AAFES, installation honor Vietnam veterans

Steve Hart
Hunter Army Airfield Public Affairs

March 29 was National Vietnam War Veterans Day. For the second consecutive year, the Army & Air Force Exchange Service honored Vietnam veterans for their service and sacrifice with a brief ceremony to present the veterans their Vietnam Veteran Lapel pin at both Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield's Post Exchanges.

Fifty local Vietnam Veterans were presented Vietnam Veteran lapel pins at the Hunter ceremony, by Command Sgt. Maj. Lavander Wilkerson, Hunter Army Airfield command sergeant major.

"The Vietnam Veteran Lapel Pin is a lasting memento of the nation's thanks and is provided in partnership between the United States of America's Vietnam War Commemoration and AAFES," Wilkerson said. "I am honored to be able to help honor service members who served before me and their families who served beside them."

The Hunter Army Airfield garrison commander, Lt. Col. Kenneth Dwyer, was on-hand to help hand out pins at the Fort Stewart event.

Dwyer expressed his appreciation for the nearly 40 veterans and spouses who participated in the Stewart event. He said today's Soldiers and their Families share a bond with their Vietnam era brethren, realizing the sacrifice that Vietnam veterans made then, and the continued service veterans continue to make in supporting our Soldiers and their Families.

Many of the veterans and their Families in attendance said they appreciated the observance.

"I am grateful for Hunter Army Airfield and AAFES to honor my fellow Vietnam veterans," said Jeffrey Irving, an Army veteran who served in a long-range reconnaissance unit in the 101st Airborne Division in Vietnam, attending the Hunter event. "So many Americans answered our nation's call to duty and served not just honorably but with valor, yet were denigrated when we came home. This small ceremony means so very much to us."

Strong Bonds support Raider Soldiers

Maj. Pete Bogart
1ABCT Public Affairs

Army training events usually involve PowerPoint briefings or field training exercises but several hundred Soldiers from the 1st Armored Brigade Combat Team, 3rd Infantry Division, have taken part in training that involves touring Charleston, South Carolina, and relaxing pool side at the Great Wolf Lodge in Concord, North Carolina, as part of the brigade's Strong Bonds program.

"My favorite part of the retreat was getting out of the barracks and getting to know people outside of a work environment," said Cpl. Juyeon Yoo, a medic with 2nd Battalion, 7th Infantry Regiment, who attended a single Soldiers retreat in Charleston. "The scheduled activities were fun but also only took about six hours of the weekend so we had plenty of time to visit the city."

During the first three months of 2019, the Raider Brigade executed eight Strong Bonds events and already have four scheduled for April through June. The locations for upcoming events are still not finalized but in addition to the trips already mentioned, retreats this year have been held in Jacksonville, Florida, and Hilton Head, South Carolina, said Staff Sgt. Daniel Eloi, the 1ABCT Religious Affairs NCOIC.

Retreats are normally held as battalion events and are for either single Soldiers or married couples. The unit ministry team from the 1st Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment, is expanding the scope of their retreats to include single parents and will be opening the event up to single parents from across the brigade.

"We have always done singles, couples, or families, but this time we are going to target Single Soldiers with dependents," said Chaplain (Capt.) Abram Staten, 1-41 FA. "It will be a great time to spend with your child or children without the stress of paying a babysitter or worrying about the cost."

Strong Bonds is a unit-based, chaplain-led program designed to strengthen the Army Family through relationship education and skills training. Retreats are conducted off post to provide a fun, safe, and secure environment.

"We are not going to change your life or marriage in three days but our hope is that the training and time you will spend with your spouse will start the effect of improving your relationship" said Staten. "Plus the Army is paying for you to relax and how often does that happen, it's worth the experience for that reason alone."

Selected Guard units to increase OPTEMPO in FY20

Joe Lacdan
Army News Service

FORT MEADE, Maryland -- As threats from near-peer adversaries grow, the fiscal year 2020 budget will allow some National Guard units to bump up their operational tempo, Army senior leaders told lawmakers March 26.

