Brown bag lunch held with Garrison Commander

The Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield garrison commander and Hunter garrison commander will conduct brown bag luncheons beginning January 2018 for Fort Stewart and Hunter employees beginning with the Directorate of Public Works on Jan. 19, 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., at building 624 in the garrison conference room. Employees are asked to bring their lunch.

The purpose of the brown bag program is to allow the garrison commander to get direct feedback from the workforce in an informal setting.

The brown bag luncheons are designed to inform, as well as, provide an informal forum for open communication between the garrison commander and the garrison workforce. A comment box is located in the lobby of building 1101 through Jan. 18 for employees to submit questions, comments or concerns for discussion.

In 2018, the Garrison Commander Brown Bag Luncheons will focus on non-supervisory personnel. Attendance is voluntary and open to all Garrison Department of Defense Civilian non-supervisors. The feedback gathered through this forum assists the garrison with understanding the level of engagement of the workforce and where if necessary to implement process improvements. Please inform your supervisor if you would like to attend. There will be other opportunities throughout the year to participate, if you are unable to attend a session.

3rd ID deploys, OPTEMPO increases

Staff Report

The Department of the Army announced in July, the deployment of approximately 200 Soldiers from the 3rd Infantry Division Headquarters, stationed at Fort Stewart to Afghanistan, in support of Operation Freedom's Sentinel.

The 3rd Infantry Division Headquarters was named to replace 1st Cavalry Division Headquarters at Bagram Airfield as the U.S.

Forces-Afghanistan's National Support Element.

Leaders of 3rd Infantry Division conducted a colors casing ceremony July 21 at Marne Garden on Fort Stewart, in preparation for the headquarters' deployment.

A primary mission for division staff will be to provide support, logistics and security to Soldiers of U.S. Forces-Afghanistan.

While the casing of the colors symbolized the departure of the division's headquarters, it also marked the beginning of Task Force Marne. Remaining units at Fort Stewart continued to train and enhance their capabilities while the division headquarters is deployed.

Some of the activities that took place during the year included 1st Armored Brigade Combat Team's National Training Center rotation, 2nd BCT's transition from infantry to armored, 48th Infantry BCT's Joint Readiness Training Center rotation and the division's 100th birthday celebration.

November 100 years of service

Staff Report

The 3rd Infantry Division celebrated 100 years of service to the nation Nov. 21, with Marne Week -- a week-long celebration of sporting events, Soldier competitions and Family activities that included a Twilight Tattoo and the grand opening of the 3rd ID Museum. In addition, the 3rd ID Museum had its grand opening Nov. 16.

While the installation celebrated the Marne Division birthday here, it also kicked off similar events in Afghanistan.

The Third Division was born at Camp Green, North Carolina, on Nov. 21, 1917. The United States had been at war with imperial Germany and its allies since April 6, 1917.

Today, the 3rd ID remains one of the Army's premier forces, with brigades deployed throughout the world including the Division Headquarters and Headquarters Battalion, the 3rd Combat Aviation Brigade and 3rd Sustainment Brigade in Afghanistan.

U.S. Army Public Affairs

WASHINGTON -- The Department of the Army announced today the spring 2018 deployment of the 1st Armored Brigade Combat Team, 3rd Infantry Division stationed at Fort Stewart to the Republic of Korea.

The 1st Armored Brigade will replace 2nd Armored Brigade Combat Team, 1st Cavalry Division as part of a regular rotation of forces and support the United States Forces-Korea's commitment to our Republic of Korea partners.

"The Raider Brigade has a proud history of answering the nation's call. Our unit recently completed a rigorous training cycle that culminated with a decisive action training environment rotation to the National Training Center at Fort Irwin, California. We are trained and ready to perform our mission as part of a long-standing alliance between the Republic of Korea and the United States," said Col. Mike Adams, 1st Armored Brigade commander.

January 9: Soldiers from the 3rd Infantry Division Sustainment Brigade conducted gunnery table qualifications and a convoy live fire exercise at Red Cloud Hotel and Red Cloud Golf ranges, located on Fort Stewart, Ga., from Jan. 9 to 28.

Conducted twice a year, this training provided familiarization and qualification requirements for the units' mission essential task list, something that unit gunners must be up to par on in preparation for other training events or missions.

"Anytime you do training that focuses on mastery of marksmanship, it just makes us more capable of our wartime mission," said Capt. Jason Akers, the officer in charge of the gunnery and also the commander for Headquarters and Headquarters Company, Special Troops Battalion. "It was nice to be able to spend three weeks just focusing on it."

