This new system provides basically the same services as the Stuttgart system it replaces. However, it does not provide applicants with the ability to obtain information on their personal qualification and referral information as has previously been available.

Applicants needing this information should inquire at the Job Information Center operated by the Stuttgart Civilian Personnel Office in room 309, bldg. 111, Robinson Barracks.

Preseparation briefing

The next preseparation briefing date is Aug. 10 at 9 a.m. at the Hilltop Theater on Robinson Barracks. This briefing is for all soldiers ETS-ing within the next 120 days.

MWR closing

All GSMC Morale, Welfare, and Recreation facilities, with the exception of Child Development Centers, will be closed for an MWR Organizational Day on Aug. 16, during normal duty hours.

MWR facilities will resume regular operation on the following day, Aug. 17. For information, contact your local MWR facility.

Child care program

Effective Aug. 1, the Grenadier Child Development Center will begin providing 15 percent of its total capacity for hourly child care.

The 8 a.m.-5 p.m. service will be available for children ages 6 weeks to 12 years, and will primarily be for parent medical appointments or other emergencies where care could not have been arranged in advance, with the exception of parents who do regularly scheduled volunteer work.

An hourly fee will be payable at the time of service. Parents must be registered with USAREUR CDS. For information, call 420-6346.

Town hall meeting

The Ludwigsburg-Kornwestheim Military Subcommunity Town Hall Meeting will be held tonight at 7 p.m. in the Pattonville Theater. For information, call 428-2752/2373.

Lake Constance

Known in Roman times as "Lacus Brigantinus" and later as the Swabian sea, Lake Constance is the third largest inland lake in Europe and the biggest in Germany. Located in the heart of Europe in southern Germany; the lake is bordered by Austria, Switzerland, Liechtenstein, and Germany. A recent USO tour from GSMC visited Lake Constance. Tourists had the opportunity to dine along the beautiful waterfront at Meersburg and see the 7th century castle there, Germany's oldest, before ferrying across to the island of Mainau.

First of four teen lounges open at RB

by Lionel R. Green
Stuttgart Citizen staff

Teens across the Greater Stuttgart Military Community will soon enjoy the good life.

The first of five teen lounges opened at Robinson Barracks on July 28 with GSMC commander Maj. Gen. James B. Allen Jr. cutting the ribbon to officially open the lounge.

"The lounges are a teen initiative," said Robert C. Manaugh, GSMC Youth Services coordinator. "The opening of these facilities is a result of last year's GSMC teen task force findings on the shortage of teen-specified space."

The task force was comprised of teachers, students, and parents whose primary goal was to find ways to improve the quality of teen activities.

"The task force findings revealed four main things," said Allen, in a speech at the Robinson Barracks teen lounge opening.

One, the teens asked for a chance to compete with their counterparts in the United States in the areas of education and sports.

Two, the teens wanted a place to go and call their own, a place to have fun.

Three, they asked for transportation.

Four, they asked for a sports program that would give them a chance to get into colleges in the United States.

Maj. Gen. Allen stressed the success of the sports program.

"Last year there were about 70 teams competing in the Youth Services between the ages of eight to 19," Allen said. "This year we have 109 teams."

Space for the future teen lounges has been identified in four other communities and all are scheduled to open by the fall time-frame.

The teens in the community wanted a place to call their own, Manaugh explained. They wanted to coordinate their own activities and have some say in what's going on.

"This project will give the teens more responsibility," said Tanni Baxter, the Robinson Barracks YS director. "It will also give them a sense of independence."

The teens have had a lot of help in getting these lounges off the ground.

Parents, YS Booster Clubs, the Dad's Club, YS staffs, and supporting units have all played a major role in this project.

One goal of this initiative is to coordinate with the other four communities of Baden-Wuerttemberg — Goepingen, Heilbronn, Schwaebisch Gmuend, and Schwaebisch Hall — for activities that teens can do together.

"Right now, we meet and coordinate sporting events," Manaugh said. "If we coordinate on teen activities, the teen calendar will have a variety of activities and more places to go."

Manaugh stressed the need for creativity once these lounges start their schedule of activities.