Selected units within the 343,500-member Guard will need to mobilize and deploy faster in case conflicts with Russia or China arise, Secretary of the Army Mark T. Esper testified to the Senate Armed Services Committee.

"I don't believe Russia and China will give us the time to build combat power in the future," he said.

Gen. Mark A. Milley, the Army's chief of staff, said training time for these selected units will increase and combat training center rotations will jump annually from two to four. Milley said the Guard will need to modestly raise its numbers in FY20. The Guard fell 8,000 members below its projected end strength in fiscal 2018.

"The Army is dependent upon the National Guard and the U.S. Army Reserve to execute our wartime mission," Milley said. "It cannot be done without it."

Esper lauded the efforts of Guard members from Nebraska, Minnesota and other states who assisted rescue and relief efforts following catastrophic flooding in parts of the Midwest this past week. More than 340 Guard members have participated in search and rescue missions, delivering needed relief to stranded and displaced residents.

"Our hearts go out to the people of Nebraska and what they're going through right now," Esper said. "It sure is going to take some time and we really feel for them."

In recent years, the Guard has provided crucial aid to residents affected by Hurricanes Michael and Florence, as well as helping with relief efforts for California wildfire victims.

"The Guard is no longer a strategic reserve," Esper said. "It is an operational force and it's proved itself very well over the past many years."

Readiness and deployability will be crucial not only for the Guard, but across the service, Milley said, adding the Army expects to have 66 percent of its active-duty brigades and 33 percent of Guard brigades at "full states of readiness."

The Army has increased its number of fully-ready, brigade combat teams by 55 percent over the past two years. The Army expects to reach its highest levels of readiness by 2028, Milley said.

Growing Threat

In the race to meet the rising challenge of Russia and China, the Army's senior leaders asked lawmakers to approve its $182 billion FY20 budget proposal which will also provide more money for its modernization efforts to develop future capability.

"We intend to regain the competitive advantage," Milley said.

The Army has been developing the Extended Range Cannon Artillery, or ERCA, which has undergone testing at Yuma Proving Ground in Arizona. Esper, who recently visited Yuma, said that Russian air defense has surpassed U.S. capabilities and the cannon will help U.S. Forces regain its edge.

Russia has been steadily undergoing its own modernization efforts, Esper said. Field testing for Russia's next-generation tank, the T-14 Armata, is currently underway, as well as development of advanced Russian air defense and artillery systems.

"Russia is still the only country on earth that is actually an existential threat to the United States of America," Milley said. "They are the only ones who have the capability to bring that level of destruction to our country. And they have been very aggressive in the last decade or so."

Milley said increasing the Army's capabilities in Europe will be crucial to defending the nation against the Russian threat and said additional funding in the budget proposal will go toward deterring Russian aggression.

"The Russians are modernizing their fighting vehicles," Esper said. "They are modernizing their air defense systems. Across the board they are doing things that we need to (do)."

Meanwhile, China continues to invest in cutting-edge technologies, including artificial intelligence, directed energy and hypersonic weapons. The U.S. Army continues to upgrade its capabilities, he said, most notably long-range precision fires, the service's top modernization priority.

When asked about the possibility of reducing the number of troops stationed on the Korean Peninsula, Milley said U.S. forces are currently in "good shape" in the Pacific to handle potential threats by North Korea.

The Army took bold steps toward reaching its future modernization goals with the establishment last summer of Army Futures Command in Austin, Texas, Milley said. This will hasten the acquisition process and get needed equipment and vehicles to units faster, he said.

"In the last 17 years, our strategic competitors have eroded our military advantages," the general told senators. "With your help, starting two years ago, we began to restore our competitive advantage and our recent budgets have helped improve readiness and laid the groundwork for future modernization. And we ask with this budget, that you sustain these efforts."