This exercise demonstrated the 'crawl, walk, run' mentality, allowing Soldiers to first become familiar with the tasks through training and practice before qualifying and eventually conducting the live fire exercise.

Spartan Brigade became the Army's newest armored brigade

Staff Sgt. Nikki Felton,
Maj. Tony Hoefler
21BCT Public Affairs

When the Department of the Army announced that the 2nd Infantry Brigade Combat Team of 3rd Infantry Division at Fort Stewart became the U.S. Army's 15th armored brigade combat team in its inventory, the Spartan team initiated the planning process and went straight to work.

Converting a light infantry brigade into an armored brigade is a major undertaking that requires thorough planning and disciplined execution.

Even though the brigade is not scheduled to deploy within the next year, they continued to train and prepared to attend the National Training Center in the Spring of 2019.

The Spartan Brigade became an armored brigade combat team after being an infantry brigade combat team for the last two years.

Organizational requirements to convert were driven by the changing global landscape. Dynamic political and military behaviors throughout the world cause adjustments to the menu of options U.S. commanders need to prevent, shape and win against determined adversaries.

The brigade officially convert from light to armored in October.

Throughout the course of the training exercise, the Citizen-Soldiers worked alongside their active-duty counterparts of the 3rd Infantry Division stationed here. This is due to a recently established partnership through the Associated Unit Pilot Program (AUPP). The AUPP is designed to allow National Guard and Army Reserve units to leverage resources and capabilities of the active component of the United States Army. By working and training together, each component is able to leverage the different skill sets and levels of proficiency to build the Total Army effort.

Capt. Jarrod Morris,
3rd ID Public Affairs

Leaders and Soldiers of the 3rd Infantry Division welcomed Command Sgt. Maj. Daniel Hendrex as the incoming 3rd ID Command Sergeant Major at an assumption of responsibility ceremony at Marne Gardens, Fort Stewart, July 10.

“Today we officially welcome Command Sergeant Major Daniel Hendrex and his family,” said Maj. Gen. Leopoldo Quintas, the 3rd ID Commander. “He is exactly the right leader at the right time to serve as our 28th command sergeant major of the 3rd

Infantry Division.”
Quintas referenced Hendrex’s wealth of experience in armored formations, more than 20 years, including a previous assignment at Fort Stewart.

“Fort Stewart is not new territory for Command Sergeant Major Hendrex,” Quintas said. “He spent four years here as a Desert Rogue with 1-64 Armor in the 1990s, to include a deployment to Somalia.”

“Some of my most important lessons came as a young sergeant right here at Fort Stewart,” Hendrex said. “It’s all about being ready. (Readiness) is everything.”

1ABCT Soldiers prepare for training with CALFEX

By Jeff Whitten
Coastal Courier Managing Editor

An Apache helicopter from the 3rd Infantry Division's 3rd Combat Aviation Brigade interrupted the early afternoon stillness Sept. 1 on Fort Stewart's Red Cloud Range Golf, circling high above.

The lone helicopter set in motion another "iteration" of the 1st Armored Brigade Combat Team's CALFEX, or combined live fire exercise.

The exercise, which followed others like it earlier in the week, also came after months of training at the platoon, company, battery, battalion and brigade level.

All of it was preparation for the 1ABCT's upcoming rotation to the National Training Center at Fort Irwin, Calif.

The exercise, orchestrated and almost ballet-like, included rockets fired by the Apache, which acted as an aerial lookout, to the thump of rounds fired by Alpha Battery, 1st Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment. Soon, tanks from Alpha Company, 1-64 Armor rumbled quickly down a gravel road and pulled into fighting positions, their turrets moving back and forth until they found their target and fired.

Hurricane Irma threatens Stewart-Hunter area

Pat Young
Fort Stewart Public Affairs

In September, Hurricane Irma approached the Southeast region of the United States and threatened the state of Georgia. Local communities and the installation made the decision to take action in high risk areas.

More than 34,000 Soldiers, Civilians and Family members were able to evacuate to areas as near as Fort Gordon and Fort Benning, and as far as Tennessee and Alabama.

The impact of Hurricane Irma, according to the Georgia Emergency Management Agency, affected most of the state; including power loss in about 1.5 million homes; the closing of more than 159 county roads and Georgia ports; the closing of at least 27 school system and hundreds of down trees and power lines.

