Maj. Gen. Tony Aguto, commanding general of the 3rd Infantry Division, welcomes Dr. Bill Cathcart, Mr. Ken Keen and Mr. John Phillips, all Civilian Aides to the Secretary of the Army for Georgia, to the division headquarters, March 16 on Fort Stewart. The CASAs met with key leaders from 3rd ID and toured the division's area. CASAs are business and community leaders appointed by the Secretary of the Army to advise and support U.S. Army leaders across the country. CASAs serve to bridge the gap between the Army and civilian communities by disseminating information about the Army's objectives and major programs to the public through speeches, personal contact and participation in Army and community events.

Dogface Soldier's act of bravery earns Silver Star

Sgt. 1st Class Justin Naylor
3rd Infantry Division Public Affairs

Curtis Reid was 33 years old when his heart stopped.

It happened in a dusty building south-east of Baghdad. He was surrounded by Soldiers he loved.

"I watched him die," recalls Lyndon Kilcrease, then a newly-promoted Army specialist. "They started to resuscitate him, and I remember Jones saying, 'look, he's dead.'"

While this sounds like the end of Command Sgt. Major Curtis Reid's story, it was not. It was just a brief moment in an ongoing, multi-decade career that has spanned numerous continents and has touched the lives of hundreds of Soldiers.

While Reid now serves in a premiere leadership position as the senior enlisted advisor for 1st Battalion, 28th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Infantry Division, he came from humble beginnings. Like so many others before him, Reid joined the Army to get away from his hometown and to follow in his father's footsteps.

"I always wanted to serve because my father- he was in the military," said Reid. His father was a Vietnam veteran with the U.S. Marine Corps.

Reid grew up in the small, remote town of Fitzgerald, which lies about three hours south of Atlanta. The town is located in dense pine forests and the last census put the population at about 10,000 residents.

Reid entered the service in 1994 as an infantryman. He and a group of others in his training class were chosen to specialize and became mechanized infantry, then known by the military occupation specialty code 11M. Reid was attracted to the lifestyle of the infantry.

"We're the first ones on the battlefield to close in with and destroy the enemy," he said. "That's what led me to wanting to be infantry."

Reid remembers that the training at Fort Benning was grueling. Although the base was only two and half hours from home, it felt like a world away for him. He didn't find out until completing his training that his first assignment truly would take him to the other side of the planet.

Reid arrived in Germany in the heart of winter.

"Growing up in the South, I'd never really seen snow before," Reid recalls. "I was mesmerized and shocked."

The weather was not the only shock Reid would get upon arrival. He soon found out he was bunking in a six-man barracks room with a communal shower in the hallway for multiple rooms to share. Modern Soldiers typically live in individual or two-person rooms. For the most part, communal showers are a thing of the past.

"The Army was really hard then," said Reid. "You did something wrong and you would get the crap smoked out of you."

Reid recalls that the leaders at this unit were tough and unbending in their adherence to the Army standards.

"It really made me aware of how high my standards needed to be, how disciplined I needed to be," he said.

Reid carried on this hard-earned discipline as he moved forward in his career. Soon, he moved into leadership positions and was tasked with leading Soldiers on deployments around the world. He moved around often over the next decade including stints in Korea, Bosnia, Kosovo, the Czech Republic, Kuwait and Iraq. His travels eventually brought him to 3rd Brigade, 3rd ID, at Kelley Hill on Fort Benning.

He soon deployed to Iraq with this unit, and it was during this deployment that Reid's life would change forever.

It was July 3, 2006. His unit had just returned from an overnight air assault mission that involved clearing insurgents out of a local village. Kilcrease remembers the Soldiers returning to their base—Combat Outpost Cahill—around 5 a.m.

"We were all bone tired," he said. Most of the members of the unit weren't aware that a change occurred overnight that would send the weary Soldiers back out into harm's way later that morning.

"We were supposed to leave the [combat outpost] and head back to [Forward Operating Base] Hammer on the 4th of July to re-fit," said Reid. He said his company commander needed Reid's unit to head back to Hammer a day early, which was located about 50 miles away.

"So, we got ready and loaded up the Bradleys with the dismounts," remembers Reid.

With the dismounted Soldiers loaded into the back of the vehicle, Reid told his driver to raise the back ramp.

Command Sgt. Maj. Curtis Reid, the senior enlisted advisor for 1st Battalion, 28th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Infantry Division, poses for a photo March 3 on Fort Benning. Reid, a Silver Star recipient, earned the award for rescuing numerous Soldiers from a burning Bradley Fighting Vehicle in Iraq in 2006.

