The 1st Armored Brigade Combat Team of Col. Mike Adams and Command Sgt. Maj. Robert Leimer, uncase the unit's colors during a transfer of authority ceremony at Camp Humphreys, South Korea, Feb. 23. The ceremony marks the first time since the Korean War that 3rd ID Soldiers have deployed to South Korea.

Camp Humphreys, South Korea – The 1st Armored Brigade Combat Team, 3rd Infantry Division assumed responsibility as the rotational armored brigade combat team in the Republic of Korea during a transfer of authority ceremony, Feb. 23.

Soldiers from the Raider Brigade started arriving in late January to begin a nine-month rotation. Raider Soldiers replaced the 2nd Armored Brigade Combat Team "Black Jack," 1st Cavalry Division, the first U.S. armored brigade to complete a rotation in the Korean peninsula.

See TOA

The ceremony was presided over by Maj. Gen. Scott McKean, commander of the 2nd Infantry Division ROK-U.S. Combined Division.

"The strength of our Army is the ability to produce well-trained and well-led units," said McKean. "We are very fortunate to welcome the Raider Brigade of the 3rd Infantry Division, Rock of the Marne."

The ceremony was the final step in the month-long transition between the brigades.

"I would like to thank the 2nd Infantry ROK-U.S. Combined Division, our Republic of Korea Army counterparts, the cities of Dongducheon and Pyeongteak, for all their support and coordination that has contributed to making this transition successful," said Col. Mike Adams, commander, 1st ABCT. "To the Black Jack team, thank you for the seamless transition, your candor and for absolutely setting the Raider Brigade on the path to mission accomplishment."

The deployment marks a historic return of 3rd ID Soldiers to South Korea. This is the first time Soldiers bearing the Marne Division patch have served on the Korean Peninsula since the Korean War. During the war, 3rd ID had 13 Medal of Honor recipients, received eight Battle Stars and was awarded The Republic of Korea Presidential Unit Citation. The 7th Infantry Regiment of 3rd ID recorded more combat time than any other infantry unit in South Korea.

ME Day comes to Stewart

Robert Mathews
MWR Publicity Specilist

Operation "ME" Day at Hunter Club recently was such a hit with some that they plan to register and attend the "ME" day scheduled from 1-4 p.m. March 11 at Club Stewart as well.

"It was great. I enjoyed it from the time I walked in the door," one spouse said as she prepared to leave. "The staff and the vendors were all very nice and attentive, and the products were of a very high quality," she said.

The "M.E" in Operation ME Day stands for "Mission Essential," a description of how important military spouses' sacrifices and contributions are to the Army's mission.

See ME

The goal of Operation ME Day planners and participating vendors is to provide a special time to refresh and renew for military spouses – especially spouses of deployed Soldiers.

Guests at Hunter Feb. 24 were welcomed with a choice of refreshments – chilled cucumber water or green tea, and a scented lavender towel to feel calm and relaxed before entering the exhibit area. Light appetizers were offered butler style throughout. Relaxing meditation music played in the background.

"I loved it," said one spouse when asked whether she enjoyed the Hunter Club event. "When's the one at Fort Stewart? I'm going to go to that one, too."

Fort Stewart's main gate static display was updated on Feb. 26 with an OH-58 Kiowa. The AH-1 Cobra that was on display is now at the 3rd Infantry Division Museum. Swapping the helicopters on the static display brings it more up-to-date with vehicles that have recently served or continue to serve in the division's formations. The Kiowa was retired from service at Hunter Army Airfield's 3rd Combat Aviation Brigade in May 2015. The helicopter swap was a unified effort between several installation units, including the aviation brigade, the 3rd Infantry Division Sustainment Brigade, and the Directorate of Public Works.

5-7 CAV holds KATUSA Patching Ceremony

2nd Lt. Christopher Counihan
5-7 Cav, 2ABCT

CAMP CASEY, Republic of Korea—The 5th Squadron, 7th Cavalry Regiment, 1st Armored Brigade Combat Team, 3rd Infantry Division conducted a patching ceremony, Feb. 21, to pin the 3rd ID unit patch on the Korean Augmentation to the United States Army Soldiers assigned to the Squadron.

The ceremony was part of the month-long transition between rotational armored brigade combat teams as 1st ABCT replaced the 2nd Armored Brigade Combat Team, 1st Cavalry Division from Fort Hood, Texas.