IMCOM teaches supervisors the colors of success

Pat Young

Fort Stewart Public Affairs

Twenty-four employees from across Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield participated in an Installation Management Command-sponsored Career Program-29 supervisor class on Fort Stewart March 25 through 29 at the Sgt. 1st Class Paul R. Smith Education Center.

Larry A. Doxtater the primary instructor for the 40-hour course said the class was designed, in part, to help develop trust and positive attitudes in the work place. He said one of the considerations for the course was understanding the personality types Orange, Gold, Green and Blue by adjusting for emotional intelligence and developing crucial conversations.

Orange refers to a generally spontaneous, energetic, action-oriented person. Gold is a rule-driven, family-oriented, planning type. Greens are analytical or intuitive deep-thinkers and research oriented individuals. Blues are empathetic people who are often positive, compassionate and nurturing – the ones who often bring treats to their fellow co-workers.

Doxtater said participants during the class were very receptive and appeared to present a diverse cross section of the Fort Stewart community.

Right: IMCOM instructor Larry A. Doxtater teaches the CP-29 supervisors course on Fort Stewart, March 29 at the Sgt. 1st Class Paul R. Smith Education Center.

“This is a great class. Everyone seems to be very professional and attentive – ready to learn,” Doxtater said. “It is nice to have a wide-spectrum of career fields, race, gender, and experience levels.”

Prior to attending the course, Dr. Skytina Felder-Jones, a Fort Stewart victim advocate coordinator, wondered if it would be a cookie-cutter class or if it would involve critical thinking.

“The True Colors section of the class was rather eye-opening,” Felder-Jones said. “It was something you (as a supervisor) can apply right away.”

She noted sometimes you have to step back from the content of the issue, and identify what the goal is. You have to develop a strategy and work together to reach that goal.

Thomas Hamlin with the Fort Stewart Directorate of Public Works Environmental Branch, working in the Fish and Wildlife department, agreed with Felder-Jones.

“Sometimes you have to step back and realize that everyone has a different perspective on issues,” he said. “You just have to find a way to work things out.”

Hamlin, a 20-year Army veteran with 18 years of civilian experience, said the class was refreshing.

“Everyone here volunteered to come to this class. I think it has been very effective,” Hamlin said. “And I’m sure there are a lot of people who could get something out of it.”

Individuals are encouraged to seek professional development and work directly with their supervisors. They can also reach out to Dr. Robin Ellert, robin.k.ellert.civ@mail.mil, the garrison workforce training and development specialist, who can help them research other opportunities that are line up with their future goals.

Army Earth Day message: Sustain the environment to secure the mission

Alex Beehler

Assistant Secretary of the Army
(Installations, Energy & Environment)

On April 22, the United States Army will join the Nation in celebrating Earth Day. Earth Day is an opportunity to emphasize our commitment to stewardship of the lands and environmental resources entrusted to us; the lands where our Soldiers, Families and Civilians train, live, and work. The Army's participation in Earth Day aims to inspire awareness and appreciation of the environment and how sustaining the environment secures the military mission. The success of the Army's warfighting readiness mission is inseparable from the environmental resources that are essential to accomplishing that mission.

Readiness and modernization require access to realistic natural landscapes and environmental conditions that Soldiers experience during combat. The Army sustains our environment by maintaining and enhancing natural and cultural resources, and making certain our air and water is clean and safe. In sustaining the environment, the Army secures the mission by ensuring installation lands have the capabilities to support readiness and modernization.

This Earth Day, and every day, we all have an opportunity to make a difference. By making the right choices today, our Army will remain the world's premier military force into the future. Please take the time to find out what the Army is doing for Earth Day 2019 (<https://aec.army.mil/index.php/earth-day>). I encourage you to participate in Army Earth Day events. Do your part to help sustain the environment - the mission of the Army depends on it!

