Aircraft crash investigated

Special to the Frontline

An investigation is underway to determine what may have caused a Puerto Rico Air National Guard WC-130H "Hercules" cargo aircraft to crash May 2 about 11:30 a.m. near Savannah Hilton Head International Airport shortly after takeoff.

Nine airmen from the Puerto Rico ANG aboard the aircraft died as result of the crash.

People in the area at the time of the incident who may have witnessed the event or captured imagery are asked to email any information they have to the team of investigators at savsafetyboard@gmail.com.

"An investigation is currently in progress to determine the cause of this tragic event and ways to prevent such occurrences in the future," said Col. Pete Boone, 165th Airlift Wing vice commander. "It is extremely important to us to fully understand what has happened."

"I can assure you the United States Air Force will conduct a thorough investigation in hopes to minimize the chances of such occurrences from happening in the future," said Boone. "Any speculation at this point without having all the details could affect the outcome of the investigation."

Spring Carnival offers family fun

Pat Young

Hundreds of people visited the Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield Spring Carnival, May 4-6, hosted by the Directorate of Morale, Welfare and Recreation and supported by Modern Midways out of Chicago, Illinois.

The carnival offered food and beverages, information and game booths and rides for people of all ages.

The children rides included a miniature roller coaster (Dragon Wagon), a miniature bounce machine (Frog Hopper), a bumper boat ride and more. Among the family rides were a 120 foot super slide, a Ferris wheel, and a fun house. Thrill rides included the Tap Out, Yo-Yo, Hurricane and the Spider.

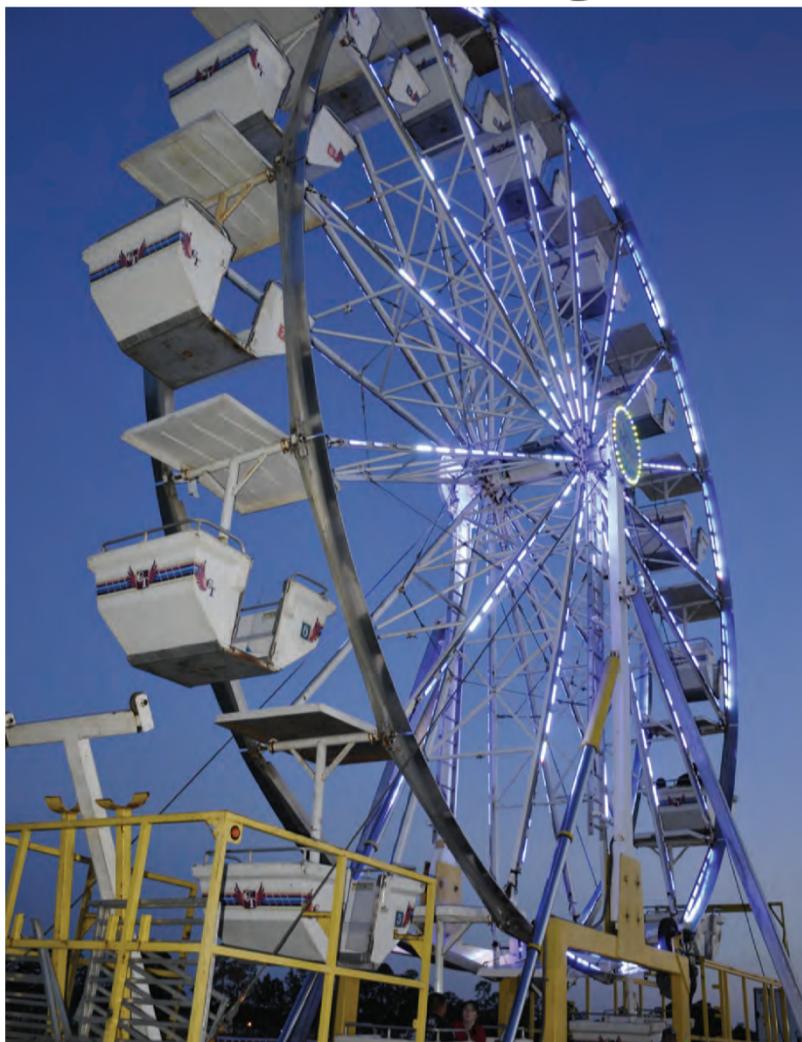

Danyale Jones, a Hinesville resident, brought her family to the carnival to let the children unwind and have some fun.