"This was a teen's idea," he said. "There is no magical solution to teen involvement. Teens get bored quickly, so by having everyone involved we'll have ideas from a lot of places."

One idea is to synchronize activities with high schools such as coordinating dances with them, since all of the teens go to the high schools, Manaugh added.

The five-year construction plan for all six GSMC communities reflects updated YS centers based on the Department of Army standard design.

"The lounges which are currently being opened are a temporary solution to the need for specific space for teens," Manaugh said.

The opening of this teen lounge and forthcoming lounges is a prelude to the new YS centers that will devote space specifically for teens. The first of these renovated YS centers is scheduled to open at the Ludwigsburg-Kornwestheim YS in early 1990.

Commander's Comment

Department of War celebrates 200 years

As we continue to observe the Bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution, it is fitting to note that today we have more significance to us than any of the other dates we've observed thus far in these bicentennial years, 1976 to now.

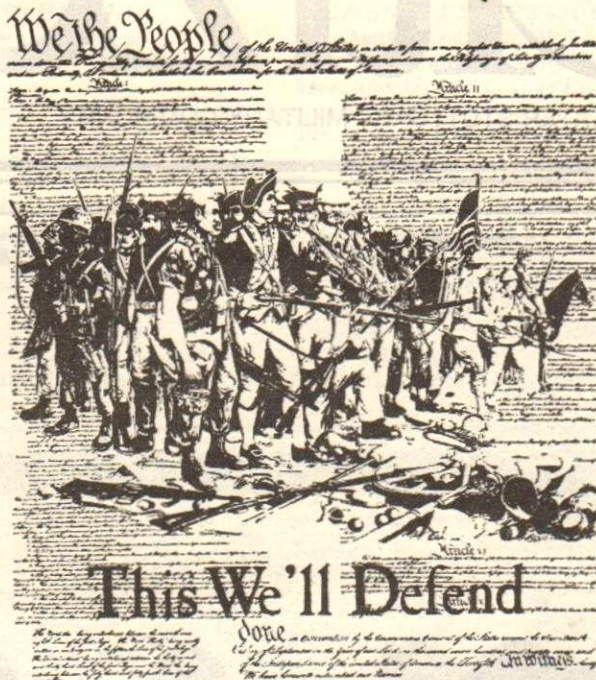

Today marks the 200th anniversary of the Department of War.

When the first Congress directed that a Secretary of War be entrusted to perform duties "agreeably to the Constitution, relative to military commission or to land or naval forces," it began a special tradition of 200 years of civilian control over the military and the introduction of a professional civilian work force into the government.

The War Department included the Army and the Navy until 1798, when the Department of the Navy organized. For the next 158 years, numerous changes occurred, culminating in the establishment of the Department of Defense in 1947. The War Department thus became the Department of the Army (within the Defense Department), headed by a civilian secretary.

Under that leadership, the Defense Department has grown into a large force which experienced eight wars while working to preserve peace and security. Its size dictates a mastery of organization to operate its administration, system of training, methods of fighting and weaponry. Technology, supply, and manpower selection complicate matters further. And of course, policies, customs, and values change the Army's form and character.

Through all this growth, change and complexity, one constant remains — the soldier. The soldier was there, in all the wars, firing the weapons and creating the traditions. With the support of the sailor at sea, the airman and the Marines, the soldier carried on the Army mission.

Fourteen thousand military members live in the Greater Stuttgart Military Community. They're all here. The privates who maintain the vehicles, the specialists who inventory supplies, the sergeants who investigate crime, the cooks, crew chiefs and medical specialists. The NCO supports and guides them and the officers manage the workload.

Along with the soldier comes the family, whether be a spouse and children, or a roommate or a friend. The community is the family and each member is vital.

This includes civilians. Not only is the leadership from the Secretary of the Army, a guiding force, but the support of Defense Department and German employees guides us as well. Their dedication and pride lend stability and professionalism to the work whole.

All the members of the community form a team, reflecting on the tradition created with the Defense Department. A force of men and women, military and civilian working together.