Army public health professionals celebrate National Public Health Week

Doug Holl
Army Public Health Center

April 1 isn't just for April Fools, it also marks the beginning of National Public Health Week, which runs from April 1-7. Sponsored by the American Public Health Association, the goal of NPHW is to raise public health awareness, which falls right in line with Army Public Health Center's goal to support active living through the promotion of readiness and resilience.

Prevention of disease and injury is at the heart of the APHC mission and the NPHW themes, including healthy communities and technology and public health, nest very well with Army public health key initiatives. Throughout the week, APHC will be promoting these themes as well as highlighting some of the key findings in the recently released 2018 Health of the Force report. This year's report provides an evidence-based portrait of the health and well-being of the U.S. Army Active Component Soldier population. Some key findings include the importance of mental skills training, as well as the key role embedded behavior health teams and Army Wellness Centers play in improving Soldier physical fitness.

"The Health of the Force report continues to provide meaningful data and information through rigorous research and analyses," said John Resta, director of the U.S. Army Public Health Center and Acting Deputy Chief of Staff of Public Health for the U.S. Army Medical Command. "National Public Health Week is a great opportunity for us to promote healthy living and draw attention to this year's report."

Since the Army's inception, Army Public Health professionals have focused public health efforts on building partnerships. In their work with installations and military medical treatment facilities, Army public health experts advise commanders and leaders about a broad range of public health initiatives and preventive actions. All have the same basic goals of encouraging healthy behaviors and standardizing public health efforts according to best practices (methods that have evidence to support their use).

Help support this year's campaign by following APHC on Facebook, Twitter or Instagram. You can also keep up with all of this year's Army health campaigns by visiting the APHC website.

Sharing thoughts on perfection

Maj. John Hubbs

Plans and operations chaplain

"Therefore you shall be perfect, just as your Father in heaven is perfect." - Matthew 5:48 (NKJV)

Fifty-one years ago, Martin Luther King Jr. was assassinated in Memphis. MLK was and is a hero to millions of Americans, myself included. In my case it was for more than just the cause he championed.

From the time I was a teenager, I sensed a call to minister, especially to the role of the preacher. Whenever I had the chance to see video of his speeches, I was absolutely amazed at his ability to influence people through the spoken word. I read biographies about him. I watched documentaries on the civil rights movement. Several years later, I worshiped one Sunday at the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church in Montgomery, Alabama. It was here King served as pastor when the bus boycott began. I remember looking at the pulpit in the church and thinking, "That is where one of the greatest preachers of the twentieth century got his start."

Unfortunately, I also learned things I wish I didn't know. He was far from perfect as a man and minister. His extramarital relationships were well documented. Learning this brought some initial disillusionment for me. Do moral failures negate all the good that someone has accomplished? Would MLK still be remembered as the heroic figure if these aspects of his life had been made known while he was still alive? These were my questions.

What I ultimately decided was despite some of his King David-like failures, MLK was the perfect leader for a critical period in our country's history. God used him in a powerful way. At least, I believe this is true when I listen to the speech he gave the night before his death. He was willing to offer his own life for the cause of equality for all.

"Perfection," in the sense of the word used by Jesus in the Sermon on the Mount, does not imply being free from any flaws or even sins. The word "teleios" refers rather to the perfect fulfillment of one's purpose. Occasionally I hear people talk as if they think God could have no desire for them because of the sins they have committed and battle still. But, God uses flawed people all the time. Referencing a concept taught by Jesus, Dr. King once said, "Everybody can be great... because anybody can serve." Figure out how God has called you to serve, and work at it with all your heart. That is the true pursuit of perfection.

Should we strive to avoid the moral failures of King David, MLK, and countless other heroic figures? Yes. But avoiding sin does not make you perfect if you are not seeking to do anything positive. The most important thing any of us can do in life is discover our purpose and fulfill it. MLK did that, perfectly.