Seven combat medics from 2nd Armored Brigade Combat Team, 3rd Infantry Division, competed for the title of Best Medic during 3rd ID's Best Medic competition Oct. 11-12, 2017 at Fort Stewart.

The winners of the division competition went on to represent the Marne Division at the U.S. Army Best Medic competition at Joint Base San Antonio, Tx., Oct. 27 to Nov. 2.

“The Soldiers were tested in six different events, assessing their individual tactical, physical, and military occupational specialty proficiency,” said Master Sgt. Benjamin W. Wicks III, the Division Medical Operations Non-Commissioned Officer in Charge.

The contest included a 6-Mile foot march, combat water survival test, obstacle course, land navigation course, an army physical fitness test and a trauma lane.

Wicks said, while participating in the trauma lane, each competitor had to demonstrate their tactical and technical expertise during simulated mass casualty situations such as care under fire, tactical field care, and combat casualty evacuation care.

At the end of the competition, the top three contenders were announced.

Sgt. John C. Epes, a combat medic with Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, 2nd ABCT, 3rd ID, won first place. Spc. Brady A. Raider Brigade Completes Rotation to the National Training Center

Major Pete Bogart
1ABCT, 3ID Public Affairs Officer

“We want you to have your worst day here.”

Those were the words welcoming Soldiers from the 1st Armored Brigade Combat Team, 3rd Infantry Division “Raider Brigade” and enabler units as they arrived at Fort Irwin, CA, for National Training Center Decisive Action Rotation 18-01.

The training was challenging and realistic and the goal is to prepare units for combat by ensuring their hardest days are training and learning in the Mojave Desert and not on the battlefield.

The month long rotations are designed to stress every unit, staff section, and system that a brigade combat team employs. The scenarios adapted to meet the current real world threats and potential enemies a brigade combat team could potentially face.

Command Sgt. Major Robert Leimer, the Raider Brigade Command Sgt. Major, first came to NTC in 1988 and said the biggest change since then is how the rotational units are contested in every phase of the operation.

“When I first started coming to the National Training Center the schedule was predictable, you had a day for planning, a day for rehearsals and a day to fight,” said Leimer. “Now with the new open phasing concept the enemy is relentless and always testing your abilities 24/7.”

Deployed Soldiers Send Videos for Loved Ones at Home

Spc. Elizabeth White
3rd Sustainment Brigade

BAGRAM AIRFIELD, Afghanistan -- The holidays can be hard, and this holds true for those deployed overseas and for their families back in the states.

But soldiers with the 3rd Infantry Division Resolute Support Sustainment Brigade are able to bridge the gap between home and station with the help of the Special Troops Battalion Unit Ministry Team.

Army Pfc. Hertaycious King, a religious affairs specialist with the brigade, started the Reading to Kids program as a way for the soldiers in her unit to stay connected with their families back home. It was instantly popular, with many soldiers coming more than once to create recordings.

Maintaining Family Communications

"We've had about 25 soldiers in a month," King said. "It's nice to see the effect it has on them and will have for their children."

The soldiers pick out any children's book from the chapel's collection. King sets up a camera and records them reading as many books as they want. Some soldiers include messages at the end of their recordings for their families.

"One of the soldiers had to explain what he's doing because his daughter has been asking for him," King said. "He comes every week to get books and has done multiple videos."

"My daughter doesn't really grasp the reason why I'm not there and what I'm doing here," said Army Master Sgt. Jorge Berriosruiz, the brigade's chief ammunition noncommissioned officer. "She knows that I'm working, but as far as why I don't come home from work, she doesn't understand."

It can be hard for young children to grasp why their parents can't come home for so many months. By being able to see their parents reading to them, however much they want, soldiers can rest easier knowing they can still be there for their children.

"A Little Bit of Home"

"I try to read to them at least once a week," Berriosruiz said. "This helps bring a little bit of me home to them, and at the same time, it is showing them how much I care for and love them."

After they finish recording, King goes to work editing the videos, adding graphics and burning CDs to give to the soldiers. She also includes toys and candy for the parents to mail back to their children.

"Since we're away, we feel we can't do much. This is just another way of communicating," King said. "A lot of people are missing their kids' firsts, this is to let them know [their parents] love them and are thinking about them."

"I think [this recording] will give them comfort and make them feel loved," Berriosruiz said. "I would like to see more programs like this that help keep families engaged with one another and makes the distance between us seem nonexistent."