"The ramp didn't raise, so I got out of the Bradley and the driver got out," Reid said. "We had to physically, manually push the ramp up in order for the driver to lock it."

First their mission to go for re-fit was bumped forward a day and now the ramp on their vehicle was broken. Reid remembers thinking this seemed like a sign.

With the ramp finally locked in place, the line of vehicles departed COP Cahill and headed toward FOB Hammer. Reid's vehicle was the last in line and was tasked with providing rear security. The 25 mm cannon on his Bradley faced toward the back of the vehicle.

"The back deck has a cargo hatch," Reid said. "Dismounts can get in and out of the cargo deck, but if that barrel is blocking that cargo hatch, you can open it but you can't get out."

Kilcrease was Reid's driver that day. For him, the day seemed much like any other, although he was more tired than usual. The route was familiar to him, but he had strange thoughts as he drove it this time.

"I looked over to my left as I'm driving and there is this big open field and in my head I wonder if a medevac could land there," said Kilcrease, referring to the medical evacuation helicopters that were commonly used in Iraq to rescue wounded Soldiers.

"Once we hit a certain checkpoint, we proceeded, and the next thing I know it's just a huge explosion; it shattered my helmet," said Reid. "I just remember calling out 'IED, IED, IED' and I looked over at my gunner and he was knocked out, unconscious."

Reid recalls that the vehicles in front of him turned around immediately after the explosion and medics rushed to his vehicle.

"I'm kind of in shock and disarray and that's when I pulled my gunner out and took him to the ground," Reid said. "The medics were already there on scene. My driver had managed to get out of his hatch. He was hit with shrapnel and was on fire."

Kilcrease's recollection of the explosion was hazy.

"I remember us driving and then I remember 'boom' and then there's, like, a brief 30 seconds or a minute that I was knocked out," said Kilcrease. "I woke up and there was just fire everywhere. The [explosively formed penetrator] went off and it went through the fuel cell, then it went through the engine, then it blew into the driver's compartment right behind me."

Have medication delivered to your home

TRICARE and Express Scripts invite beneficiaries to use the many services offered by Express Scripts to help manage their prescription requirements. Express Scripts will allow beneficiaries to receive home delivery, order refills, check their order status, setup auto refills and get benefit explanations from their website, over the phone or by using their new enhanced Express Scripts mobile app. The app allows community members to manage medications from their computer or cell phone. Anytime. Anywhere. For information call Express Scripts at 877-363-1303.

Virtual CIED, CUAS training

The Fort Stewart Home Station Training Team is currently offering classes via virtual platform Webex. The benefit of this capability is that it provides an educational solution regardless of physical distance. In an environment where social distancing is paramount, their goal is to be able to provide remote learning in an environment where students and instructors have minimal proximity to each other or to our instructors. It is their plan to continue to work with units that are interested to continue this capability. Contact John Summers at john.l.summers.ctr@mail.mil or Troy Clements at troy.j.clements.ctr@mail.mil.

Mass warning notification system test

Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield will conduct a MWNS monthly test on the first Tuesday of every month at noon. The next test will be April 6. The monthly tests are required to ensure the systems function properly and to identify issues before presented with a real world emergency. For information call the military police desk 767-4264.

Virtual unit TARP training offered

The Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield Counterintelligence Team offers unit virtual TARP Training through Microsoft Teams to meet annual training requirements. Unit training officers call 315-2006 or submit a request via email usarmy.hunter.902-mi-grp.list.308th-savannah-fo@mail.mil to schedule.

Equal employment opportunity

Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield Equal Employment Opportunity Office is conducting virtual operations. All complaint intakes and Reasonable and Religious Accommodations requests will be conducted via email. Email complaints or requests for RA to usarmy.stewart.usag.list.eeo-all@mail.mil or reach them by phone at 767-4074.

Traffic alert to affect post access

A traffic shift to build the Georgia highway 144 double roundabout will affect traffic at I-95 and the exit 90 ramps. Contractors are moving the traffic signals to support the pattern change. Drivers will be delayed at the exit 90 ramp areas. The main work area runs from Thunderbird Drive to Longwood Drive, vicinity McDonald's. Two modern roundabouts will be constructed to better accommodate traffic volumes, reduce backups and increase safety.

