Everyone pays for fraud, waste, abuse

by Lionel R. Green
Stuttgart Citizen staff

Spec. Sigmund Fraud had a date at the movies he couldn't miss. However, he did miss the last afternoon bus to Robinson Barracks. So what, he had to access to a military vehicle with a full tank of gas. He just jumped right in and went to the Hilltop and made it on time. Heck, he was five minutes early. Pretty slick move, Sigmund.

That slick move may have only used a quarter of a tank of gas, but if everybody did the same thing Mr. Fraud did in those situations, those quarter tanks would become half tanks and then full tanks. Someone has to pay for Fraud's abuse of the vehicle. Guess who pays?

We do. And not only in the form of tax dollars, but also in the form of fewer promotions, smaller or no pay raises, and less funds for PCS moves because those funds must be used to replace that gas that Fraud used.

The battle against Fraud is a tough one.

However, the fight against the Frauds of the military has not been futile.

During the last year, 55 agents assigned to the Resident Agencies and Branch Offices within the Stuttgart District have initiated 151 Reports of Investigation and recovered almost $1,500,000 during these investigations. The Stuttgart District, Second Region, of the U.S.

Army Criminal Investigation Command area of responsibility covers all of southern Germany and northern Italy. The investigations covered a broad category of offenses such as bribery, product substitution, anti-trust violations, false claims, and larceny.

Why aren't more of the offenses reported?

The problem is a lot of people who work on that level aren't always aware of what fraud, waste, and abuse are. If they don't know what to look for, they don't know what to report.

Fraud includes such offenses as collecting unauthorized housing allowances, or pilferage or diversion of supplies and funds through unauthorized channels.

Although there are several offenses that are classified as fraud against the government, general fraud is described as any offense committed by an individual with the intent to defraud in which the government suffers a loss and/or the individual gains.

Abuse of government property and services is another offense that is often committed for personal or monetary profit. Examples of abuse are unauthorized use of a military vehicle, unauthorized use of a copying machine, or using a military phone to make long-distance phone calls.

Waste cases, however, are usually not committed with the intent to gain profit. Using Army supplies for something that they're not intended for or throwing away excess supplies are forms of waste.

The Army will be forced to spend money to replace or repair equipment for services not received by allowing the offenses to go unreported. Fraud, waste, and abuse of government property and services are serious offenses that nearly everyone as taxpayers pay.

So, if you meet face-to-face with Mr. Fraud, report him to the proper authorities. Otherwise he'll just go on using your hard-earned bucks for his own self.

Year of the NCO

Old-timers beware: 'times are a-changin'

Lamenting the bygone good ol' days is a favorite pastime for folks who mix a touch of gray with Army green. They remember when a soldier's life was a simple life, a soldier's needs were the Army's needs, and a soldier's wants were "personal problems." Give us back the days of crew cuts, starched fatigues, the Women's Army Corps, families issued when needed, and junior enlisted soldiers whose vocabulary consists only of "yes, sergeant" they say, and we'll get the job done.

The Year of "the NCO" brings a message for advocates of "the way things used to be." That message is, "those days are gone, the job is still getting done, and don't make any long-range plans, old-timer."

Oh, the times, they are a-changin'.

Demographically, the Army of today bears little resemblance to its predecessors. Perhaps the most telling statistic is the percentage of married soldiers within the ranks — more than half. Fifty-six percent of the Army is married; 53 percent of enlisted soldiers are married. Other important differences between today's and yesterday's Army include a rising education level, a higher percentage of women and career soldiers, and a broader ethnic mix. It's a different Army.

Leading that Army into the 1990's and beyond is going to require a flexibility previously unneeded from NCOs. The call of duty, honor, and country still ring true, but in a married Army, "family" must be included among the soldier's values. To expect otherwise is simply unrealistic. While making sure that missions are accomplished, the NCO of today must be sensitive to family needs, his soldiers', and his own. And, of course, sensitivity has never been particularly high on the list of "desirable" NCO traits — until now.