"I thought it would be nice to let the kids have fun and maybe enjoy some funnel cake," Jones said.

The carnival's general manager, known by his crew as "The Governor," also a 12 year veteran and the son of an Air Force Careerist said he understood what military life was like.

"I think the carnival helps make a difference because it provides a break in the normal routine," The Governor said. "Military life is hard enough with the constant moving."

He said he appreciated how it helped families learn to be resilient. Events like the carnival helped make good memories.

The Fort Stewart Spring Carnival included a Ferris Wheel, May 4.

Community members ride the Spider, May 4, during the Spring Carnival.

Retired Army Lt. Col. William R. Von Harten (left) and former Sgt. Samuel B. Hollis, walk from Hunter Army Airfield's Tominac Fitness Center May 4 to the charter bus that will transport them to and around Washington D.C. Twenty-four veterans from World War II, the Korean War and the Vietnam War were given a Tour of Honor as part of the nation's Honor Flight Program. The sidewalk from Tominac to the bus was lined with Service Members from each branch of the Armed Forces who saluted the veterans as they passed.

24 local military veterans head to Nation's capital

Steve Hart
Hunter Army Airfield Public Affairs

For the 18th time since the inaugural Honor Flight on October 24, 2009, Honor Flight Savannah sponsored 24 military veterans from the local area with a trip to Washington, D.C. May 4 – 6 to see the various war memorials built and dedicated to honor their service and sacrifices in past wars. Veterans will also view the Changing of Guard at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington Cemetery.

The 24 veterans brings Honor Flight Savannah's total number of World War II and Korean and Vietnam War veterans being honored to more than 1,200, since the start of the program.

"This means a lot to a lot of people," said Sam Hollis, a 92-year-old veteran of World War II who is going on the trip. "I am looking forward to associating with some of these guys," added the former Soldier who served in Gen. George S. Patton's Third Army.

The initial Honor Flight was at the national level in 2005. It targeted World War II veterans. The target audience was expanded to veterans of the Korean and Vietnam Wars in 2013.

Veterans now travel by charter bus. Transportation, meals and lodging are free to participating veterans. Each veteran is assigned an escort.

"I'm proud to be here with other citizens who have come forward to support these veterans," said Bonnie Humphrey, an escort for a Vietnam Veteran.

"It's always humbling to stand in the presence of greatness," said Lt. Col. Ken Dwyer, in his remarks to the veterans and those in attendance to see the veterans off. "For the veterans that we honor today, there are no words to express the thanks that our country owes you. The freedoms we enjoy in this great nation exist because of your courage, because of your commitment and because of your sacrifice."

The Honor Flight Network has transported thousands of veterans from across the United States. Honor Flight Savannah's market includes Coastal Georgia and South Carolina's Low Country. Friday's trip includes one veteran of World War II, three from the Korean War and 20 from the Vietnam War.

Diamond Elementary holds Law Day

Tia Garrett
 Frontline staff

Diamond Elementary School hosted Law Day for the fifth graders, May 1 at Fort Stewart.

Capt. Jeff Johnston, 1st Lt. Danielle Cowan, Staff Sgt. Rhiannon Williams and Spc. Tyshea Council, from Fort Stewart's Staff Judge Advocate's office supported the event.

The SJA staff presented a snapshot of the three branches of governments and the interaction between the legislative, judicial, and executive branches – to help create laws.

Johnston explained interaction between the Congress, the courts and the White House, all play tremendous parts – and let them experience the process in their own classroom.

The fifth graders were selected for the various roles of government and asked to see the importance of voting.

The SJA then answered questions regarding how the various offices were filled; and when the White House was built.

Community members can learn more class activities by following the School Liaison page on the Team Stewart Website at <http://www.stewart.army.mil/index.php/my-fort/for-families/school>.

