U.S. Army Public Affairs

WASHINGTON – The Honorable Ryan D. McCarthy, Secretary of the Army, appointed Ben Coronado, a resident of Oro Valley, Arizona, as a new Civilian Aide to the Secretary of the Army during an investiture ceremony on May 14 at Fort Huachuca.

“Our Army is an all-volunteer force, and now more than ever, we rely on our volunteers, such as CASAs, to help build networks, foster relationships and tell the Army story to their communities” McCarthy said. “They are my first phone call into the city and the last handshake as I head back to D.C. Ben will be that contact for me.”

CASAs, a vital part of the Army, promote good relations between the Army and the public and advise the secretary on regional issues.

Each state, the District of Columbia and the five U.S. territories have one or more CASAs to provide vital links between the Army and the communities they serve. CASAs are usually business or civic leaders who possess a keen interest in the welfare of the Army and their communities.

CASAs serve a two-year term without compensation. Terms may be extended to a total of 10 years of service. The secretary may recognize a civilian aide as a CASA Emeritus after 10 years of service with distinguished service.

“I am extremely humbled and grateful to have been selected as a civilian aide to Secretary McCarthy to represent Arizona,” Coronado said. “Having spent six years in active duty and my college years attending the U.S. Military Academy, I truly understand the incredible institution the U.S. Army is and what it represents. I am proud to be a U.S. Army veteran and honored to support the secretary and his office with the initiatives laid before me. I look forward to the work ahead and to ensuring the U.S. Army and its objectives are met here in southern Arizona. Thank you for this great honor – Go Army!”

Coronado is a successful executive leader in the pharmaceutical industry. Coronado graduated from the U.S. Military Academy in 1998 and earned his MBA from the University of Arizona’s Eller School of Business in 2013. He served in the Army as an intelligence officer for six years. He was deployed four times overseas as part of the 3rd Infantry Division, which included service during Operation Iraqi Freedom in 2003 and the invasion of Iraq, and was awarded the Bronze Star for meritorious service. After his military service, he joined Pfizer, where he has worked for over 16 years. He has lived in southern Arizona for the last 10 years and has close connections to the Tucson Chamber of Commerce. He is also a board member of the West Point Society of Southern Arizona and serves on U.S. Senator Kyrsten Sinema’s veteran advisory council.

3rd ID safely welcomes first-term Soldiers

Spc. William Griffen
50th PAD

In spite of logistic difficulties due to COVID-19, the Marne Reception Center on Fort Stewart has continued to receive incoming Soldiers from advanced individual training.

The MRC, also known by its moniker, Gateway to the Rock, helps Soldiers in process the Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield community.

The MRC's senior enlisted leader, 1st Sgt. Tara Charles, said her staff has maintained operations by taking precautions in accordance with COVID-19 risk mitigation guidelines, but the process for the MRC remains much the same.

"The first step in the process is that the Soldiers' AITs contact us and tell us where they're coming from, how they're coming and when," Charles said.

Soldiers arriving from far-away locations travel by air, like those who recently arrived from Fort Huachuca, Arizona, on May 13. The Soldiers arrived by aircraft to Truscott Air Terminal at Hunter, and were then brought to the MRC on Fort Stewart by bus.

Other Soldiers who arrive from regionally-close locations travel to the MRC by bus, like the recent group of Soldiers from Fort Gordon who arrived on May 15.

Spc. Jake Heald, a Soldier assigned to MRC, said precautions are taken throughout the transition period, and that the new Soldiers had to be screened for COVID-19 before exiting the aircraft and bus.

"Soldiers are quarantined for 14 days prior to arriving, so they arrive on a 'clean' flight," Heald said.

According to leaders at the MRC, Soldiers who don't arrive on clean flights are quarantined in the 2nd Armored Brigade Combat Team's logistics support area for 14 days.

Soldiers who already endured 14 days of quarantine and passed COVID-19 symptoms screening checks at the MRC download their bags from the bus and have their orders and leave forms checked. The next step is issuing the Soldiers a barracks room and providing briefs on the procedures of in-processing.

Charles said that due to the COVID-19 response the length of stay at the MRC for in-processing has been reduced from seven days to four days, so Soldiers can be shipped to their units quicker.

Soldiers have their finances processed on the first day, their medical and dental records updated on the second day, and they are issued equipment by the Central Issue Facility on the third day. The fourth day is when Soldiers are shipped to their units.

Throughout the process, the MRC staff ensures Soldiers maintain social distancing and are advised on travel restrictions in place as a result of COVID-19.

According to Charles, the MRC goes a step beyond expectations at times, because it is prepared to help incoming Soldiers who have special needs, such as providing housing for a Soldier and their Family who may be struggling with financial issues. She said this helps ease the burden for Soldiers as they make their transition to becoming a Dogface Soldier.