Ever changeless, an old-timer here or there invariably refers to caring for soldiers and their families as "babysitting." What they don't realize is that, with marriage in the ranks on the rise, family support has evolved into an operational requirement and a mission imperative.

Another side effect of the married army is the forgotten single minority. Without the huge support network and political visibility of his married counterparts, the single soldier's quality of life and the mercy of unit leadership — the first sergeant and company commander.

The disparity between single and married lifestyles is indisputable, and NCOs must be sensitive to that as well. Just saying "the company takes care of barracks residents" isn't enough; NCOs must represent their single soldiers' interests when those interests are jeopardized by "hey you" details when their lives are unnecessarily encroached upon by the unit.

The NCO evaluation report can be used to reward NCOs who aren't mindful of their soldiers' needs. Citing "genuine concern for soldiers" as a performance standard, the NCO-ER will allow raters to permanently record whether an NCO displays the sensitivity and flexibility needed in today's Army. NCOs who think caring for soldiers is "babysitting" could (and should) merit "needs improvement" in that category.

The Army wants NCOs who are tough but fair. The Army wants NCOs who get the job done while attending to the welfare of the troops. The Army wants NCOs who can play an active part in leading the Army into the 21st century.

The Army doesn't want or need NCOs who refuse to accommodate the needs of the day. And, as those needs are ever-changing, NCOs must change with them — change jobs. (ARNews)

A tribute to slob, then and now

by Steve Snyder
Stuttgart Citizen staff

I was chewed out the other day for lighting up in a non-designated smoking area. Now, rules are rules and the Army regulation is clear. Violators have no kicks coming. Still, the philosophy behind that particular rule rankles. It smells like just another manifestation of the neo-puritanism which is sweeping not only the country but our Army as well.

I don't like it.

I am, unabashedly, a slob. While obliged to follow regulations, I don't have to agree with the rationale supporting them. I resent, in fact, holier-than-thou types attempting to reform me. If I wanted to be a monk, I'd join a monastery. But I don't and I won't.

In my opinion, the whole neo-puritanism bag is an insidious attempt to mess with innocent people. Slobs, for instance.

Webster's dictionary defines a slob as a sloppy, coarse, or boorish person. Face it. Slobs have more fun. They possess a certain elemental honesty and inner contentment which shines through the coffee stains on their shirts and the cigarette ashes decorating their desks. A child-like sense of innocence permeates the true slob's being.

Look at some of the Roman emperors, for instance. They used to stuff themselves at banquets, regurgitate their food and go back for more. That's the stuff true slobs are made of. Henry VIII was another who looms large in the slobbery hall of fame. He not only ate like a pig but beheaded anyone who didn't follow suit. Hank was a genuine class act.

Who can forget Oscar Madison, hero of TV's The Odd Couple? Played by Jack Klugmann, Madison was not only a consummate slob but a sadist as well. He drove Felix, his roommate and a hated neat freak, crazy.

Speaking of crazy, I'm disturbed by continual propaganda leveled against the use of alcohol. Granted, drinking and driving, et al., is a bad thing. Granted, the Army's policy here (as everywhere) is just perfect. But does anybody ever mention the advantages of taking a few stiff belts (at home or in walking distance of a pub)? There are some, ya' know.

Drinking, for one thing, is relaxing. Life is tough and anybody who works for a living deserves an occasional respite, no matter how humble. For slobs, though, drinking assumes a more critical vantage point. After all, a slob can always excuse his boorish behavior by saying "it was the beer talking." I've tried it and it works. Lame excuses are pathetic rationalizations and therefore ideal additions to any slob's vocabulary.

I suspect some of the impetus behind the facets of neo-puritanism I've mentioned lie with the fairer sex. Consider the following.

How many times will a woman buy a gentleman (or a slob) a drink? How often will she compliment him on the aroma given off by his cigar? When does a lady ever express appreciation over a good belch? Or sympathy when a man falls off his chair in a gasthaus?

Seldom, if ever! I think it's an outrage!