Two 3rd ID Soldiers earn Expert Field Medical Badge

Staff Report

Congratulations go out to Spc. Joseph Lee, 1st Armored Brigade Combat Team, and Sgt. Natalia Howard, Task Force 1-28 from Fort Benning, for earning the Expert Field Medical Badge at Fort Bragg, North Carolina, March 5-18.

Master Sgt. Jeffery Johnson, 3rd ID surgeons cell operations NCO, said prior to the establishment of the EFMB, some Army medical units of V Corps in Europe developed and conducted tests to ensure their Soldiers were trained to the highest level of proficiency required of their wartime mission. These tests lasted for two and half days and consisted of written and practical exercises (identification of types of wounds, bandaging, application of splints, treatment of war casualties, removal of injured personnel from tanks, loading and unloading of patients from helicopters, map reading, aerial photo reading and maintenance of equipment). If they passed the test, they were issued an expert medical Soldier certificate.

He said the EFMB as a Department of the Army special skill award for recognition of exceptional competence and outstanding performance by field medical personnel was recommended in a letter, dated Jan. 20, 1964, with the current prescribed authority in Department of the Army Pamphlet 40-20, 20 September 1999.

"EFMB is arguably the most challenging badge in the Army to earn, so it speaks volumes to the dedication of the individuals to achieve it," Johnson said. "It also validates that training at the unit-level is essential to success."

FY20 budget will fund childcare, family initiatives

Gary Sheftick
Army News Service

WASHINGTON -- During today's testimony, Army senior leaders told lawmakers their fiscal year 2020 request will not cut any programs supporting military families.

"Due diligence was absolutely applied to ensure that there were no cuts that impacted Soldiers and their families," Army Chief of Staff Gen. Mark A. Milley testified Wednesday to the Senate Appropriations Committee's Defense subcommittee.

He was referring to the "night court" process in which senior leaders reviewed every one of the Army's programs to assess how they impacted readiness and lethality.

It was an unprecedented 50 hours of "painstaking deliberations," Secretary of the Army Mark T. Esper said.

"Tough choices" had to be made, Esper said, before submitting the $182.3 billion budget request for FY20. About $30 billion was redirected from legacy programs over the five-year defense plan to fund the Army's six modernization priorities.

"To deter the growing threat posed by great-power competitors ... we must leap ahead to the next generation of combat systems," Esper said. In order to fund development of those systems, cuts had to be made to the number of legacy platforms upgraded.

"There were cuts that impacted others, but not Soldiers and their families," Milley emphasized. "That's sort of the bargain we struck."

"No cuts have been made to the childcare for our Soldiers," Esper said.

"It's access that we're wrestling with," he explained. "I'm looking at a number of policy changes."

First and foremost is to give Soldiers priority for childcare over civilian employees and contractors. "In many cases, that's not what's been happening," Esper said, citing that about 30 percent of daycare centers are filled by "non-priority" personnel.

The Army is looking at expanding capacity at Child Development Centers at some installations, he said.

Esper said he'd also like to look at transitioning to hourly daycare, so that military families would not be required to pay for childcare by the month.

The Army recently saved funding by reforming the way parents sign up for childcare, Esper said.

"We had a redundant management system in place," he said. "Rather than going to the daycare center to sign up, you went to a separate building with separate people. We got rid of that. Now to sign up for daycare, you go just to the daycare center."

Esper said he would like to expand family childcare, or FCC, where family members on base provide childcare at their homes.

He recently signed a directive that allows on-site supervision of children by Army spouses immediately following their FBI background check. Now spouses can begin offering childcare in less than three weeks from arriving at an installation, he told legislators.

"It's a great opportunity, but we need to incentivize that program to expand," he said.

A new Child and Youth Services Employment Tool places the names of spouses interested in conducting childcare into a database following completion of their background check.

"Rather than every time you go to a new assignment -- a new installation -- and go through the check again, we have your name in a database, we'll hold it for five years and you can seamlessly move from base to base to base and get hired immediately," he said.

Esper said as he travels around the Army and visits installations, two issues that come up all the time are childcare and spouse employment. The two are related, he said.