In addition to responding to COVID-19, Soldiers assigned to the MRC have demonstrated their ability to adapt to change as the unit has conducted a command structure change earlier this year when it transitioned from under the 3rd Infantry Division's Special Troops Battalion to under the command of 3rd ID's Headquarters and Headquarters Battalion.

In addition to the organizational change, the command team at the MRC is new as well, with Charles and the MRC's new commander, Capt. Calvin Fortune, recently taking over from the outgoing command team, Capt. David Downing and 1st Sgt. Gene Fisher.

Many Soldiers agree that it is the Soldiers to their

"I figured things would be rushed and that COVID may change some things," said Pvt. Curtis Brooks, an in-processing Soldier newly assigned to 3rd ID. "But having friends in the Military helped ease some of the anxiety and manage my expectations a bit."

3rd ID to broadcast virtual Memorial Day Observance

Staff Sgt. Todd Pouliot
50th PAD

Traditionally, 3rd Infantry Division Soldiers support numerous Memorial Day observances throughout Coastal Georgia. Due to the current risk of COVID-19, events have been canceled or modified. For this reason, 3ID has decided to conduct a virtual Memorial Day observance which will air on the division's Facebook page, as well as the Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield Facebook page, at 10 a.m. Monday.

"Maj. Gen. (Tony) Aguto, since we were not able to support community Memorial Day observances, wanted to acknowledge them and provide a virtual event," said Dina McKain, Fort Stewart Public Affairs community relations specialist involved with planning the event.

Planning kicked off with working groups comprised of representatives from division staff, Garrison Public Affairs, Protocol, the 3rd ID Band and the color guard.

"Everyone was on board from the moment it was mentioned," McKain said.

The setting of this year's virtual Memorial Day observance is the Fort Stewart Warriors Walk, hallowed grounds lined with 469 white crape myrtle trees flanking the installation's Cottrell Field. Each tree stands as a living memorial to a Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield-based Soldier who made the ultimate sacrifice while serving in Operations Enduring Freedom or Iraqi Freedom.

The virtual observance includes traditional Memorial Day features to include solemn speeches, 3rd ID Honor Guard, a 21-Gun Salute, music by the 3ID Band and the playing of "Taps."

Overall production of the virtual event was led by Lt. Col. Patrick Husted, 3rd

ID Public Affairs officer, Staff Sgt. Dean Gannon, 3rd ID Public Affairs, and their team of videographers who choreographed the recording from various angles, and edited the final product.

Spc. Arrianna Auvaa, a member of the 3rd ID Protocol section who serves as the "Voice of the Marne," was one of several from her team that managed the logistics of making the virtual Memorial Day event possible.

"A lot of detailed planning, close attention to detail, and a lot of teamwork went into this," Auvaa said.

Auvaa, a Protocol team member for nearly one year, said it was an honor for her to have been involved with this year's unique Memorial Day event.

"Due to the current situation, going virtual is the best way to honor our fallen heroes," Auvaa said. "We now live in a time in which we cannot physically be together, but it is important for us to remember that, through technology, we have ways to still come together and unite."

"For decades, many brave Soldiers have marched here prior to going to battle and this is where they are welcomed when they return home from battle. It is this field where warriors walk."

Kings Bay Unit manufactures PPE

Kimberly Menzies
Kings Bay Public Affairs

As COVID-19 began to spread across the United States, Trident Refit Facility Kings Bay, Georgia, redirected some resources to produce personal protective equipment for its employees and local medical personnel treating COVID-19 patients.

After seeing media reports about New York City healthcare providers using plastic trash bags due to shortages of protective medical aprons, Navy Capt. Paul Dinius, the TRF-KB commanding officer at the time, contacted Navy Cmdr. Adrian Gaskins, the officer in charge at the Kings Bay Naval Branch Health Clinic, and offered the services of TRF-KB to manufacture PPE items.

The initial thought was to make aprons from vinyl or other material in preparation for an expected onslaught of COVID patients, said Navy Cmdr. Joseph Meier, the repair officer for TRF-KB.

TRF-KB also received requests from the Jacksonville Naval Hospital for support by producing other types of PPE.

Once medical needs were identified, the TRF-KB team used on-hand resources to create solutions for PPE deficiencies at the clinic and hospital.

TRF-KB craftsmen designed and created face shields, extenders to supplement the rubber-band ear pieces attached to some medical face masks and cloth face coverings, pleated and washable cloth face coverings and prototype intubation chambers.

The sail loft shop produced the cloth face coverings, while the shipfitters designed and manufactured face shields and intubation boxes. Other TRF-KB shops constructed face shields.