Closings and cancellations

Follow the Fort Stewart-Hunter website and Facebook pages for information. Updates will be sent as information is provided.

ASMIS 2.0 update available

The Army Safety Management Information System 2.0, mishap, near miss reporting, and analytics modules are now active. Leaders, USO and ADSOs are encouraged to view the tutorial videos and information that is currently available on the Army Combat Readiness Center website and also on the 3ID Safety Portal. For more information, visit the Army Combat Readiness Center website, safety.army.mil/MEDIA/ASMIS2.

Volunteer actors needed

The DPTMS Plans and Operations Division seeks volunteer role players for the upcoming Stewart Guardian exercise to be held the week of April 12-16. Volunteers should be registered in the VMIS system through Army Community Service and will be required to attend a concept brief on April 8. Children are allowed to accompany volunteers during the event. For information call 767-5058.

Legal Assistance office open on Tuesdays

The Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield Legal Assistance Offices are open Tuesdays from 9-11:30 a.m. and from 1-4 p.m. The offices are open for walk-in notary services and powers of attorney only. Bus tour helps military spouses make connections in community

Andrew Williams
Housing Services Office
Commentary

The Liberty County Convention and Visitors Bureau offers a military spouse bus that reveals the hidden historical areas of Liberty County. Liberty County offers a variety of activities and sites to see that are unknown to even some of the locals in the area. This military spouse tour is beneficial to those seeking things to do in the area as well as learning about the historical background of Liberty County.

The tour offers the opportunity to discover museums, parks, boutiques, local businesses, and cultural restaurants. Simultaneously, the tour offers a great opportunity to network with other military spouses in the area.

If you have any questions regarding the military spouse bus tour contact the Fort Stewart Housing Services Office, 767-4278, or the Liberty County Chamber of Commerce, 368-4445.

EFPs were a common weapon used by insurgents to penetrate the thick armor of military vehicles. They work by focusing a weighted piece of metal in an explosion and can cause high levels of destruction on impact.

After Kilcrease woke up, he turned around and looked in the area behind the driver's seat, dubbed the 'hell hole.'

"I tried to release the back ramp so that the guys in the back could get out," said Kilcrease. "There's a lever; it's the ramp lever. It releases the emergency hatch so you can push the button to lower the ramp. After I turned around and saw the hell hole was on fire, I grabbed the release. I tried to push the ramp button down but all the electronics had been knocked out of the Bradley, so nothing was working."

With the ramp malfunctioning, Kilcrease exited the burning vehicle. He was on fire when he hit the ground and was tackled by a medic who put out the flame.

Reid remembers watching the medics treat Kilcrease. It was at this moment that he realized that the dismounts were trapped inside with a malfunctioning ramp and the gun blocking the top exit to the vehicle.

"I knew that if I didn't do anything, they would burn alive in there," Reid said. "From that point, I jumped back into the turret in my compartment. In the Bradley, you control the turret in mechanical mode or electric mode; I put everything in manual mode. Once I did that I was able to raise the gun the barrel."

Reid lifted the gun barrel to max elevation and a Soldier in the back of the vehicle popped the hatch open halfway.

"I jumped out of the turret to where the cargo hatch was and opened up the cargo hatch all the way," Reid said. "I jumped into the hull to where the dismounts were in the back- where they ride at. I took each individual out one by one and also the Iraqi interpreter. Some of them were unconscious, some of them were just confused from the explosion, so they didn't have any idea what happened."

After getting the last Soldier out of the vehicle, Reid jumped off the burning Bradley. Hitting the ground is the last thing he remembers.

"His adrenaline went out and he just collapsed," said Kilcrease.

Reid's next memory is of waking up in a small hospital. It was here where his heart stopped and the medical team resuscitated him. The medics treated Kilcrease alongside him.

"They're scrubbing me down trying to control all these burns and pulling shrapnel," he said. "They put [Reid] on a litter right in front of us. He quit breathing."

"They resuscitated him and got him back," Kilcrease said. "I can't tell you how I felt at the time. I was just sitting there watching a dude that you kind of looked at as a father figure die."

Reid's next stop was in Landstuhl, Germany, where a medical team worked to stabilize him. The explosion ruptured his spleen, so the doctors removed it. Once he was out of critical condition, he was moved to Womack Army Hospital in Fort Bragg, North Carolina, for recovery.

While the physical injuries were painful, the concussion caused neurological injuries that last to this day.