KATUSAs are members of the Republic of Korea Army and partner with U.S. Soldiers. They provide the U.S. military with Korean-speaking Soldiers, which improves capabilities across the Peninsula.

The program was established in 1950 at the outbreak of the Korean War. The South Korean Soldiers provided the U.S. Army units with knowledge of the terrain, the ability to distinguish between North and allied South Korean troops, and improved communications between the U.S. and Korean units.

Lt. Col. Stephen Fairless, commander, 4th Squadron, 9th Cavalry Regiment, 2nd ABCT, spoke on the relationships the Dark Horse Squadron built with the KATUSA Soldiers. He thanked them for their service over the last nine months and praised the functionality of the KATUSA program.

“The Korean Augmentation to the United States Army program provides an invaluable and unique relationship between our two armies,” Fairless said.

Lt. Col. John Horning, commander, 5th Squadron, 7th Cav., welcomed the KATUSA Soldiers, evoked the long and storied history of the 7th Cav. in South Korea, and honored the bravery of the Dog Faced Soldiers who earned Medals of Honor during the Korean War.

“From the very beginning, the 7th Cavalry, part of the 1st Cavalry Division at the time, took part in the United Nations Defensive starting in June of 1950. The UN Offensive following is where we fought North Korea and captured Pyongyang,” said Horning. “We were here when the communist Chinese intervened and we are once again part of the counteroffensive. The 7th Cavalry fought in Korea until the final winter and armistice in 1953.”

Horning concluded his comments with a message of brotherhood and a call to remain steadfast.

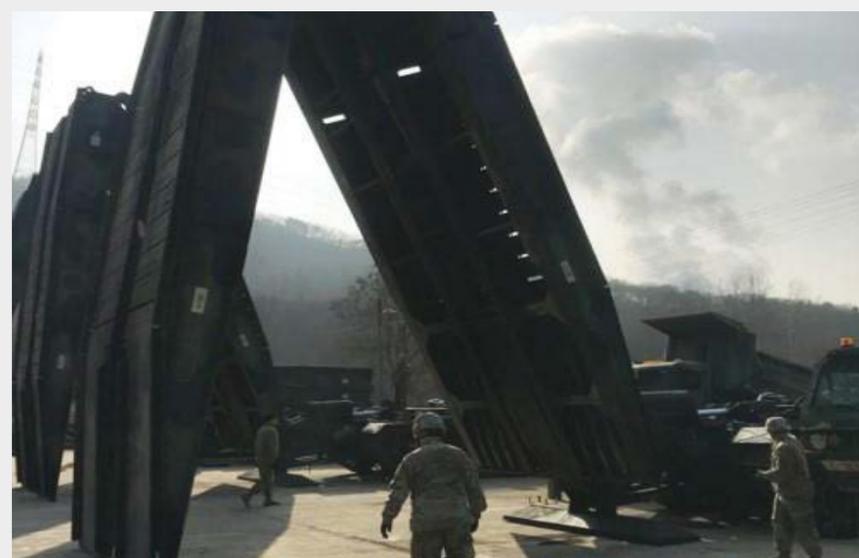

“To our Korean brothers, we are proud to have you join our ranks as we join your cause,” said Horning. “Katchi Kapshida! We go together!”

The Raider Brigade has a storied history including four deployments to Iraq and, most recently, to Europe in 2015 as part of Operation Atlantic Resolve. While this is a new mission for the Raider Brigade and 3rd ID, it is the Army's fifth rotation to South Korea. The rotations began in 2015 after the 2nd ID's last organic combat brigade was deactivated.

In South Korea, the Raider Brigade will be supporting the 2nd ID in deterring aggression from The Peoples Democratic Republic of Korea and maintaining peace on the Peninsula.

“The seriousness of this mission is paramount, because forces that don't have the skill to win cannot deter,” said Adams. “Every Raider Soldier, NCO and Officer represented on the field today is ready to maintain themselves and their equipment at the highest state of readiness.”

Command Sgt. Maj. Alan Hummel, 4th Infantry Brigade Combat Team Senior enlisted advisor, 3rd ID uses the JBC-P during Vanguard Focus at Fort Stewart in January 2015 during Vanguard Focus. The unit was the first in the Army to field the upgraded system, which can display units, obstacles, graphics and mission essential information, while communicating to higher and lower commands.