Reflecting on a bicentennial event — 200 years of the soldier — leads us to the present. Today reflect upon the tradition of the soldier comprising a force striving for peace, leading to this community whose bedrock is the soldier, striving for excellence.

Take care of soldiers.
Maj. Gen. James B. Allen

chaplain's corner

Profanity offensive to the chaplain is probably offensive to other people as well

By Chaplain (COL) Theodore W. Hepner
GSMC chaplain

On many occasions when I have been visiting in troop areas, motor pools, and staff sections I have heard the warning cry go out, "Watch it, the chaplain is in the area." The clear implication is that something is being done or said that might be offensive to the chaplain. After all he is the church's representative attempting to bring people to God and God to people. Usually the most common offense is the frequent and flagrant use of profanity. But, if it is offensive to the chaplain, there is a good probability it is offensive to many other persons as well.

The problem of profanity was recently addressed in a letter to the profanity to the total community, by Community Commander Major General James B. Allen, Jr. This is certainly no new problem for the American army. Gen. George Washington issued a directive against profanity as early as 1776.

Gen. Grant made the observation: "Swearing helps arouse a man's anger and when a man flies into passion, his adversary who keeps cool always gets the better of him." As you listen to the talk around the commissary, in the gym, in the office, and in the field, we have more than our share of soldiers and family members losing their cool through the use of profanity.

Profanity has a way of slipping in through a neighbor's shout at noisy neighborhood kids. It is in the conversations in the post exchange check-out lines. It is in all those areas where people are watching, but only while the chaplain is in the area.

Many of the profane words that are used are sexist and racist. This in itself flies in the face of every directive, policy and regulation that upholds the Army as an equal opportunity employer.

I believe there are at least two things we need to do as a community to overcome the use of profanity. First we must be bold enough to let people know how offensive we find their profanity. They may have a right to free speech but we all have a right to wholesome living conditions. With freedom comes responsibility. Let us all be responsible for making GSMC a better place to be by the way we speak to each other without profanity.

The second thing we need to do is to think before we speak. It has been determined that most of what we say are an immediate reply are conditioned responses that are made without thinking. If profanity has been a pattern of our speech, we will need to pause 10 seconds, then offer a different response. It will be time well spent.

Remember the chaplain may not be in the area but our families, loved ones and co-workers are. They deserve the same respect and consideration you give the chaplain for a profanity-free environment.

Specialist Cronin wins VII Corps Soldier of the Year

by Capt. Douglas R. Scott
 2d COSCOM Public Affairs Officer

Spec. Gary S. Cronin, 7/159th Aviation Regiment, continues to prove he is the best of the best. The 2d COSCOM soldier was honored as the VII Corps Soldier of the Year in a ceremony at Kelley Barracks on July 18.

Cronin said, "I'm surprised I did as well as I did."

He shouldn't be. In February, Cronin faced a board of five COSCOM sergeants major and came away as 2d COSCOM's Soldier of the Year. In June, he moved up to the Greater Stuttgart Military Community level and once again took top honors as the GSMC Soldier of the Year.

Now, in a competition he termed "not as intense as GSMC," Cronin is the Soldier of the Year for the entire Corps.

The Oregon native credits his wife, Sandy, for much of his success saying, "She's been an inspiration. She encourages me to put in extra study time."

Cronin believes soldiers should, "Get involved. All units have quarterly boards. Soldiers shouldn't be complacent and should search for the many advantage of these competitions. All it takes is some studying."

The "advantages" Cronin speaks of are many. So far he has earned an Army Commendation Medal and an Army Achievement Medal. He's also taken home a VCR, a round-trip ticket to the States, $1,500 in savings bonds, a $1,000 certificate towards the purchase of a new car, a cassette recorder, several hundred dollars in AAFES certificates and coupons, and other prizes. Not bad for "some studying."

Department of the Army builds upon 200 years of strength

When the War Department was created on Aug. 7, 1789, the first secretary, Gen. Henry Knox, oversaw an Army of a mere 800 officers and enlisted men all stationed along the Ohio River except for one artillery company guarding West Point and another guarding a munition arsenal in Springfield, Mass.