Women, too, often complain (at least to slobs) about men who lack "sensitivity." That's the cruellest cut of all. Slobs are among the most sensitive of God's creatures. When somebody criticizes me, for example, my first instinct is to rip his guts out. Now that's sensitivity!

In the final analysis, slobs are often demeaned in a cold, cruel, Emily Post-type world. That's a shame and a vast injustice. Billy Shakespeare said it all. "This above all: to thine own self be true, and it must follow, as the night the day, thou canst not then be false to any man."

So. Slobs of the world unite! You have nothing to lose but the spaghetti sauce dribbling down the side of your trousers.

Celebrations add luster to July 4th

GSMC celebrated the Fourth of July Tuesday with a plethora of fun, games, music, fireworks, and other activities designed to pay proper homage to our country's 213 years of freedom and independence.

Lurking behind the frenzied events, of course, was a very real pride expressed in America's stalwart accomplishments through the years. As our second president, John Adams, noted: "this day should be commemorated as the day of deliverance, by solemn acts of devotion to God Almighty . . . It ought to be solemnized with pomp and parades, with shows, games, sports, guns, bells, bonfires, and illuminations from one end of this continent to the other, from this time forward forevermore."

GSMC certainly carried on that tradition.

Everything from a sports parachute demonstration at Robinson Barracks to the multi-media presentation "Freedom in Your Eyes" held at Nellington Barracks from taekwondo (karate) displays at Pattonville to fireworks at each subcommunity to a fun run at Patton added luster to this most special of American holidays.

Not every GSMC family member felt the need to participate in formal celebrations, though. Many followed other fine American traditions: a barbecue in the back yard, fireworks, hot dogs, baseball, and other drinks with friends.

A grand old day for a grand old flag.

Fireworks light up the sky, despite the light rain.

Scouts prepare for skit as a volunteer keeps the bonfire going.

Boy Scouts | Bubblegum blowoffs, 40-ft. banana splits

by Bob Crockett
Editor, Stuttgart Citizen

Freizeit Park near Pattonville Housing area was the scene of this year's largest ever GSMC Boy Scouts of America Day Camp.

For five days, more than 350 adults, Boy Scouts, Cub Scouts, and Girl Scouts spent six hours at Camp Kan't Katch-a-Cub spending summer as it was meant to be: having fun.

According to Chris Taylor, Alpine District Club Activity Chairman, the GSMC camp began in 1982 and "has been growing ever since."

One parent volunteer saw many benefits for children of American servicemembers participating in scouting.

"It gives the child a natural in because scouts are all over the world," said Randall Ellis, a pediatric dentist at Robinson Barracks. "It aids in the transition of moving. It also teaches basic morality and life attitudes of being an American."

On the lighter side, kids were as divided as there were many opinions on just what was their favorite activity.

Vince Tolliver (11) and Nicole Steck (10) did agree that swimming held a special time for them.

Kids from Heilbronn, Stuttgart, Schwaebisch Hall, and Schwaebisch Gmuend were bused in daily to the site. With lunches in hand, they joined up at various activity sites and began their day. The seven to 11 year-old Cub Scouts earned badges, participated in Arts and Crafts, archery, nature learning, volleyball, earth ball, frisbee, shooting (bb gun), and swimming.

The older Boy Scouts (11 to 18) helped scout masters with the activities and were treated with overnight stays at the camp.

For those volunteers who had small children, volunteer Girl Scouts and other adults were on hand to help keep the tykes amused.

Each day was capped off with some grand activity.

There was a Bubblegum Blowoff and a 40-foot Banana Split free-for-all. For this year's camp finale on Friday, a potluck dinner preceded the traditional barnfire. Here scouts demonstrated their singing skills, talent for humor, and acting abilities to enjoyment of the capacity crowd gathered on the surrounding hillside.

Soldiers from the 7th Engineer Bde put up the eight tents and provided water trailers. Volunteers transported the scouts to and from the campsite. Medics with the 42nd Medical Company from Flak Kaserne spent their time on site giving First Aid Classes and tending to bumps and bruises.