The rubber and plastics shop supported the task with preliminary designs of the face shields and prototypes, Meier said.

The computer numerical control shop produced the extenders by using additive manufacturing technology such as 3D printers, along with producing the preliminary face shield headgear designs. The 3D printer technology enabled TRF-KB to rapidly create prototypes and produce much of the needed PPE.

Despite COVID-19, Meier said, TRF-KB remains mission-focused and committed to supporting the community.

"All of this, along with our own internal efforts to combat the effects of COVID-19 within our own workforce, demonstrates that we have the ability to overcome the challenges the pandemic presents, and also continue with our primary mission," Meier said. "We've stayed solid, didn't have to shut down, and are able to support the medical efforts, too."

Dinius, who now serves as the chief of staff for Submarine Group 10, said he believes the TRF-KB fight against COVID-19 has been a winning effort.

"Every small amount helps. ... The TRF-KB team is winning the COVID-19 mitigation fight, but they are also winning the whole-of-government effort to supply our medical heroes with the tools they need on the front lines," he said.

New emergency leave available to Army civilians affected by COVID-19

Joseph Lacdan
Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Army employees affected by the coronavirus pandemic will have the option of taking up to two weeks of emergency paid sick leave in addition to other paid leave entitlements.

The new leave option, part of the Families First Coronavirus Response Act, allows civilians to take the emergency leave from April 1 through Dec. 31, provided that they meet certain conditions. The emergency sick leave will be separate from the normal sick leave civilians accrue and can be taken without using accrued sick leave.

“This is a new leave category that is provided to employees that may need to use this option to be able to care for family members or themselves, which is critically important as we all navigate our way through COVID-19,” said Thomas Fore, deputy assistant secretary of the Army for civilian personnel.

The leave is available to civilians required to remain in quarantine by a federal, local or state quarantine order. It's available to employees who have been advised by a health care professional to self-quarantine; and to employees who experience COVID-19 symptoms and receive a medical diagnosis. Employees in these categories will qualify to receive full-pay emergency leave at their normal pay rate. They must, however, provide documentation of the government agency that issued the quarantine order or the name of the health care provider who advised the self-quarantine.

Fore said employees who wish to take the emergency leave should carefully read the requirements.

“It is complicated,” he said. “I would highly encourage anyone or supervisors of anyone who's using the leave to familiarize themselves with the significant level of detail of the hours.”

Employees who provide care for individuals who have been subject to a federal or local stay-at-home order or have been advised by a doctor to remain home can qualify, but will be paid two-thirds of their normal pay rate. This includes parents who care for a child under the age of 18 whose school may be closed or had their place of care closed due to quarantine restrictions.

“It could be that you don't have a leave bank and you don't want to go into advanced leave status,” Fore said. “So this leave enables you to be compensated to be able to care for yourself or a family member.”

He said the civilian pay system has not yet been adjusted for those that care for others and employees who take sick leave for caregiving may receive their normal full pay for now. Those employees would subsequently be asked to repay one-third of the sum.

Fore said that the Defense Finance and Accounting Service will take back the owed sum in future pay periods and increments. He added that DFAS has been working on updating the leave system so that employees will be paid the correct amount.

Fore reminds employees choosing to take the emergency leave option in the care provider categories that they should work closely with supervisors to develop a balanced schedule and closely monitor their pay stubs.

Part-time employees will also be eligible for additional sick leave, but the maximum amount of leave will be based on the average number of hours that employee works over a two-week period.

Defense Department employees who fall under certain exemptions may not be eligible for the emergency paid leave. For instance, agencies can exclude essential health care providers from taking the leave.

Employees must have scheduled work hours in order to take the emergency leave, meaning that civilians in furlough status, employees who have been suspended or employees who are in leave-without-pay status will not be eligible. Emergency paid leave may also not be used on holidays or in conjunction with other leave.

“Thus, an employee cannot receive two types of paid leave for the same hours,” the guidance states.

Winn lab answers call

Pat Young
Winn ACH Public Affairs

Since the onset of the coronavirus, the Winn Army Community Hospital Laboratory has evolved services to help protect the force and community members by helping establish drive-up COVID-19 screening and testing sites, fever clinics, and by training and fielding new testing equipment.

Lt. Col. Roger Hosier, the Winn ACH lab officer-in-charge said, normally, their duty was to support the U.S. Army Medical Department – Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield healthcare network by providing timely and accurate results and optimizing the use of available resources. Their basic services included clinical chemistry, hematology, microbiology, serology, transfusion services and urinalysis.

But, that mission changed with COVID-19, Hosier said. For the past two months, their battle rhythm has adapted to help provide screening and testing for the coronavirus.