Tool helps 'see' the battlefield

Spc. Jonathan Wallace
2ABCT Public Affairs

What if you could visualize your unit's movements on the battlefield, like a min-map in a video game? That is exactly the purpose of the Joint Battle Command-Platform, a computer system that visually communicates battlefield changes.

Soldiers from 2nd Combined Arms Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment, 2nd Armored Brigade Comwbat Team, 3rd Infantry Division spent a week of mastering the basics of this system at Fort Stewart, Feb. 19-23.

According to the Army's JBC-P website, this new capability is the Army's next generation force tracking system, equipping Soldiers with secure data encryption, free draw, text and messaging, delivering situational awareness to Soldiers at all levels on the battlefield.

"The system allows Soldiers to have a shared map and see movements and updates on that map," said Anthony Kempson, general dynamics training integrator for the JBC-P system. It should seem familiar to computer savvy Soldiers, with its tablet-like interface, touch-to-zoom maps, and drag-and-drop icons.

Stan Garden, Kempson's colleague, added that the GPS on the system tracks and updates positions every 100 meters, in real-time.

As Spartan Soldiers become proficient with JBC-P, they can directly feed new information ranging from enemy activities to terrain changes to the chain of command. Soldiers regularly contribute information from the battlefield, allowing commanders to make more informed decisions with their assets during war.

"The JBC-P provides commanders at all levels a communication tool that helps them see the battlefield and helps inform decision making," said Capt. Elise Neel, brigade signal officer. "This is one of many mission command systems we leverage to see ourselves, the enemy and the terrain."

As the Army's 15th and newest ABCT, the Spartan Brigade has begun fielding their ground combat vehicles and will begin crew and collective training this spring. Part of the fielding and training includes the installation of the JBC-P system on all three of the brigade's primary combat equipment: the Abrams main battle tank, Bradley fighting vehicle and the Paladin self-propelled howitzer.

74 years after being wounded in WWII, Edward H. Mims was presented the Purple Heart Medal for wounds received in service to the nation.

Purple Heart awarded to World War II veteran 74 years later

Kevin Larson

Fort Stewart Public Affairs

On April 11, 1944, the "Kansas City Kitty", a B-24 Liberator bomber assigned to the 566th Bombardment Squadron of the 8th Army Air Force out of Hethel, England, was shot down by enemy aircraft over Germany during World War II.

On February 23, nearly 74 years later, Edward H. Mims was presented the Purple Heart Medal for the wounds he received in the crashing bomber. He was 20 years old that fateful day; he's now 83 and living in The Villages—a retirement community roughly an hour northwest of Orlando—with his wife, Sandi.

"I'm thankful that I'm here," Mims said. "It was unbelievable that I was spared."

Mims was the top turret gunner on the bomber, serving alongside 10 men. Seven men, including Mims, bailed out of the aircraft after it was hit by enemy fighter fire. One man's parachute did not open. Mims and the surviving five men were captured and held as prisoners of war in Stalag 17B in Austria. He spent 390 days in the camp, where 4,000 others were held. Mims was liberated by U.S. forces on May 3, 1945, after enduring a westward 300-mile march after the stalag was evacuated in the face of oncoming Soviet forces encroaching from the east. Being a POW "wasn't a picnic," Mims said.

"It was something I didn't want to go through," he said. "But most of us managed."

Gene Parent, a military veteran and resident of The Villages and Mrs. Mims were instrumental in securing Mims' Purple Heart.

"We had to follow procedures to make a request to change military documents to include all military medals not yet awarded to him for World War II action in Europe," said Parent during the Purple Heart Medal ceremony held in the Villages' Eisenhower Recreation Center. "After filling out all the paperwork... (he was) denied the Purple Heart because the review board said they could not be sure his injuries were sustained by enemy action. You see, his military records were destroyed in the St. Louis fire back in 1973."

It took seven years of hard work and social media sleuthing to ensure Mims was awarded the medal he deserved.

"There was enough eye witness documentation to show that Sgt. Mims received injuries from the fire that went up through his top turret position and burned his face, head, and hands," Parent said.

It also took the support of the Trump administration, Mrs. Mims said.

"I am overwhelmed and have abundant joy and appreciation that my husband can be honored the way he should be honored," she said.

Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield garrison command team Col. Jason Wolter and Command Sgt. Maj. Marty Conroy presented the Purple Heart to Mims in the community's Eisenhower Recreation Center. It was a fitting location for the ceremony, with its museum vibe, showcasing artifacts from throughout the nation's military history.