Prepare for your future

Nalona Fayson

Those of you who are in high school, now is the time start thinking about college if you decide you are going; if not college and you decide to join the military, start doing research on your field and career path now.

Even if you are a senior time hasn't run out yet. It's best to start applying to schools and for scholarships now. Higher education isn't cheap so trying your best to go through college with minimal debt is encouraged. Although, community service is not required, it's definitely looked at when applying for different schools. Getting involved with school activities and activities throughout your community is a great idea. Networking and connecting with people can help drastically because sometimes it's not about what you know but who you know.

College isn't easy but having acquaintances and friends in different areas can make life slightly easier. Your future is in the hands of yourself, stay on track and never let anyone tell you otherwise.

Stewart becomes Winter Wonderland

Photos by Spc. Tim King, 385th MP BN

A rare event occurred in Southeast Georgia as the area received two to four inches of snow during a Winter Storm that affected the region Jan. 3-4. The storm caused Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield to reduce operations due to 'Snow Days.' Children rejoiced, parents smiled and Soldiers were awestruck and the community was made pictureque. Photos include Warriors Walk (above) and displays in front of the 3rd Infantry Division Headquarters building on Fort Stewart.

Due to the operation tempo, this was the first time the division had been represented with Soldiers from every unit in several years.

Tuttle cuts ribbon for 3D Mammography service

Kaytrina Curtis
Winn ACH PAO

U.S. Army Medical Activity-Hunter Army Airfield's Tuttle Army Health Clinic cut the ribbon to signify the opening of their new Digital Breast Tomosynthesis or 3D mammography suite, April 13.

In 2013, which is the most recent statistics, more than 230 thousand women and 2,109 men were diagnosed with breast cancer. In both cases one third of those diagnosed lost their battle to this disease. Breast cancer crosses ethnic and racial lines, but is the most common cancer death among Hispanics. For white, black and Asian/Pacific Islander women, breast cancer is the second most common cause of death.

If patients are screened regularly, studies show a 25 percent reduction in deaths due to the potential for treatment to begin earlier in the course of the disease. Jacqueline Harvey, a Tuttle ACH registered nurse case manager and breast cancer survivor, said she was the first to be diagnosed in her family.

To schedule your well woman's exam and/or mammogram, please call the MEDDAC appointment line at 912-435-6633.

Thirteen of 3rd Infantry Division's top Soldiers braved the Best Warrior Competition to become the new non-commissioned officer or Soldier of the Year April 26 – 28 at Fort Stewart.

In the end, 3rd ID's Command Sgt. Maj. Walter Tagalicud announced Staff Sgt. Vlorim Aliu of Task Force 1-28, 48th Infantry Brigade Combat Team, and Spc. Ryan Baur of 3rd Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, 2nd Infantry Brigade Combat Team, as the winners.

"It was a close competition for all, but these two are going to represent the 3rd Infantry Division," Tagalicud said about the subsequent XVIII Airborne Corps board scheduled for June.

To win their illustrious titles, competitors completed an Army physical fitness test, foot march, stress shoot, obstacle course and other warrior tasks.

"These Soldiers and NCOs are better today than they were a week ago because of the training they did and the competition that sharpened their skills," said Tagalicud. "Congratulations to all of you. The commander, your command teams and I are very proud of what you've done."

New Year resolutions considered

Capt. Angel Berrios
83rd Chemical BN Chaplain

"Be always at war with your vices, at peace with your neighbors, and may each new year find you a better man." - Benjamin Franklin

The steadfast love of the Lord never ceases; his mercies never come to an end; they are new every morning; great is your faithfulness. (Lamentations 3:22-23)

Somebody once said, "No one can go back and start a new beginning, but anyone can start today and make a new ending." If you read this carefully, it says that we don't start over; but we begin again right where we are, making things better in our lives. And you know something: that's so great to know! The verses above assure us that because of God's love and mercies, there are always the possibilities of new beginnings.

So, here we are in 2018. If you're like most people, you have some

New Year resolution's that you are both excited and anxious about. Personally, I'm not big on resolutions, but if I were to make a New Year resolution, it would be to pursue and work on a stronger relationship with God. I can honestly say that always, all the time and every day, I want more of God. But even so, more of Him and less of me is always in order.