The Sullivan Cup, a biennial competition to determine the best tank crew in the Army through a series of scored tests, finished today with 2nd ABCT, 3rd ID, from Fort Stewart, earning the top spot May 4 at Fort Benning.

The first day of competition included a stress shoot adapted specifically for tank crews and a ranked simulated combat maneuver exercise. On the second days, the crews conducted a live-fire exercise and a situational training exercise. The scored events were meant to represent both what tank crews trained on and what they could expect in combat.

“What do we expect of a tank crew in our Army today?” Lesperance asked rhetorically during the closing ceremony. “We expect that tank crew to be able to survive, maneuver to a point of positional advantage, to get our weapons into the fight and to deliver first-round lethality and have an effect on our target and have our target destroyed.”

Staff Sgt. Johnathan Werner, tank commander, Cpl. Justin Harris, gunner, Pvt. Brandon Zacher, loader, and Pvt. Dekken Sanders, driver, the winning tank crew from 2nd ABCT, 3rd ID, had only worked together for a few months before joining the competition.

“It’s pretty intense for the past roughly three months, but we gave it our all,” said Harris.

Werner described the competition as “fierce.”

“This is stuff that we do on a day-to-day basis – tanker grade gunnery, maneuvering – this is our job,” said Werner. “But when you put everyone in one area, the best of the best you possibly in the entire world, and then you compete and you have a bunch of alpha males, it kind of speaks for itself.”

Werner echoed Lesperance’s belief in the real-life use of the training they received during the competition.

“The way they facilitated the training, just by the book, the way they did the props for the gunnery, the way they did the STX training and the stress shoot, it was a little more realistic for combat engagement,” said Werner. “We should be able to take that back to the units and implement that on a lower level, not necessarily just for competitors. But if we can do this worldwide and have the worldwide training, the way the Army can, it’s what we really need to work toward.”

Both Zacher and Sanders, who have been in the Army for less than a year, found it strange to return to Fort Benning after finishing their basic training here. Sanders described the experience as “surreal.” Zacher appreciated seeing his trainers.

“It’s been pretty great seeing some of our old drill sergeants and shaking their hands,” said Zacher. “They’ve been rooting for us, so it feels great.”

3rd Infantry Division Noncommissioned Officer of the Year, Staff Sgt. Joshua Jacques, 1st Battalion, 9th Artillery Regiment, 3rd Infantry Division Artillery, makes his way down a rope wall while competing in the Best Warrior competition May 2, 2018, at Fort Stewart, Ga. The competition consisted of events that measured each competitor's physical and mental toughness; and technical and tactical proficiency. Jacques will represent the division at the XVIII Airborne Corps Best Warrior Competition in June.

Sweat and grit: 3rd ID announces NCO and Soldier of the Year

Sgt. Arjenis Nunez
50th PAD

Third Infantry Division announced the winners of this year's Noncommissioned Officer and Soldier of the Year Competition, May 7, at Fort Stewart, Georgia.

Staff Sgt. Joshua Jacques and Spc. Jamie Martinez-Feliciano, fire support specialists with 1st Battalion, 9th Artillery Regiment, 3rd Infantry Division Artillery, will go on to compete in the XVIII Airborne Corps Best Warrior competition in June.

The three-day competition consisted of events that measured the Soldiers physical and mental toughness, resilience and tactical proficiency.

A total of six NCOs and six Soldiers represented various units across the Marine Division.

"The Soldiers were put through the ringer to select the best and test their ability to perform at the next level," said Sgt. 1st Class Jeffery Johnson, operations sergeant for the 3rd ID and the noncommissioned officer in charge of the competition.

To test the bounds of each Soldier's ability, competitors had to go through an array of events including a physical fitness test, weapons qualifications, stress shoot, obstacle course, swim race, ruck march, land navigation course, written exam and a board.

"I needed to push past my limits," said Pfc. Sevon Blakney, a radio and communication security repairer with the 87th Combat Sustainment Support Battalion, 3rd ID Sustainment Brigade. "You're competing against everybody to be the best."

Johnson said the competitors were judged on a point system for each event. First place received 100 points, second place received 90 points and third place received 80 points.

Some competitors use different motivators to carry them throughout the competition.