"This is long overdue," Col. Wolter said. "Thank you for your service and sacrifice."

Although long overdue, Mrs. Mims said her husband still endures the unseen wounds the war left behind.

"He has post-traumatic stress disorder," she said. "He has nightmares, continual nightmares, where he is in the plane. And he'll wake me and he says 'would you please see if we're on land or in the sky.' It's an everlasting effect. For so long, he kept it in, didn't want to share it with his family. They kept on saying 'Ed, our children need to know what you and others have done for our county. Talk about it.' And he began to talk about."

Mims started to open up about his service about eight years ago, roughly the same time Mrs. Mims bought tickets for him and her to fly in a restored B-24 on Father's Day. Mims eyes' lit up and he chuckled as Mrs. Mims described the experience.

"It was so barbaric and so cold and smelled like gasoline," Mrs. Mims said.

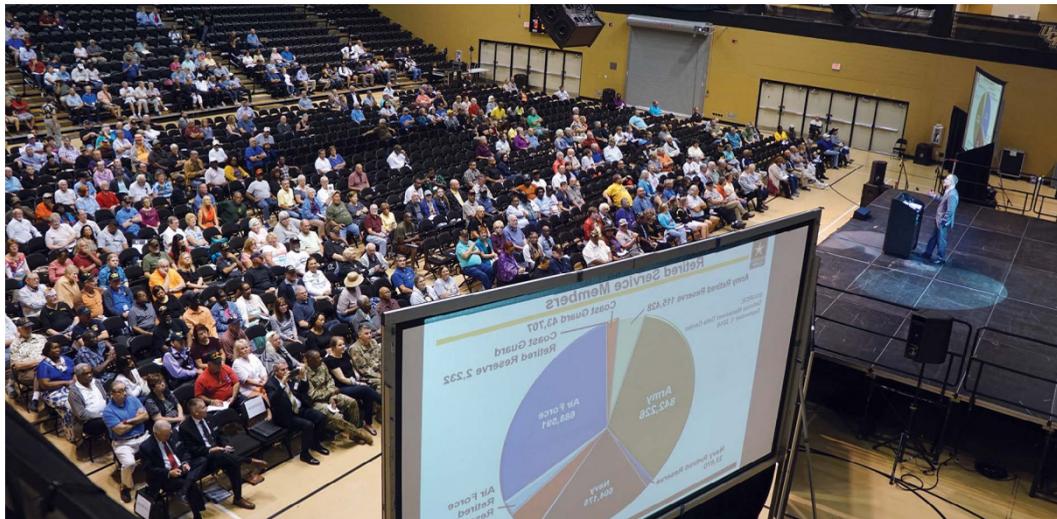

Mims said he was amazed people made an effort to restore a B-24.

"I was just surprised," he said. "I appreciated it."

As part of the ceremony, Parent asked for a moment of silence to honor the crew of Mims' Liberator.

The names of the crew are:

- Pilot, 1st Lt. Jack Wyatt, killed in action.
- Co-pilot, 2nd Lt. David Stiner, prisoner of war.

Fort Stewart supports Orlando RAD

More than 1,200 military veterans and retirees registered to attend the annual Retiree Appreciation Day held at the University of Central Florida in Orlando, with more than 2,000 attending. The day's events included updates about the Department of the Army's Retirement Services, TRICARE, and the Veterans Administration. The Vietnam War Commemoration program was also at the RAD; veterans who served during the Vietnam War, regardless of location, were asked to come forward. Fort Stewart garrison commander Col. Jason Wolter, and command sergeants major Marty Conroy and John Johnson presented the veterans with salutes and Vietnam Veteran lapel pins. As in past years, representatives from TRICARE and the identification card section were the most popular with veterans and their families.

Bank on it: Military Saves Week encourages saving over spending

Susan A. Merkner
US IMCOM

JOINT BASE SAN ANTONIO, FORT SAM HOUSTON, TEXAS - Unless you have a money tree in your backyard, it's likely that growing your personal finances from a tiny acorn to a mighty oak takes constant vigilance. Just like providing water and food to the garden, Soldiers and family members must employ tactics such as saving regularly and avoiding too much debt.

"The financial readiness of Soldiers and their families is a priority for the Army because it has a direct effect on mission readiness," Lt. Gen. Kenneth R. Dahl, Commanding General, U.S. Army Installation Management Command, said while signing a proclamation noting the Feb. 26 to March 3 observance of Military Saves Week.