Spouse employment is a "very personal" issue for him, Esper said, dating back to when he served as an infantry officer after graduating from West Point in 1986.

"During my time on active duty, my wife could not get a job when we were at Fort Benning or in Italy, because of frankly discrimination against Army spouses at the time," he said.

"I think our spouses are highly qualified and underemployed," he said.

Army initiatives to hire spouses include an outreach to have states recognize the teaching credentials of other states.

Esper said he is personally engaging with states on this initiative and Tennessee recently signed onto the program. Spouses arriving at Fort Campbell can now immediately apply for teaching jobs in Tennessee, if they have teaching credentials from another state, he said. They do not need to wait for a second set of credentials from Tennessee to begin a teaching job.

Esper also suggested Congress expand the "direct hiring authority" that already exists for certain critical career fields, such as medical fields, and allow military spouses to be hired into federal jobs without competing. Such authority would require legislation, he said.

Programs that support spouses and families definitely impact readiness, Milley said.

"We want our Soldiers to focus on their job," he said.

"If they're worried about their medical care, good housing, mold in the house, good childcare for their children, education, a safe base and so on... then they're not focusing on their job.

"So it's absolutely a readiness issue -- there's a direct correlation to the readiness of the force," he said.

In World War II, only about 10 percent of the Army was married with children, Milley said, while today about 60 percent of the force is married with an average of two children.

Fort Stewart wins installation championship

Howdy, sports fans! Thanks for tuning in to the third edition of our local sports column, Inside Intramural Sports.

In this edition, I highlight the 2019 Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield, 3rd Infantry Division Intramural Basketball Championship, played March 27 at Johnson Fitness Center on Fort Stewart.

Cue up Space Jam's "Hit 'em High" and let's get to work!

The 3rd ID championship is the final competition of each Commander's Cup sports league throughout the year, held between Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield to determine the true installation champions.

For basketball, Fort Stewart was represented by MEDDAC and Hunter Army Airfield was represented by Company A, 603rd Aviation.

MEDDAC was the Cinderella story of the Fort Stewart Commander's Cup league, starting as the No. 7 seed and knocking off some juggernaut teams on their way to winning the Stewart championship. They finished the season at 9-7.

Company A, 603rd Avn. also made a heroic run in Hunter's league to win their championship. They finished the season 11-0.

The anticipation heading into the 3rd ID championship was off-the-charts.

Fort Stewart won the jump ball to begin play.

Hunter dominated the majority of the first half, leading by as many as 12 points at one time. Hunter's Ant Holtzclaw, led all scorers in the first half with 11 points.

As the first half came to a close, Fort Stewart battled their way back, led by Kelvin Henry's strong 10-point performance.

At the end of the first half, the score was 25-21 in favor of Hunter.

It was anyone's game as the second half began.

Hunter came out swinging with a solid defensive performance, pushing their lead up by eight points.

The turning point came with an ill-advised foul by Hunter on a three-point shot. It got worse when Hunter's Terry Thomas was charged with a technical foul.

After some clutch free throws by Henry, Hunter's lead was cut to one point.

Then Fort Stewart's scorers came alive - with a strong showing by Henry and Ray Nichols. Hunter's Holtzclaw and Thomas were the primary offensive threats for Hunter, but struggled to find their rhythm and answer the Stewart offense.

Stewart's decision to isolate Holtzclaw and force the rest of the Hunter team to score paid off big, as Holtzclaw was only able to muster six points in the second half.

Solid defense and an onslaught of scoring by Fort Stewart gave them the lead midway through the second half. They never looked back.

Stewart finished the second half on a 33-21 run and the final score was Fort Stewart 54, Hunter Army Airfield 46.

Congratulations to Fort Stewart for winning the 2019 3rd ID basketball championship and congratulations to Hunter Army Airfield for a great season!

Have a great day and thanks for stopping by, sports fans!