Two hundred years and some important reorganizations later, its descendant, the Department of the Army, manages more than 2.25 million soldiers and civilians stationed around the globe.

Leading the new executive department of the young federal government under George Washington in 1789, Knox, who succeeded Washington as commander of the Army, handled the military affairs without change in personnel from the way Washington handled them in the original War Office created in 1781.

Knox's War Department was concerned mostly with the storage, transport and distribution of military supplies. Except during a brief period when the secretary could execute contracts for clothing and food, the new government retained the civilian-controlled supply system formed by the previous government under the Articles of Confederation. The leadership considered the overseer of supplies — a quartermaster general — necessary only in time of war and discharged the quartermaster general and his assistants in 1783.

As the War Department evolved, so did its responsibilities. The department took on new responsibilities in 1813, when President James Madison appointed Gen. Armstrong, the seventh department secretary. Armstrong replaced the aging Revolutionary War veterans with younger, more aggressive field commanders. He also expanded the Army staff to help manage the War of 1812 by recreating the Adjutant General, Inspector General and Apothecary General offices — which were dissolved after the Revolutionary War. The strategy needed to change the course of the war was the assignment of eight topographical engineers to the

A massive reform in 1903 molded a War Department structure that laid the foundation for today's Defense Department.

Following the Spanish American War, Elihu Root, the 43rd secretary of war, initiated fundamental changes in the department's organization, its administration and troop training. He established a general staff dedicated to military planning and redesignated the commanding general of the Army as the Army's chief of staff. Root felt this would solve the division of authority between the two positions. Along with the title change was the separation of responsibilities. The secretary was responsible for department administration and fiscal matters, while the chief of staff exercised discipline and control over the troops. The chief also served as the adviser and executive agent of the president through the secretary of war.

The United States was at war with Germany and Japan when the military and civilian leaders again attempted to reorganize the War Department. The pace and urgency of the country's involvement in World War II prevented full implementation of then-Chief of Staff Gen. George C. Marshall's plan.

The National Security Act of 1947 put in place many of Marshall's ideas conceived in 1942 by establishing the National Military Establishment. The act created a position for the secretary of defense and positions for various military assistants to the secretary, a civilian personnel component, the Department of the Army, Navy, and Air Force, the U.S. Air Force, the War Council and the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The act also created the National Security Council, the Central Intelligence Agency and the National Security Resources Board.

The National Security Act then redesignated the War Department as the Department of the Army.

On Aug. 10, 1949, the National Military Establishment became the Department of Defense. (AFIS)

Congratulations to Mary Lennox and everyone else involved in the successful operation of Camp Rainbow. The day-camp was a two-week affair, catering to 19 kids from the Exceptional Family Member Program. Pattonville Middle School set aside a wing for this summer's camp, and activities included trips to the zoo, to amusement parks, and various gastronomic delights.

A big thank you goes out to all the soldiers involved in the self-help renovation of the Kelley NCO/EM Club. Many hours were spent prior to the June 30 grand opening. Much time also was consumed in setting up the "Jayhawk Jamboree" which went down over the Fourth of July. Well done!

Kudos go out to Staff Sgt. Franklin Mataipule, David Mataipule, Nathan Oates, Corey Oates, Staff Sgt. Paul Moore, Warrant Officer Robert Collins, Terry VanRanken, Steve Maurapoulous, Pfc. Merete Jensen, Seth Pentacost and William Ellis for their meritorious achievement recently in assisting the Bad Cannstatt/Zuffenhausen Army Community Service Center and helping Matthew Louis of GSMC Boy Scout Troop #3, with a food drive designed as a community project for the rank of eagle scout. Funding for such projects is scarce now and these volunteer efforts demonstrated initiative and team spirit. They also facilitated one young man's rise to eagle scout. Bravo!

GSMC: Taking root in Germany

by Steve Snyder
Stuttgart Citizen staff

The Greater Stuttgart Military Community is located in the heart of the state of Baden-Wuerttemberg, West Germany. In geographical area, it roughly equals the size of the state of Delaware. More than 2.4 million people live within the confines of GSMC, 572,000 of whom dwell within the city limits of Stuttgart.