"I had to go through speech therapy, writing therapy, hand and eye coordination therapy," Reid said. "It was like a two-year rehab. Sometimes I still have challenges with speaking."

Reid, a religious man, said the recovery made him question the things he held dearest.

"I was questioning God, which is something I thought I would never do," Reid said. "I was asking why this happened to me."

Reid's leadership presented him with the Silver Star Medal during his recovery time at Womack. His battalion's senior noncommissioned officer came to visit him and asked what he wanted to do next.

"I was like, 'sergeant major, I want to get back to my guys,'" he recalls. "He said no, and that I needed to take care of myself. My boys were going to be fine."

Reid's recovery was grueling, but he said that his faith, his family, and his love for the Soldiers he served with kept him pushing to get better. While these injuries might have ended the careers of other Soldiers, for Reid it was just a hurdle to overcome.

"I love being around Soldiers," Reid said. "That's why I'm still doing what I do, because I love being around Soldiers and taking care of Soldiers."

It was this love of Soldiers that carried Reid through another Iraq deployment with 3rd BCT, 3rd ID in 2011. Although Reid left the unit shortly after this deployment, he carried the legacy of his time there with him. The Army deactivated 3rd BCT in 2016. Reid's current unit, 1st Bn., 28th Inf. Regt., is the last remaining 3rd ID unit on Fort Benning.

"Third Infantry Division is my heart," Reid said. "I wouldn't want to deploy with any other organization than 3rd ID."

Reid said that the Soldiers who work with him now are among the best he's ever served with.

"We are an elite infantry organization and we are ready to go anywhere that the U.S. needs us to go," Reid said. "I know that my Soldiers in this organization are fully trained and prepared to do what the nation calls on us to do."

Reid cherishes this time with his current unit, but says he will never forget the memories he made with the Soldiers who were with him on the day he earned his Silver Star.

"We are forever linked because of what happened to us and I can't think of any other people I'd rather be linked to," said Kilcrease.

Talent management leads Army's push to diverse leadership

Devon Suits
Army News Service

WASHINGTON— Army Chief of Staff Gen. James C. McConville continued to emphasize the need for proper talent management to increase diversity at all levels to ensure that the right person is put into the best position to meet the needs of the force.

The recent nomination of Lt. Gen. Laura Richardson for appointment to the most senior general grade, combined with the Army's push to retain a diverse group of talented personnel, in this case women, is a step in the right direction, McConville said during a Defense Writers Group virtual event Thursday.

Richardson is currently the U.S. Army North commanding general at Joint Base San Antonio, Texas. If confirmed, Richardson will become the commander of U.S. Southern Command and will be the second female Soldier to reach the four-star rank.

Retired Gen. Ann E. Dunwoody was the first and only female service member to attain a fourth star in 2008.

The Army is changing, McConville said, as he recalled the day he selected Richardson to become his deputy G-3 with the 101st Airborne Division (Air Assault) over two Soldiers with Ranger experience.

Richardson's potential promotion to the next rank, coupled with her experience in the combat arms as an aviation officer, is a positive move forward, McConville said, as he reflected on being the first aviator appointed to his current position.

"I'm extremely proud of the 185,000 women who serve with distinction every single day in the U.S. Army," McConville said. "There have been millions who served in the past and every single conflict since the Revolutionary War."

As a brigade commander with the 1st Cavalry Division in Iraq in 2004, McConville recalled the dedication of Chief Warrant Officer 2 Cindy Rozelle, who led a team of AH-64 Apaches to save an outpost from being overrun.

"I don't remember anyone questioning her gender after she saved their lives," he said. "There are tons of stories that can be told like that. And I'm just very proud of all the women that serve in the Army, including those in my family."

McConville's wife is a former officer and registered dietitian, while his daughter, an Army captain, currently serves as a clinical social worker. He also mentioned his two great-aunts, who drove trucks in the Pacific theater during World War II.

McConville said there is a need to put "people first" by implementing a 21st century talent management process to acquire, employ and retain personnel. Goals outlined under the Army People Strategy look to deliberately manage talent by recognizing each individual's unique knowledge, skills, and behaviors.

Initiatives like the Army Talent Alignment Process, the commander assessment program for sergeants major, lieutenant colonels and colonels, and other systems are already in place to provide Soldiers more flexibility and predictability throughout their career.

Through proper talent management, the Army could see its first female Army chief of staff within the next 20 years, McConville said.

"We are in a war for talent, and we're going after the best and brightest," he said. "And we are going to do what it takes to keep them in the Army."