"My mom was my biggest motivation," Blakney said. "We grew up impoverished, with my mom raising eight kids on her own in a two-bedroom apartment while going to nursing school and working a job. She just kept driving on to keep us fed."

Equally determined - Cpl. Janelle Travis, a combat medic assigned to 2nd Combined Arms Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment, 2nd Armored Brigade Combat Team, said she needed to treat this competition like her rigorous fitness regimen and fight through the pain.

"The ruck march was especially challenging because it came after a really physical day," Travis said. "With physical fitness being a top priority in my life, I used my training and embraced the suck."

Competitors like Travis, drew on the encouragement and faith leaders had in her to make it through the competition.

"To succeed, I really just kept thinking about how Command Sgt. Maj. Jonathan E. Reffeor encouraged me to compete and vouched for me. That carried me through," Travis said. "I didn't want to let him down."

Travis said her biggest lesson from this competition is how diverse a competitor has to be to successfully navigate through the challenges.

Blakney said he learned just how much it takes to go through a competition like this and will continue training to enhance his physical readiness and his capability.

"I think the Soldier's biggest takeaway from the competition is knowing what they have to shoot for in future NCO and Soldier of the year competitions," Johnson said. "They can talk about this competition with the Soldiers in their unit and motivate them to participate in the future."

Jacques and Martinez-Feliciano will spend the next few weeks preparing for the XIII Airborne Corps Best warrior competition.

Soldier for Life VA program graduates 43

Special to the Frontline

Forty-three Soldiers for Life began their first steps in their new careers with the Department of Veterans Affairs during a graduation ceremony May 3 at Fort Stewart's education center.

The Soldiers completed the Warrior Training Advancement Course, a transition assistance program designed to train those leaving active duty in the skills needed to be a Veterans Benefits Administration claims assistant at one of the department's 56 regional offices around the nation.

James Byrne, the General Counsel for Veterans Affairs, was the graduation keynote speaker. A prior service member himself—Byrne served in the Marine Corps.

"The WARTAC program is a great collaboration and connection between the Department of Defense and the VA," Byrne said.

Fort Stewart Garrison Commander Col. Jason Wolter was also at the graduation. He thanked the transitioning Soldiers for their service and commitment.

"I appreciated that you served and will continue to serve our nation," Wolter said.

Wolter also spoke highly of the WARTAC program.

"It's taking great Soldiers who are going to help great Soldiers," he said.

Graduate Marine Cpl. Brenda Godinet, USMC echoed the sentiments of Byrne in his speech to the class. She said, "it has been a great pleasure working alongside my brothers and sisters in arms while preparing to make a difference for America's veterans." I am truly grateful for this amazing opportunity," Godinet said.

Graduate Sgt. Joe Young said this is not just a great program but it has set me up for life after the military. I am ready to provide our veterans with first class service.

Lastly the Transition Services Manager, Patrick W. Bean, Sr. expressed his thoughts of the Veterans Affairs Initiative. "Many people will say that 'knowledge is power.' I prefer 'the intelligent use of knowledge is power.'"

"Knowing is not enough without application and forward movement – the placing of that knowledge into action. The Veterans Affairs partnership with the Soldier for Life Transition Assistance Program has done an exceptional job of putting a large amount of relevant knowledge into one package for transitioning service members - and then train transitioning service members on how to apply that knowledge as Veteran Service Representatives across the nation, Bean said. "Our "Honor" value speaks volumes of each of these transitioning Soldiers to serve our nation and then continue serving our nation veterans and their families. Truly honorable, Soldiers for Life!" Bean added.

Operation Chicken Dinner serves Soldiers

Representatives of the Alee Shriners of Savannah hand a member of the USCG Air Station Savannah a chicken dinner at Hunter Army Airfield May 4. The dinner was one of 1,000 the Shriners donated to Service Members based on Hunter. Fifty-five Shriners began grilling the chicken at 11 p.m. the evening of May 3 and continued cooking throughout the morning the following day. "It's an honor to donate these dinners as a token of appreciation to the men and women who risk everything for the community," said Billy Phillips, past potentate and current chairman of the chicken dinner committee. "This event exemplifies the tremendous relationship that exists between the community of Savannah and Coastal Georgia," said Lt. Col. Ken Dwyer, Hunter garrison commander. Some service members took multiple dinners home to their families. "It says a lot for them to do this," said Spc. Secheangel Richardson, a Soldier assigned to the 603rd Aviation Support Battalion, 3rd Combat Aviation Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division.