"Soldiers and their families who manage their finances successfully have less stress and worry over bills, and are better equipped to withstand the unique demands of Army life," Dahl said. "Sound money management also helps them protect themselves against predatory lending and financial fraud."

This year's Military Saves theme is "Set a Goal. Make a Plan. Save Automatically."

The Military Saves proclamation, which Dahl signed Feb. 20 while accompanied by IMCOM Command Sgt. Maj. Melissa A. Judkins, states the importance of personal and household savings, calling it "fundamental to America's stability and vitality."

Soldiers and their families are encouraged to save regularly, set aside funds for retirement and pay off debt quickly. "The knowledge that personal finances are secure at home facilitates Soldier readiness," Dahl said.

After the signing, Dahl informally asked some of his staff members, "Are you saving money?" All replied affirmatively.

Dahl also recommended that Soldiers, families, civilians and retirees take the Military Saves pledge at <https://militarysaves.org/for-savers/savings-tools-and-resources/take-the-pledge> to save money, reduce debt and build wealth over time.

The pledge allows participants to choose a goal, such as creating an emergency fund, saving for retirement or a special trip, repaying debt, financing education, or building a transition fund for moves due to permanent change of station, temporary duty or shifting to civilian life.

A contest linked to social media also is offered.

Army installations are holding pledge drives and other events locally to reinforce the campaign's importance by joining with federal, state and local resources, including military banks and credit unions.

Military Saves is part of the nationwide America Saves Campaign conducted in cooperation with the Consumer Federation of America, one of the DOD's official financial readiness nonprofit partners. IMCOM is a partner in the Military Saves campaign.

Soldiers and families are encouraged to explore the variety of approved resources available:

Taking advantage of these resources can help Soldiers and Families feel more financially secure -- even without a money tree.

Reduced costs for certain drugs

TRICARE beneficiaries taking certain maintenance drugs for diabetes or high cholesterol are now paying lower or no copayments as part of a pilot program.

The Medication Adherence Pilot Program, launched on Feb. 1, will examine whether people are more likely to follow a medication treatment plan when those drugs are available at no-or-reduced cost.

TRICARE referrals, authorizations

If a necessary service is not available from the military hospitals and clinics, a referral will be required. Some procedures and services, including hospitalization, require prior authorization from Humana Military. WTB civilian mentors young basketball players

Zach Rehnstrom
Winn Public Affairs Specialist

In a crowded locker room, the Bradwell Tigers Varsity Girls Basketball team receives their last words of wisdom before heading out onto the court. Leading the charge is Assistant Coach, U.S. Army MEDDAC – Fort Stewart Warrior Transition Battalion, Victim Advocate, and former Army Sgt. Major, Dana King. King relies on the training and discipline that he received in his 25 years in the Army to keep the Lady Tigers ready and vigilant.

King, has spent over 10 years of his life as the assistant coach for the Lady Tigers, and understands the importance of providing his young team with a foundation in self-restraint.

“That’s our future,” King said. “The kids are our future, so we [have] to mentor them, to put them on the right track. So, this is going to be their world. We’re going to be gone one day, and we want to set the perfect example, the right example, for them to succeed in this world.”

Discipline and duty are principals that King understands well. King’s position as a victim advocate for the WTB, which involves counseling young Soldiers daily, has helped provide him with the necessary tools he needs when mentoring his young players on the court.

“Coach King has made a big impact on me,” Bradwell point guard Re’aja Depriest said. “When I first started, I didn’t have everything, but as a coach, he makes sure he’s going to get us there.”

King’s military training and discipline as a retired senior non-commissioned officer helps the players see the importance of preparing for the big challenges in life.

“He trains us really hard, and makes sure we have heart, and we never give up,” Depriest said. Head Varsity Girls’ Basketball Coach, Faye Baker has spent over 10 years alongside the retired senior NCO and understands the value he brings to the team.

“He brings discipline,” Baker said. “I mean, that’s one thing, one capacity that I don’t have to worry about, you know, as far as, training and getting the girls in the best shape possible to be ready to execute on the floor. So, he brings so much to our program, and I couldn’t do this without him.”

For Baker and King, keeping their team prepared for any contingency on the court is important, but they never lose sight of what really matters: providing the young girls on the team with a foundation for success.