Army aggressively works to eliminate extremism

Thomas Brading
Army News Service

WASHINGTON— As the Army continues efforts to improve diversity within its ranks, it is also reinforcing policies to eradicate extremist behaviors and activities.

The battle against extremism is different from other challenges the Army encounters, said Col. Timothy Holman, the Army's chief diversity officer. Extremism can tear apart cohesive teams.

For the colonel, the fight against extremism is one he personally encountered. His aim is clear: do what he can to help open a path for future Army leaders and make the force as diverse as the nation it defends.

"My hope is to ensure better representation of our country among the senior ranks," he said.

As a child in Mississippi during the early 1960s, Holman, an African-American, witnessed the tail-end of an era plagued by racially-motivated murders based on skin color. People such as Emmett Till in 1955; Medgar Evers in 1963; Vernon Dahmer in 1966; and others whose names history may never know, were all killed in areas near Holman's hometown.

"Growing up in a little bitty segregated Mississippi town, it was not uncommon for people to call you derogatory terms, and nothing would happen [to them]," he said. "It was a place where people said, 'hey, you can't come to this side of town after dark because of the color of your skin.'"

The Army's policy bans all personnel from participating in extremist organizations and activities, Holman said. Organizations and activities in which personnel are prohibited from participating include those that advocate, among other things: racial intolerance or discrimination; use of force to deprive individuals of their constitutional rights; and advocating or teaching the overthrow of the U.S. government.

Prohibited actions in support of extremist organizations or activities include, but are not limited to, participating in a public demonstration or rally; attending a meeting or activity with knowledge that it involves an extremist cause; fundraising; and recruiting, training, or organizing members of extremist organizations.

In other words, extremism in any form has no place in the military, the colonel said.

Sgt. 1st Class Brian Guinn, a presenter during Marne First Friday, leads a discussion about extremist groups in the U.S. with Soldiers from the 3rd Combat Aviation Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division, March 5 on Hunter Army Airfield.

Courtesy photo

Ideally, extremism would not exist anywhere, but Holman is very familiar with extremism after growing up in rural Mississippi during the civil rights movement.

For two decades, he endured unmistakable racism. He feared things others may take for granted, like walking through certain areas after certain hours.

When he raised his right hand and swore to defend the Constitution under the Army cloth, the young lieutenant encountered a culture shock. "How does [my past] go away when someone says, 'in the Army, it doesn't work the way it does in Mississippi,'" he said.

"I had to learn [the Army's] value system," he continued. "What I endured in rural Mississippi is not acceptable in the Army. It was hard to turn that switch on."

As an engineer officer, there were many times Holman served as the only Black officer leading white Soldiers, who looked like the individuals who once oppressed him. "It was a culture shock," he said.

In July, service leaders updated Army Regulation 600-20, or Army Command Policy, which prescribes policy prohibiting participation in extremist organizations and activities, specifically addressing cyber activities.

AR 600-20 clearly articulates that personnel are responsible for the content they publish on all personal and public internet domains to include social media sites, blogs, and other websites; and participation in internet sites sponsored by extremist organizations and activities is inconsistent with the responsibilities of military service.

If individuals violate these rules they may be subject to criminal and administrative consequences, and Army personnel are urged to speak up if they notice these violations, Holman said.

Additionally, AR 381-12, the Threat Awareness and Reporting Program, or TARP, describes indicators of extremist activity. TARP training, which is conducted by Army counterintelligence agents, is designed to ensure personnel understand and report, among other things, incidents and indicators of attempted or actual extremist activities directed against the Army and its personnel.

All Army personnel will receive TARP training within 30 days of assignment or employment to an organization and will undergo live environment TARP training at least annually.

The Army also created iSALUTE and iWATCH Army, which are programs designed to facilitate reporting suspicious behavior. iSALUTE is an Army counterintelligence reporting program that permits personnel to report threat incidents, extremist behavioral indicators, and other counterintelligence matters. iWATCH Army is an anti-terrorism awareness program that includes materials and resources to help families identify and report indicators of potential terrorist activity.

According to the Office of the Provost Marshal General, suspicious behavior or actions of a person, or group of people, should be reported. There are numerous means of reporting: the chain of command, local law enforcement, iSALUTE, and the Insider Threat Hub, among others. If the actions of the person or group are life threatening, call emergency responders and/or 911.