Camp Director Chip Lugo, put a special emphasis on the volunteer help and the support received from local units.

"It was great," he said, "to see the boys having a good time and the community and parents getting involved."

His reward for all his time and effort in making the camp a success is measured in pride.

"My enjoyment comes when I'm walking around the community and a scout comes up to me and says 'hi Mr. Lugo. I can't wait until next year.'"

Chip Lugo, Director, calls for silence.

At first there was a banana split. . . . then there were kids with spoons. . . . then there was cool mayhem.

Blue Sox shine in G-A All-Star Game

Seven Stuttgart players named to South squad

Stuttgart Citizen sports writer

The Stuttgart Blue Sox made the Greater Stuttgart Military Community proud July 2 in the German-American Tele 5 All-Star Game displaying seven of the team's best talent. The Blue Sox started four on the Southern Division All-Stars, and had three others that came in and contributed in the South's 12-5 loss to the North.

The Blue Sox All-Stars were Greg Brown starting as the designated hitter, John Deltoro starting at shortstop, German Klaus Herman starting at third base, and Jake Williams starting in left field. Wendell Griffin came on to pitch, Henry Wood "The Third" relieved in center field, and German Danny Kleinbub relieved for the right fielder.

Prior to the game Brown stepped up in the Homerun Derby and swapped swings with Mannheim's slugger, All-Star MVP Victor Dunn, and four other participants. Both players hit two out of their first ten pitches out of the park to go into a sudden death with five more swings apiece. Dunn knocked two out of the five pitches over, and then Brown stepped up. With four pitches gone, Brown had already hit two homers. On the last pitch, he delivered the Homerun Derby clincher.

"The last thing I expected to do when I came to the ball park Sunday was to win the Homerun Derby," said Brown who hadn't hit a homer all season.

Stuttgart's players sparked for the most part on offense and defense. Williams led the offensive attack with an RBI double for the Stuttgart representatives, while Griffin threw three shutout innings for the defense.

The following are the statistics for the Blue Sox All-Stars so far this season:

	Avg.	HR	RBI's	Hits	Runs
Wood	.471	0	1	8	7
Brown	.371	0	7	13	15
Williams	.361	2	7	13	16
Deltoro	.312	0	3	8	7
Herman	.310	0	3	9	11
Kleinbub	.240	0	1	6	4

	W	L	ERA	SO	BB
Griffin	2	0	4.00	19	16

The Blue Sox are atop the Southern Division in the G-A Baseball League with an 8-4 record, 1 1/2 games ahead of Nuernberg.

The Blue Sox continue their season with home games scheduled for July 30 against Bad Toelz and their important finale Aug. 6 against Nuernberg. They play at Patch's Huskey Field.

Competitors of all ages celebrate July 4th

by Lionel R. Green
Stuttgart Citizen sports writer

The Fourth of July brought out the patriotism in all Americans. It also brought many sports competitors of all ages throughout the Greater Stuttgart Military Community. And, finally, it brought out many sports competitors of all ages.

And if you enjoy sports, then GSMC was the place to be on July 4th.

At Robinson Barracks in the Bad Cannstatt-Zuffenhausen Military Subcommunity, the day started off with a 2-mile Fun Run. In the Men's Open, Juan Colunga finished first and had the best time of the day at 10 minutes, 11 seconds. In the Men's Junior Vets category, Walter Yoter placed first. In the Men's Masters, William Easten finished first, while in the Men's Seniors division, James Williams placed first.

For the women, Debra Klein took top honors in the Women's Open, while Anne O'Kelly finished first in the Women's Junior Vets division. In the Women's Masters, Teresa Zagovski placed first.

Marvin Kitchens finished first in the 14-18-year-old age category, Peter Pomager in the 8-13, and three-year-old Jean-Pierre Vasquez in the 8-under division.