“It’s more than winning basketball games,” Baker said. “It’s making these girls into productive citizens. So, we want them to work hard in all aspects of their life.”

At press time, the Lady Tigers were preparing to continue in the Georgia High School Association playoffs for the win. Even though King is focused on the Lady Tiger’s next victory he never lets that get in the way of his primary mission - providing the Soldiers of the WTB with a healing environment, so they can focus on what’s important, their mission to heal.

It’s time to change the batteries in your smoke and carbon monoxide detectors

Richard W. Rudolph
AFSBn Safety Officer

We will soon be moving time an hour ahead, so on the 10th of March before you go to bed spring your clocks ahead one hour. What an easy way to remember to change the batteries in your smoke and carbon monoxide detectors. It’s almost as quick as moving the clocks ahead an hour, as it is to change the batteries. Most importantly you could be saving your life, the life of a family member or pet. The use of smoke and carbon detectors saves lives by alerting you to danger and giving you and your family the extra time to get safely out of the house. It’s a wise idea to include the children in this, test the alarms so they know what they sound like. Have a plan on where to go and do a few practice runs so if something happens to you, the children still know to get out and where to gather. Explain to them if the alarm goes off get out of the house and go to a predetermined place to wait for everyone and the fire department, this is not a time to grab their favorite toy or doll, it’s time to get out. Discuss what to do if there is smoke, why it’s important to crawl across the floor. Hopefully your never have to do use your plan, but practicing your plan and changing the batteries could save your life.

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

Love serves the beloved

Maj. Jerald Jacobs
Plans and Operation Chaplain

The flowers have wilted and been thrown away. The chocolates have all been eaten and the box is gone. That special dress has been dry-cleaned and is hanging in a plastic bag in the closet.

Since Valentine's Day loving couples have had disagreements, spats and even arguments. What happened to the happy feelings and undying love celebrated a few weeks ago? What happened to "I love you"?

Life's what happened. Love is emotional, but it's not just about emotions. Love generates powerful feelings, but we can get very confused by our feelings. Mature love is far more than flowers and chocolates. Mature love is about commitment, not simply pleasure, connection or companionship.

Have you ever known a couple who has been married fifty years or more? They don't act like kids. Sometimes they may even sound harsh or angry when they talk to each other. They get excited about other things than romance or fun.

They can often finish each other's sentences with 100% accuracy. They see or hear something and, without either speaking a word, they're smiling to each other or sharing a silent tear because of a shared memory.

Ask them if they've ever had difficult times in their marriage, and they'll probably tell you about struggles or when they considered divorce - or homicide. They'll remember when they were young and in love, but, while they still love each other, it doesn't look or feel the same as it did fifty years ago.

They may even tell you they didn't celebrate St. Valentine's Day this year - or any year since 1986 - and won't be the least bit embarrassed about that. But they'll probably tell you they love each other more today than they did fifty years ago.

What happened to their love? It worked its way through hard times and hurt feelings. It changed. It grew deeper, richer, fuller and stronger.

Love cares more about the person who is loved than the person who loves. Love desires to build up, strengthen and serve the beloved - even if it's inconvenient, difficult or painful. Love gives, not takes.

Mature love doesn't need an annual pep rally. It makes every day a celebration of love, because it makes every day a celebration of the one who is loved. Mature lovers will still enjoy special days and events (maybe even Valentine's Day), but they won't need them to prove to themselves or anyone else that they love one another.

In the musical, Fiddler on the Roof, Tevye asks his wife, Golde, if she loves him. At first she's confused by the question, but sings, "Do I love you? For twenty-five years I've washed your clothes, cooked your meals, cleaned your house, given you children, milked the cow... For twenty-five years I've lived with him, fought with him, starved with him. Twenty-five years my bed is his. If that's not love, what is?" Tevye asks, "Then you love me?" and Golde responds, "I suppose I do."

That's a picture of mature love. Don't worry about it if today doesn't feel like Valentine's Day. It can feel even better than that.

Ready for battle: 3rd ID heads to invitational

Sgt. Arjenis Nunez
50th PAD

The 3rd Infantry Division finalized its combatives team roster on Feb. 16 with five fighters from various units across Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield.

Closing out the final training week at the Spartan Combatives Facility, the team readied its participants for the Combatives Tournament Invitational taking place Feb. 28-Mar. 3 at Fort Bragg, North Carolina.