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

Offer blessing by thinking on better things

Chap. Maj. David Stoner
188th IBCT Chaplain

Growing up I had heard many ministers use an old adage that went something like, "An idle mind is the devil's playground." The idea was that if a person kept their mind busy they were less likely to get into trouble. Although there is some real truth to such a wise saying, it is not enough to just keep one's mind busy.

Many spend a lot of time and energy thinking, but they are thinking of wrong things. Many become focused on things that are not real issues or blow things out of proportion, which causes them to be unnecessarily burdened. Some worry over many things they cannot control or things that will most likely never happen. The "what-ifs" of life are generally "never-will-bes", but many invest significant time and energy into worrying about them.

Others hold on to old offenses or assumed wrongdoings, letting anger fester, thereby poisoning their thoughts. Still others allow immoral imaginations to feed their temptations which often leads a person to following after their desires. Every act of adultery began when someone thought they wanted to be with another person. Wrong thoughts often lead to bad decisions, ending in disastrous results. Just thinking has the capability to bring a lot of negative into our lives. It is not enough to have a busy mind if it is busy at doing something wrong.

The Bible offers a better method of avoiding the destructive nature an undisciplined mind can produce. Philippians 4:8 says, "Finally, brothers and sisters, whatever is true, whatever is noble, whatever is right, whatever is pure, whatever is lovely, whatever is admirable—if anything is excellent or praiseworthy—think about such things." A mind that is focused on positive things has the capability to provide one with a joyful spirit and a healthier disposition. When one thinks better thoughts they generally interpret other actions in a more positive manner.

Some studies seem to indicate that a positive mindset even causes our physical health to improve. One is literally healthier just by thinking about good things. A mind that is focused on good things also provides one with better goals or examples to live by. Better thinking produces better actions which generally provides better lives - for the one thinking better and for those who come into contact with them. So let us do ourselves a favor and bless the people around us by thinking on better things.

Federal employees offered viewpoint survey

Special to the Frontline

The Federal Employee Viewpoint Survey is an annual government-wide survey that measures federal employees' perceptions regarding critical work-life areas that drive employee satisfaction, engagement, and retention in the workforce. The survey results provide valuable insight for senior leaders into the strengths and challenges of the Army in ensuring it has an effective Civilian workforce.

The Army's 2017 Federal Employee Viewpoint Survey results demonstrated:

Only about one third of those surveyed, responded.

Responders continue to have a low belief their responses will make a difference.

To continue to increase engagement and communication across the Army, we strongly encourage participation in the 2018 FEVS. Responses from the 2017 FEVS helped guide the Army in developing more tailored programs and initiatives including: fully implementing the Emerging Enterprise Leader program; delivering supervisor-and executive-level engagement events; sharing engagement best practices via the Employee Engagement Council; and implementing the pilot for the Supervisor Enrichment and Development Program. Additional information on both employee engagement and FEVS can be found in the attached infographic and poster.

Below is information about the 2018 FEVS. The Army aims to achieve a 50% participation rate so it is available to ALL appropriated fund Department of the Army civilians who meet the eligibility requirements identified below.

The USACE window is May 1 - June 12.

Full-time or part-time, permanent, non-seasonal employees onboard with the Army as of October 2017 are eligible.

The survey population includes all Civilians who meet the above eligibility requirements will receive an invitation to complete the FEVS.

The survey link is available at <https://feedback.opm.gov>

The survey email address is Evar@opm.gov.

The survey email subject line will read, "The Federal Employee Viewpoint Survey: Empowering Employees. Inspiring Change."

The Office of Personnel and Management (OPM) does not provide Army with individual responses. Results are reported in aggregate form.

The survey takes about 20-25 minutes to complete.