What I mean about, "less of me" is that I notice that I have a constant struggle with the fleshly, materialistic and selfish desires that apparently are a norm as we walk this narrow way in Christ. And that's OK. I'm not complaining at all because I know that as long as I put Him first in my life, He will continue to give me victory through His divine Holy Spirit.

Thought: How we start the day determines how we end it. So it is with how we start the week, the month and the year. Resolutions are all about passion, priorities and planning. Therefore, our resolution speaks volumes about our person and character in that it defines who we are. Are we passionate about God? Is He our priority? Are we planning accordingly?

I have always said that as followers of Christ, each New Year should be better than the previous year. Why? Because in Christ it's always a moving forward as we draw closer to Him, become strong in Him and grow more in His grace. Awesome stuff, huh? If you are a Christian and you feel stagnant in your relationship with the Lord, then now is the time to get things right with Him. It's 2018! If not now, then when?

"We will open the book. Its pages are blank. We are going to put words on them ourselves. The book is called Opportunity; and its first chapter is New Years Day." - Edith Lovejoy Pierce

Rodney Adkins, country music artist, headlined a celebration at Fort Stewart, June 14, in honor of the Army's 242nd Birthday.

Adkins addressed the crowd a few songs in thanking "his people," as he sings in his 2013 hit song "These are my people," for their service. He told hundreds of military service members and their Families he wanted to play as though they were hanging out on the front porch with a corn hole set nearby.

"It is an honor to come and hang out with you guys," Adkins said.

Military service members and their Families populated Newman Field for the Honoring Our Heroes event, which included a barbecue and free private concert.

The concert featured Adkins as the headliner, along with Brooke Eden - country music artist and former American Idol contestant, as the opener.

Stewart-Hunter gets glimpse of eclipse

Special to the Frontline

On August 21, a total eclipse of the Moon covering the Sun occurred. Anyone within the path of totality could see one of nature's most awe-inspiring sights - a total solar eclipse. This path, where the moon completely covered the sun and the sun's tenuous atmosphere - the corona - could be seen, as it stretched from Lincoln Beach, Oregon to Charleston, South Carolina. Observers outside the path only saw a partial solar eclipse where the moon covered part of the sun's disk.

Stewart celebrates season with holiday tree lighting at Stewart-Hunter

Spc. Noelle Wiehe

Soldiers and Family Members helped to make the season bright by gathering at the annual Fort Stewart Tree Lighting Ceremony Dec. 5 at Club Stewart.

"It's a fun night; it is short but sweet – just a little kickoff to the holiday season," said Dov Estroff, special event coordinator with Morale, Welfare and Recreation.

The event featured Christmas carols lead by elves and the Liberty County High School Chorus, the official lighting of the Club Stewart Christmas tree and a visit from Santa Claus.

Nearly 1,000 attendees had the opportunity to vote for their favorite gingerbread house built by Families Nov. 4 during a gingerbread house project event. The winner was announced on the MWR Facebook page and received a paid vacation to Tybee Island, Georgia.

Children enjoyed train rides, wrote letters to Santa and stowed them away in red mailboxes for shipment to the North Pole.

"I think it helps set the tone for the season," Estroff said.

Vendors at the event included Veterans

United, Coldwell Banker, Smile Doctors, IHG Army Hotels, 912 Living, J.C. Lewis Ford, Armed Forces Benefits Network, GeoVista Credit Union, and Xfinity and offered activities for children and their Families at booths during the event.

Col. Jason A. Wolter, garrison commander, thanked the vendors for their support, not only during the holiday season but all year round.

"We are truly grateful for your service and support for those who answer our nation's call," Wolter said.

Staff Sgt. Kayla Williams, Medical Department Activity, said her children were excited to see Santa Claus, the blowup reindeer and enjoyed the train ride.

Williams said it was important to bring her Family to the event because she wanted to spend time with them celebrating the season and seeing their friends from school.

"It reminds everybody that the meaning of the season is a time to grow and reflect as individuals and as Families," Estroff said. "We keep in mind our Soldiers who are not with us because they are deployed to various corners of the world and Families that are still here behind and to look out for each other and be safe during the season."

Installation Champs rain three pointers, earn third consecutive title

Pat Young
Frontline Staff

Emerging from a season impacted by training, the 2017 Intramural Champions from Fort Stewart played the Champions from Hunter Army Airfield, March 21, at Tominac Fitness Center. The game demonstrated two outstanding teams earned their way to the championship.