"The concept of Army combatives is not mixed martial arts," said Staff Sgt. Thomas J. Housewright, combatives coach, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Armored Brigade Combat Team, 3rd ID. "You take some of the fundamentals of MMA and apply tactical uses, with and without weapons. That is what you get with combatives."

He added it's tactical extreme-close-quarters combat in a controlled environment.

Housewright has always been a fighter. Hailing from Gloucester City, New Jersey, he felt his surroundings growing up bred him to be the fighter he considers himself today.

It was an amateur match against one of his former Soldiers that humbled and motivated him to learn combatives and eventually compete in Army tournaments.

"He was really into MMA," Housewright said of his competitor. "He kicked my behind, but I didn't take it lying down. I couldn't accept losing, so I had to learn combatives to prevent myself from losing again."

Housewright stated he was determined to improve and maximize his skill level, so he attended the Tactical Army Combatives Instructor Course located in Fort Benning.

Competing in numerous tournaments and being a combatives instructor at both Fort Drum, New York and in Germany, led him to develop a Marne combatives program for Dog Face Soldiers.

Pfc. Michael Roberts, assigned to 3rd Battalion, 67th Armor Regiment, 2nd ABCT and a Houston, Texas native, said he jumped at the chance to join the team when his first sergeant asked if he was interested.

"Two years ago, when I first arrived at Stewart, I learned a bit more about combatives and tried out for the team because it was something I felt passionate about," Roberts said. "When I heard about Staff Sgt. Housewright's program, I immediately made it known that I wanted to be on the team."

Roberts said his down time is training time. Stretching to keep his body limber, cardio workouts to increase endurance and meditation to rid himself of any jitters are all a part of his regimen to be a stronger competitor at the tournament, he added.

"I'm working to be the best version of myself that I can be, plain and simple," Roberts said. "I have to push past my limits and outdo my fellow competitors."

Roberts was referring to Pfc. Jordan Dunn, assigned to 3rd Battalion, 67th Armor Regiment. Dunn also considers his biggest competition and rival to be Roberts.

"Roberts and I are in the same unit, so I want to be the best fighter coming out of H Co.," said Dunn. "It's healthy competition and pushes both of us to be better Soldiers altogether."

Dunn said his approach to the training led him to discover his flaws, ways to improve and strengths he can refine to use throughout the competition.

"There's no way you're always going to win," he said. "You have to learn what you can do as you go, and having little experience in something like this makes me more determined to go and show everyone my efforts."

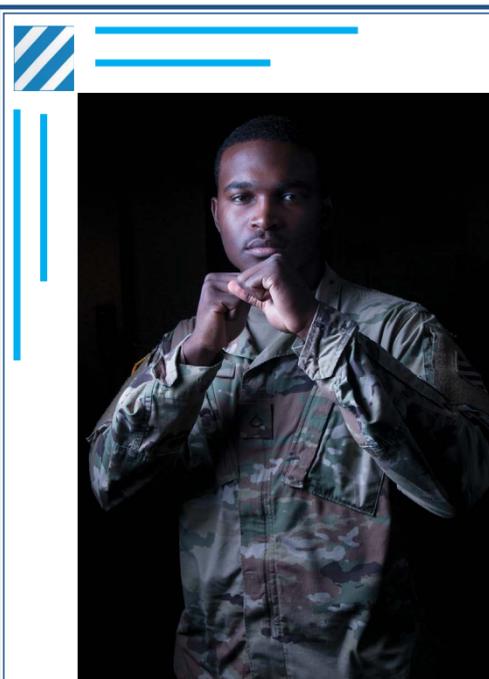

While managing to recruit five fighters for the team, Housewright is still struggling to fill slots due to misconceptions about the training.

"There is this fear amongst some leaders that their Soldiers will get injured and miss duty at a critical time if they join the combatives team," Housewright said. "I can honestly tell you that the training is done in a controlled environment where the basics and fundamentals are drilled into each fighter, which helps prevent injury."

He wants 3rd ID leadership to feel confident their Soldiers are in good hands - learning how to be tactful and aware of what they can do to mitigate serious injury.

For Housewright's program to draw in more members, he needs leadership across Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield to communicate to their Soldiers that 3rd ID has a combatives team and all are welcome to try out.

"The most important thing for me outside of getting my team ready to compete at Bragg is getting the leadership to understand that this is not a fight-house system. This isn't MMA," Housewright said. "These