In addition to the traditional FEVS, OPM is testing a new version of the FEVS. Once you complete the FEVS, you will be given an option to take the new version. Completing the test version of the FEVS is not required to have your traditional FEVS considered complete. Participation in the testing is optional and will not impact Army's FEVS results.

DES CORNER:

All-terrain vehicle safety

Richard W. Rudolph
AFSBn Safety Office

In Georgia, all-terrain vehicle (ATV) riding is an all-time favorite pastime, where most riders enjoy the experience of off-road activities such as trail riding and "mudding". ATVs are powerful equipment, with some weighing more than 800 pounds and having the ability to exceed 50 mph. To exacerbate the safety concerns is the ATV's high center of gravity and the lack of roll bars, safety cages, or seatbelts. Simply stated, ATVs roll easily and can throw riders or worse-roll onto riders; with the potential of causing serious injuries.

AR 385-10, which also governs motorcycle safety, states that personnel who operate privately owned ATVs should complete appropriate operator safety training.

First, when operated on any DOD installation, in both on- and off-road modes, all Government-owned or privately owned ATVs (when equipped) must have headlights turned on at all times, except where prohibited by military mission, the SOFAs, or local laws. As a result, Commanders must ensure that all individuals covered by this regulation are wearing the following PPE while operating ATVs or other of-road vehicles on the installation and all Soldiers at any time on or off Army installations.

(1) Helmets. (a) For personnel riding motorcycles and ATVs in the United States, helmets must be certified to meet DOT Safety Standard No. 218, United Nations Economic Commission for Europe Standard 22-05, British Standard 6658, or Snell Standard M2005 according to DODI 6055.04, 20 April 2009, Change 2, references (w), (x), (y), and (z). (c) All helmets must be properly fastened under the chin.

(2) Eye protection. Eye protection must be designed to meet or exceed ANSI Z87.1, reference (z) for impact and shatter resistance which includes goggles, wraparound glasses, or a full-face shield (properly attached to a helmet). A windshield or fairing does not constitute eye protection.

(3) Foot protection. Foot protection includes sturdy over-the-ankle footwear that affords protection for the feet and ankles (durable leather or ballistic-type cloth athletic shoes that cover the ankles may be worn).

(4) Protective clothing. Protective clothing includes long-sleeved shirt or jacket, long trousers, and full-fingered gloves or mittens made from leather or other abrasion-resistant material. Motorcycles jackets and pants constructed of abrasion resistant materials (such as leather, Kevlar®, or Cordura®) and containing impact-absorbing padding are strongly encouraged. Riders are encouraged to select PPE that incorporates fluorescent colors and retro-reflective material.

(5) Government-owned ATVs. When riding Government-owned tactical ATVs, riders must wear additional PPE. As such, riders' PPE must include knee and shin guards and padded gloves. Additionally, Unit commanders may authorize using combat helmets for operating ATVs tactical vehicles during operations and training based on an operational risk assessment.

However, before any tactical ATV operations, operators must be trained on the tactical operations and on the controls that have been implemented to mitigate hazards. Curriculum and proficiency training Government-furnished (tactical and non-tactical) ATVs will be tailored to satisfy specific mission objectives. Consequently, riders must both motorcycle safety course and the Specialty Vehicle Institute of America-based course.

Remember PPE is a mandatory Always wear the required PPE as stated above and enjoy your trail blazing adventure, but please be safe and look out for others.

Hurricane Preparedness Week

Develop an evacuation plan

Courtesy of Chatham EMA

In the past two years, Chatham County has experienced two major hurricane events where mandatory evacuation orders were issued to residents. Many residents were not prepared to evacuate prior to the order being issued. By creating a plan now, citizens will be prepared and ready to go should an evacuation order be given. CEMA encourages all Chatham County residents to:

- Understand county evacuation zones.
- Determine evacuation destination.
- Friends/family's house
- Public Shelter

- Determine evacuation route and transportation.
- Private Vehicle
- Evacuation Assembly Area

In May 2017, Chatham County updated the evacuation zones and map. Residents should visit <https://www.chathamemergency.org/preparedness> to determine their evacuation zone on the Interactive Evac Zone map! Have these plans in place and written down.

