find the most lethal tank crew – that's the focus of the whole competition," said Col. J. Frederick Dente, commander of the 316th Cavalry Brigade, which oversees the Sullivan Cup.

Werner described the competition as "fierce."

"This is stuff that we do on a day-to-day basis -- tanker grade gunnery, maneuvering -- this is our job," Werner said. "But when you put everyone in one area, the best of the best you possibly in the entire world, and then you compete and you have a bunch of alpha males, it kind of speaks for itself."

Sullivan Cup is open to the public and Dente said there'll be lots for spectators to see.

"If you want to see the best tankers in the world, putting their tank through its paces, competing for the honor of being identified as the best tank crew in the United States Army, the Kuwaiti, Saudi or Australian army or the U.S. Marine Corps," said Dente, "then this is the place to come and see it."

The Sullivan Cup is hosted by the U.S. Army Armor School, part of Fort Benning's Maneuver Center of Excellence. The MCoE trains the Army's Armor and Infantry, which compose the nation's maneuver force.

Fourteen crews are slated to compete, said Maj. Brant Auge, brigade operations officer with MCoE's 316th Cavalry Brigade.

Of the U.S. teams, eight are from armored elements of the: 1st Infantry Division, 1st Cavalry Division, 1st Armored Division, 3rd Infantry Division, 4th Infantry Division, 11th Armored Cavalry Division. Two will be coming from armored elements of the Army National Guard. One will be from an armored unit of the U.S. Marine Corps. The foreign partners are sending one team each.

Exact times for certain events are still being set and can be viewed online, along with much other information on Sullivan Cup, at: <https://www.usarmy-sullivancup.com>.

Survivor Outreach Services to issue access cards

Special to The Frontline

A new access policy is making it easier for Gold Star and next-of-kin Family members to enter installations across the Army.

Soon, eligible members will be able to receive a new digital access badge to enter post unescorted on Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield, once the electronic access control system at the gates is upgraded to Automated Installation Entry later this year.

For now, surviving Family members can still use the DA Form 1602 card issued at the Casualty Assistance Center or have a digital access card issued to them at the Visitor Control Center.

The Fort Stewart Survivor Outreach Services support coordinator works with the Directorate of Emergency Services to get the required background clearance for applicants to receive post access. The driver's license or state identification used for documentation must be in compliance with the Real ID Act of 2005.

The process will be the same for the new Survivor Access Badge once the AIE is operational. The new card does not grant any additional benefits or privileges, nor does it allow cardholders to escort additional guests onto post.

According to the U.S. Army Installation Management Command, the Survivor Access Badge will be consistent across the Army and will be valid for three years.

"The Army values people, especially our Gold Star spouses and Family members," said Lt. Gen. Douglas Gabram, commanding general, U.S. Army Installation Management Command. "This change allows them to more easily receive the benefits and services to which they are entitled and helps enable them to remain connected to the Army."

The new process was a result of the John S. McCain National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2019, which recognized survivors as having a valid requirement for long-term, unescorted access to Army installations.

Fort Stewart hosts several events annually to honor Gold Star and next-of-kin Family members, and the Survivor Outreach Services staff provides support services ranging from bereavement counseling, benefits assistance and