In the other sporting events, David Sargena and Rich Stengline were the best at horseshoes, Christopher Lehmann and Stephan Talley were tops in men's tennis, and Ms. Talley was the ace in women's tennis.

At Patch Barracks in the Vaihingen Military Subcommunity, the events started off on June 30 and lasted through the holiday with Sportsfest director Jerry Fleming making sure everything was just right as over 300 participants competed in seven different events.

In the bowling category, the Defense Communications Agency took the Men's crown, the Logistics Directorate took the Women's crown, and the Joint Intelligence Center (JIC) took the mixed division.

In the horseshoes competition, Melvin Byrd won in the Men's division, Diana Flannagan the Women's, Roland Caldwell the Senior's, and Jake Lopez won the Teen's division.

In the powerlifting event, Leonard

Clark, Terry Gainer and Vincent Martin all took home the gold medal.

In the racquetball competition, Carl Jones took the Men's Open, Janet Alexander notched the Women's title, and John McGill was the Senior victor.

For the softball tournament, JIC's A team won the Men's division, while the Patch Renegades #2 won the Coed championship.

In tennis, Sandy Pinkus won the Men's division, Georgiana Osbolt took the Women's, and Bob and Georgiana Osbolt won the Mixed Doubles.

In volleyball, JIC's men won their division, while the 578th Signal Bn. won the coed division.

Both the Patch Barracks Commander's Cup given to the best organization overall and the Spirit of America Sportsmanship Award given for the most participation went to JIC.

A round of applause to everyone that participated and helped in making this Fourth of July one of the best ever, and those that organized all the activities and events should get an extra round of applause for making this Fourth of July one of the funnest ever.

GSMC golf: 10 local golfers head to VII Corps tourney

The Greater Stuttgart Military Community Golf Tournament held June 28-29 at the Stuttgart Golf Course in Pattonville produced the community's representatives for the upcoming VII Corps Golf Tournament.

Robert Coons of the 589th Signal Co. edged Gordon Jaehale on the first hole of sudden death to win the Men's Open division. Coons came back from two strokes down in the first round, shooting a tournament low 72, to force the sudden death hole. Both Coons and Jaehale finished with a final score of 150.

"Basically, my strategy was just to play par golf," Coons said. "If I was going to get beat my opponents would have to beat me by shooting better than par."

Christopher Pegues of HHC, 2d COS-

COM finished third 11, strokes off the pace with a 161 and Kevin Hamilton shot an impressive second-round 75 to round out the qualifiers for VII Corps with a final score of 162.

In the Men's Masters division, Tim

Strutzel of HQ, EUCOM, dominated the field with a first-round 75 and followed that with a 74, to finish with a final score of 149. Douglas Tata of the 52d Signal Bn. won the battle for second place with a strong second-round 75. He finished eight strokes back at 157. Allen Parsons of DCA-Europe shot a consistent 159 tournament to place third, Kevin Holloway qualified with a final tally of 161.

In the Women's Open division, Kay Williams of HHC, VII Corps fired a 229 tournament total to finish 11 strokes ahead of second place Sheila Fielder of HHD, 4th Trans. Bn.

All the GSMC tournament qualifiers will participate in the VII Corps Tournament at Nuernberg starting today and lasting until Friday.

Program Synopsis

DANGEROUS LIAISONS — is a deliciously evil drama which spins the tale of two sadistic former lovers who take enormous pleasure in manipulating the affections of others.

COUSINS — is a delightfully old-fashioned heart-tugging love story concerning two modern day romantics related by marriage who fall hopelessly, head-over-heels in love. (Language, sex)

TROOP BEVERLY HILLS — When a sheltered society wife finds herself in the throes of an unexpected divorce she launches an all out effort to bolster her wounded self-esteem by taking on the leadership of her daughter's Girl Scout troop. (Language)

HONEY, I'VE SHRUNK THE KIDS — The all laughed at Rick Moranis' incredible electronic magnetic shrinking machine. Just ask his kids. Special effects and gaudy laughs enhance a fine story line in this fanciful tale.