Stay informed before, during and after an event by following CEMA on Facebook, Twitter and Instagram @ChathamEMA. If you would like to receive alerts via text message, text "Follow ChathamEMA" to 40404

Provider Stakes brings RSSB leadership together

Sgt. 1st Class Ben Navratil
3rd Sustainment Brigade Public Affairs

BAGRAM AIRFIELD, Afghanistan - Leaders from across the 3rd Infantry Division Resolute Support Sustainment Brigade conducted Provider Stakes at Bagram Airfield, Afghanistan, April 23-24.

Provider Stakes is a quarterly leader professional development session for command teams within the 3rd Inf. Div. RSSB footprint. Unlike previous iterations held at the unit's home station of Fort Stewart, this is the first one conducted downrange, with task organized units not normally part of the 3rd Inf. Div. Sustainment Bde. footprint participating.

"This gives the command teams a chance to interact with each other," said 1st Lt. Jacob Diebel, the 3rd Inf. Div. RSSB provost marshal who organized the two-day event, "and also offers a competitive forum where they can work through some tasks that they don't regularly do."

The first day of the event focused on testing the leaders' knowledge of basic warrior tasks and battle drills (WTBD). In mixed-gender teams of three, the participants strapped on their rucksacks and moved out to several stations on Bagram, where they were given a scenario and had to complete tasks including calling for fire and air support, reacting to a chemical attack, and first aid.

"These tasks are things that every Soldier in the Army should know, regardless of rank," said Diebel. "It's important that leaders retain that knowledge, so they better understand what their Soldiers are doing."

Following the WTBD course, the teams moved out to the range, where they qualified on the M9 pistol and M4 rifle, and were also tasked to assemble and disassemble a 240B machine gun and M249 squad automatic weapon.

While these larger weapons aren't normally assigned to command teams or senior Soldiers, Diebel said it's important that they still understand the weapons because their junior Soldiers will be carrying them.

The following day started with another physical event, as the teams conducted the Army Combat Readiness Test, a proposed replacement for the traditional Army Physical Fitness Test, which is still in development.

The proposed ACRT does away with the pushups and situps of the APFT replacing them with deadlifts, sled drags and a medicine ball toss among other exercises, according to the Army Times. It's a noticeable departure from the traditional APFT that many of these Soldiers have been supervising for years.

"I'm very excited about the proposed ACRT," said Command Sgt. Maj. Toby Grisham, senior enlisted advisor to the 3rd Inf. Div. RSSB. "It has one standard for all Soldiers, and is very doable to pass but extremely difficult to max, so Soldiers will have to really push themselves out of their comfort zones to achieve excellence."

Diebel said in addition to including a physical competition, his intent was to give the commanders and other leaders exposure to the proposed ACRT before it takes effect.

The final event of Provider Stakes was at the Bagram sling load yard, where the teams were shown how to package bundles to be slung under aircraft. After the lesson, the teams each packed their own bundles from scratch, strapping the cargo nets on to the boxes and making sure the bundles would be ready for air travel.

The commander's intent for the exercise was to push leadership at all levels throughout the RSSB to reinforce basic skills that they may be rusty on. Grisham said the event did just that.

2018 Army arts, crafts contest ramps up

Brittany Nelson
IMCOM

FORT SAM HOUSTON TEXAS - Get the crafting tools ready and the creative mind flowing, it is almost time for the 2018 Army Arts and Crafts contest.

The 2018 contest, held by the Morale, Welfare and Recreation G9 division of the U.S. Army Installation Management Command, will begin taking entries June 11 through Aug 13. The competition is open to active-duty military members and MWR- authorized patrons including retirees, families and Department of the Army civilians. Each participant can enter online up to three pieces of work per category.

The categories include ceramics, digital art, drawings, fiber/textile, glass art, metal and jewelry, mixed media, paintings and wood. Winners for each first place category will receive $300, $200 for second place and $100 for third.

Capt. Christopher Edmonds, who normally keeps his woodworking hobby private, entered last year's contest after hearing about the wood category. He won first place in 2017.