"When the chief of staff touts 'people first,' that is reflected in eradication of any extremism within the ranks," Holman said. "Extremism will only limit or prohibit building the cohesive teams the Army needs. If that's the case, it doesn't matter how good your equipment is, if the soul of the force isn't operating at an optimal level."

Above: U.S. Army Col. Nia Robinson Middleton, M.D., is the deputy commander for clinical services at Winn Army Community Hospital on Fort Stewart. As a Tulane University graduate, Middleton has been interested in women's health since childhood and became an obstetrician-gynecologist. "I love taking care of service members and their families. It definitely is a special group of people. I deal with deployments or training exercises that take service members away from their families. In some ways, I am like their extended family and support system. I'm very thankful for the opportunity to help take care of Soldiers and their Families."

Right: U.S. Army Sgt. Janine Lowe, an AH-64 helicopter repairer assigned to 3rd Squadron, 17th Cavalry Regiment, 3rd Combat Aviation Brigade, Hunter Army Airfield, is a native of Lanzendorf, Germany. She went to Pasco-Hernando State College, maintained a 4.0 GPA, and enlisted in the Army in 2017. "I've always wanted to have a career where I can control my own progression and directly impact my success. The Army has provided me with that opportunity. As a female working in a predominantly male field, the Army can be lonely. However, the Army is making great efforts to close the gap and there are a lot of like minded females here that strongly support each other."

U.S. Coast Guard Petty Officer 3rd Class Krystal Moriyon, a health services technician assigned to the U.S. Coast Guard Air Station Savannah Medical Clinic on Hunter Army Airfield, is a Miami native. She graduated from John A. Ferguson High School in 2013 and is currently attending American Military University. She is earning her bachelor's degree in healthcare administration. "I joined the Coast Guard because I wanted to be more independent and grow. I also wanted to travel and experience the world. As a proud Hispanic female, I especially wanted to show others that you can accomplish whatever you set your mind to no matter the challenges you may face."

Fort Stewart's Directorate of Family, Morale, Welfare, and Recreation's Outdoor Recreation Department hosted their second open house at Holbrook Pond, March 13, on Fort Stewart.

The open house showcased several outdoor recreational activities that are provided by FMWR. It also featured local businesses in the Fort Stewart area and a K9 military working dog demonstration performed by the 93rd Military Working Dogs Detachment.

"It's important to get people out here and show there's more things you can do here at Fort Stewart," said Haley Col, a Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers representative. "Especially on a nice day like this, it's nice to show them the opportunities FMWR has to offer."

According to attendees of the event, the non-profit organization Center for Wildlife Education booth and Trapper Jack's information booth were both highlights of the open house.

"My favorite part of the event was the gators," said Morgan Hobson, another BOSS representative. Hobson said she enjoyed petting a small alligator that was held by Jack Douglas, the owner of Savannah's Trapper Jack.

Col said she had fun watching the reptiles and birds at the Center of Wildlife Education booth.

Another popular event was the 93rd MWD Detachment's demonstration of controlled aggression, obedience training and K9 equipment display. The 93rd MWD Detachment chose to participate in the open house, not only to support the FMWR, but to also honor

National K9 Veterans day, a day that recognizes the dedicated military working dogs who have served.

MWD Alex and MWD Groll, both assigned to 93rd MWD Detachment, gathered an audience around their fenced-in stage during their demonstrations.

"I feel like doing a demonstration on a day that honors them is a great opportunity to give a visualization to people outside of canine," said Spc. Kaylie Buck, a MWD handler assigned to the 93rd MWD Detachment. "People don't really see us or notice us that often on what we can provide and what we actually do."

Spc. Catalino Lopez, a MWD handler assigned to the 93rd MWD Detachment, said his favorite part of the demonstration was the controlled aggression training.

"I really like controlled aggression," said Lopez. "Something about it gives me the rush of knowing you're teaching the dog and watching them develop over time."

While the open house was hosted on K9 Veteran's day, it also was a significant day for the FMWR's Outdoor Recreation Department.

"Today we are celebrating 50 years of outdoor recreation," said Nikko Abreu, the lead recreation assistant for Fort Stewart Outdoor Recreation. "We're having an open house to commemorate that."

Abreu said he helped coordinate with about 18 vendors to host the open house and organized activities such as axe-throwing, paintball and kayaking for attendees to participate in. He said he envisions getting people back outside, especially during COVID.

"Right now we are in the talks to do this maybe yearly or twice every year," said Abreu.