The Hunter's Champs, the 224th Military Intelligence Battalion, returned this year from winning the tournament the last two years. Their starting lineup was Courtney Brantley, Raphael Dawson, Titus Sanders, Jose Alvarado and Jay Twitty. Team Captain, Dawson, said they had a bit of sticky start this year as many of their players were pilots, and an active training season left them playing some of the regular season games with only five team members. But Dawson said they had a good strategy that helped them prevail against the undefeated 603rd Aviation in the Hunter Championships in the Hunter Championship; which they hoped to continue for the night's installation championship.

Fort Stewart's Champions, the 530th Engineer's starting lineup consisted of Chris Hicks, Gary Hunt, Kyle Saunders, Tim White and Johnnie Carter. The Engineers also had a late start in the season due to training going into the finals in 5th place, according to Fort Stewart Morale Welfare and Recreation Sport director Randy Walker. He added they beat the 396th Transportation to earn their shot in the Installation championship. The 530th Team Captain, White explained while they had a slow start, by the time the finals came around; they were coming together as a team; especially on defense.

Although Stewart's 530th Engineers tried to rally and managed to put another nine points on the board, they could not keep the hungry 224th MI Battalion and Hunter from their third Installation Championship, finishing the game, 38-29.

As 3rd Infantry Division Soldiers trained at Newman Gym, former professional boxer Evander Holyfield made a surprise visit, Aug 18, at Fort Stewart, Georgia, to show his thanks to the Marne Division for their relentless hard work and sacrifice.

Eyes bulged and mouths dropped as 'The Real Deal Holyfield' walked through the workout areas. Soldiers, young and old, all briefly paused their workout to greet Holyfield and to snap a selfie with a legend in the ring.

Holyfield lit up the room with his presence and expressed his thanks to all the Soldiers there in the gym.

Holyfield, a Georgia native, decided to give back to his community by starting up a project in the local area.

"We are working on a project in Savannah called Weapons Down and Knuckles Up," said Holyfield. "It's to deter young people from shooting one another and to provide them a positive outlet to settle their aggressive behavior."

Holyfield reached out to the Georgia Youth Challenge teens to mentor and give them an encouraging word.

"I was like you, growing up in the ghetto and other people would say that you would never become anything," Holyfield said. "There were three things my mother taught me and that was to listen, follow direction and don't quit."

As the meet and greet came to a close, Holyfield gave one more heart-felt and sincere thank you before leaving Newman Gym.

"I may have been a champion but the true champions are the Soldiers," Holyfield said. "The Soldiers are the winners because they are the support that keeps the American family together."

Hunter defeats Fort Stewart in intramural football grudge match

Courtesy Photo

Co. E, 2-3 Avn displays their trophy after earning their fourth consecutive Installation Intramural Flagfootball Championship; following their defeat of Fort Stewart's champion's the 530th Engineers, Nov. 8.

Steve Hart
Public Affairs Office

"This team is an absolute dynasty," said Command Sgt. Maj. Levander Wilkerson of the intramural flag football team from Company E, 2nd Battalion, 3rd Aviation Regiment following their fourth consecutive win over their Fort Stewart opponent at Hunter Army Airfield's Squires Sports Complex Nov. 8.

The challenge game is played annually following the completion of the flag football season and tournament at each installation. The contest features the winners of each tournament to determine bragging rights.

"Because of Soldier turnover, it is rare for a team win three years in a row, as 2-3 Aviation did last year," Wilkerson said, following the 2-3 Aviation win 44-29. "For a team to win four years in a row is simply astounding."

Unlike past years, when Echo Company, known as the Eagles, dominated the competition, this year's squad finished the regular season in fourth place, at 8-4. During the double-elimination tournament, the Eagles suffered a loss in the second game. They showed their resolve by winning three games in the loser's bracket to stay alive and earn a place in the championship game. With their backs against the wall, they would have to beat the team from the 3rd Battalion, 160th Special Operations Aviation Regiment (Airborne) twice to win their fourth consecutive championship. And they did, including a narrow 14-13 triumph in game two.

The 2-3 Aviation Eagles would get home field advantage against Fort Stewart's champs, a talented team from the 530rd Engineer Battalion.

The Eagles' offense didn't waste any time as Mario Holly, their dual-threat quarterback put 19 points on the scoreboard. The Engineers scored right before the half to draw within 12 points, 19-7.

The Engineers regrouped at halftime and closed the delta to four points, 25-21; However, a touchdown pass, his third of the game and a 60-yard interception return clinched the game.