“During the onset of the pandemic, the lab did not have the capability to perform on-site testing,” Hosier said. “All symptomatic patient test requests had to go to the Georgia Public Health lab for testing and they were very limited on the number of tests per day that could be performed.”

As the pandemic grew, Defense Health Agency recognized the need for Winn ACH to have on-site testing capabilities, arranging for testing equipment to be delivered, along with supplies and training information.

Winn ACH gained the ability to test up to 48 samples per day with the arrival of the BioFire FilmArray analyzers. Within a few weeks, Winn received an additional machine called the GeneXpert, which expanded on-site testing to more than 400 per day.

First Lt. Brandy Warner, the deputy lab manager said the new capacity has helped decrease the average turn-around time to eight hours or less.

“COVID samples are received and logged in by our shipping department,” Warner said. “Once we have accountability, the sample is then taken to our microbiology section for testing. Once loaded, testing takes about 45 minutes to complete.”

Lt. Col. Michael J. Benson, Chief of Pathology at Winn, said his staff answered the call.

“I cannot be more proud of every individual in this lab,” Benson said. “Everyone, civilian and military, has sacrificed time and effort to meet the challenge presented to us.

If you need COVID testing, call the appointment line at 435-6633 to schedule a virtual appointment with your PCM either virtual or face-to-face.

Otherwise, the WINN laboratory is fully operational for blood work and in-patient testing. The phlebotomy room is open from 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. Walk-ins welcome. No appointment is needed.

Garrison Commanders are the center of gravity in the fight against COVID-19

Scott Malcom
IMCOM Public Affairs

JOINT BASE SAN ANTONIO, FORT SAM HOUSTON, Texas — Gen. Gus Perna, Commanding General of Materiel Command, addressed Installation Management Command leaders around the world during a video teleconference from IMCOM headquarters.

Perna uses quarterly updates to conduct “conversations between commanders” an execute mission command for AMC’s 11 major subordinate commands. IMCOM has been part of AMC since March 2019.

Perna normally travels to conduct mission command face-to-face, but he held this session by VTC as part of DoD’s overall effort to help stop the spread of COVID-19.

Empowering garrison commanders to protect installations while effectively responding to the pandemic and maintaining readiness has been AMC and IMCOM’s primary focus the last two months.

“Garrison commanders are the center of gravity in this fight,” said Lt. Gen. Douglas M. Gabram, IMCOM’s commanding general. “Their leadership has been decisive; they are leading the Army through this at the tactical level.”

Gabram went on to frame IMCOM’s primary operating principle in the COVID environment as “Protect yourself, so we can protect the force, so the force can protect the Nation.”

Several garrison commanders highlighted challenges on or around their installations and the innovative solutions that overcame them. One consistent theme was the value of quickly and efficiently sharing best practices so all could benefit. For example, garrisons in Korea and Italy encountered the virus before those in North America. Their sharing of lessons learned about cleaning, tracing and putting effective control measures in place facilitated prompt and effective actions at stateside installations.

Col. Dan Vogel, the garrison commander of USAG Italy in Vicenza, described the transition strategy his team created in coordination with local governing bodies to lay out their phased recovery strategy. Their approach is “Go slow to go fast,” or an informed, methodical process to bring teammates back to work and re-open garrison services.

Gabram adopted this plan as IMCOM’s framework for transitioning individual installations to the next phase. “Imitation is the sincerest form of flattery,” he said.

“You learned some hard lessons and you learned them very quickly. I am very proud of you and your team” commended Perna.

The Fort Benning garrison commander, Col. Matt Scalia, shared how his team re-organized to keep the basic training pipeline open. They developed processes to execute their training mission safely and facilitate movement of Soldiers to their Advanced Individual Training destinations.

Each commander who spoke mentioned a key element of their successful response was communicating transparently, factually, clearly, and consistently.

In his closing comments, Perna acknowledged IMCOM’s hard work and significant accomplishments over the past year since joining the AMC team. “You were leading our way through establishing the Strategic Support Area as part of our new doctrine (Multi-Domain Operations). You then moved right into leading the Army through our Housing Campaign. From there you developed our much needed Facility Investment Strategy that will solve Army problems and save millions of dollars. Then COVID hit.”

“Any one of these could drive another organization to its knees, but not here” concluded Perna. “Now that we’re blocking, tackling and getting things in place, we are well-positioned to take it to the next level. Press!”

MEMORIAL DAY

Far away
From all they knew,
With hearts of pride
And courage true,

Vowed to serve
As freedom's light,
And through their strength
Our nation's might,

They gave all
Our brave defenders,
Where poppies lie,
We will remember.