Edmonds, a cost benefit analyst for the Army Capabilities Integration Center at Fort Lee, Virginia, and an operations officer at the 200th Military Police Command at Fort Meade, Maryland, attributes his interest in wood working to his family heritage.

"[My] interest is hereditary as my patriarchal lineage is littered with carpenters and builders, but I honestly did not get into it myself until my late 20's," Edmonds said. "My wife needed a scrapbooking cabinet to better house her supplies and books which got me off and running."

From permanent change of station to work, Edmonds has been creating art for the past six years as his schedule allows. His inspiration for his winning piece "Infant changing table" was his daughter-to-be.

"My wife was pregnant and doing all of the heavy lifting making our daughter. As a father, there were limited things that I could do for her in the womb. I wanted to use the skills I have as a wood worker to make her some furniture that was not just to fill the immediate need, but something that she could pass on to her daughter someday," Edmonds said.

Edmonds enjoys woodworking because of its utility. He enjoy using a piece of rough wood to fill a need in his family.

"Instead of going out and buying something from Ikea, which would be much cheaper, I can build a custom piece that not only fills the required function, but can look beautiful in the process," Edmonds said. "There is no better feeling than when you can put that first coat of finish on a piece and see it come to life, transformed from raw dull wood to something living and colorful."

Contestants who have received a college degree or class credits in the arts or have received professional awards enter as an accomplished artist; those who have not enter as a novice artist.

Among the colorful works of winning art from the 2017 contest is Marie Powell's piece "Here Comes the Sun." Her mosaic tile work won first place for mixed media in the novice division. Powell entered as an MWR patron, her husband is an Army retiree.

Powell who has been making mosaics for 11 year, started while living in Vicenza, Italy, where she took a class. She then taught herself with books and years of practice. She said every time she makes a new piece she learns something new.

The winning work of art displays a bright sun surrounded by shades of blue and the appearance of a compass.

"'Here comes the sun' is a special piece, and one that shows my skill at using color, shapes and design after many years of creating mosaics. [It] is one of the best mosaics I have made, and I thought it could be recognized," Powell said. "It is a hand-drawn design using ideas from many photos and the glass tiles I use come in beautiful bright colors perfect for the sun."

Powell enjoys the craft because of its therapeutic qualities.

"Being a mosaic artist is relaxing, and the process itself is always interesting. Even when I am not happy with the result, I am always looking forward to starting again," Powell said.

Powell has entered the contest a total of three times. Among those returning to the contest is Monica Dahl, spouse of retired Lt. Col David Dahl. She won first and third place in the painting category for the accomplished division in 2017.

Dahl, a veteran painter, also won third place for drawing in 2015, third place and honorable mention for drawing and painting in 2012, third place for drawing and second for painting in 2011.

Dahl's works "Gratitude" and "Retired at Last" landed her first and third place in the 2017 contest. Her inspiration for "Gratitude" came from a previous piece, "Danita's Children."

"Danita started her school, hospital and orphanage in Haiti. This was a photograph of a little girl who came with her father and was so grateful for the lunch they received...that she said a prayer of thanks," Dahl said.

Dahl has been an artist from a young age and said she was interested in art from the time she could hold a crayon. Her interest continued to grow as she got older. She developed a love for creating artwork of animals and then children when she started her own family. She started doing commission pieces once she became an empty nester.

Dahl enjoys the craft because her pieces develop into more than just a picture on a canvas, they have meaning.

"Life is awesome and sacred. Each memory is a special moment in time for all of us. I can take that moment, bring it onto the canvas and keep it there for people to see as a memory that will last a lifetime," Dahl said.

As for aspiring artists, Dahl's advice is to draw all the time, never stop drawing because it is the foundation of all art. She urges people to never give up and never say "I can't do art or draw."

Dahl mentioned that the Army Arts and Crafts contest is very valuable to beginning artists because there is no pressure and it is affordable.

"It is fun and not as heavy in competition as so many other online contests. I wish more eligible artists knew about this and would try it," Dahl said.

June is just around the corner, be sure to check out the contest website for the entry form and rules of the contest. <http://www.armymwr.com/programs-and-services/arts-and-crafts/2017-arts-crafts-contest>