Stuttgart is the political and cultural capital of Baden-Wuerttemberg. It takes its name from the stud farm or Stuttgarten founded by Duke Liutolf von Schwaben around 950 A.D. Valleys and hills yield an ideal climate for nurturing vineyards and, indeed, Stuttgart is noted for the quality of its wine. The area, furthermore, is the source of the richest mineral springs in Western Europe. They are located in Bad Cannstatt and Berg and produce 22 million liters of water per day.

The city first gained prominence during the Industrial Revolution as a center of commerce. Today, its economy is dominated by manufacturing, an endeavor which employs a little over 47 percent of the local workforce. The Stuttgart area is especially noted for the making of autos, auto parts, machinery, electronics, and electrical equipment. Daimler-Benz, Porsche and Bosch all have their roots and international headquarters here.

Stuttgart today, in fact, ranks just below Frankfurt as a piston in the West German economic machine.

The area, accordingly, is affluent. Average income for a Stuttgart resident is over $20,000 a year. Unemployment rates are low, too. While there is a 6.4 percent unemployment rate for West Germany as a whole so far in 1989 (according to figures released by the Statistisches Landesamt Baden-Wuerttemberg), the rate was 4.9 for Stuttgart and a miniscule 4.2 percent for Baden-Wuerttemberg.

The U.S. Army, if you count the employment of soldiers, is the fourth largest regional employer in the area. GSMC employs a little over 20,000 people including 14,000 soldiers, 3,500 U.S. family members (out of a possible 16,400) and 2,900 Americans and German civilians.

Demographically, there are 10,663 soldiers, family members and American civilian workers in the Ludwigsburg/Kornwestheim (LK) subcommunity; 4,040 in Bad Cannstatt/Zuffenhausen (BCZ); 5,394 in Boeblingen/Sindelfingen (BS); 5,302 in Nellingen/Esslingen/Echterdingen (NEE); 4,244 in Vaihingen (V); and 1,733 in Moehringen/Degerloch (MD).

The LK subcommunity encompasses Flak Kaserne, Pattonville, Coffey Barracks, Wilkin Barracks, Ludendorff Kaserne, Valdez Barracks and Krabbenloeh Kaserne. BCZ contains Robinson Barracks, 5th General Hospital, Wallace Barracks and Grenadier Kaserne. Panzer Kaserne and the Boeblingen Maintenance Facility are in Boeblingen/Sindelfingen while both Nellingen and Boeblingen the Stuttgart Army Airfield are in NEE. Vaihingen is the locale for Patch Barracks and Moehringen/Degerloch home of Kelley Barracks.

The people in these places are tasked with fulfilling GSMC's mission. That involves providing logistical, administrative, quality-of-life, and transition-to-war support for military agencies, soldiers and their families within our geographic perimeter. Simultaneously, members of GSMC are obliged to maintain liaison and harmonious relations with German agencies and the civilian population.

Logistical support involves making available required accommodations, real property, billets, family housing, offices, technical areas and shops, schools, transportation, equipment and supplies to those who need them. Resource management, military police, training, security, public affairs, medical and legal support, and personnel administration fall under the realm of administrative support. Quality-of-life support involves any service or facility designed to enhance the morale and welfare of soldiers and their families. Clubs, dining facilities, recreational and leisure time programs, youth activities, shopping centers, theaters, libraries, social services, counseling in personal and family programs, religious activities, and spiritual support all involve the quality of life.

Transition-to-war support includes planning to handle the reception and processing of reinforcing units from the United States, management and utilization of existing facilities in a wartime situation, and the evacuation of family members from the Stuttgart area.

GSMC's mission is important enough to warrant the stationing of several major military headquarters here.

Headquarters, U.S. European Command (USEUCOM), the highest U.S. Forces headquarters on this continent, is located at Patch Barracks and the Vaihingen subcommunity is dedicated primarily to its support. Kelley Barracks is the home of Headquarters, VII Corps, while the Bad Cannstatt/Zuffenhausen subcommunity hosts 5th General Hospital and the Headquarters for GSMC. Headquarters, 2d Corps

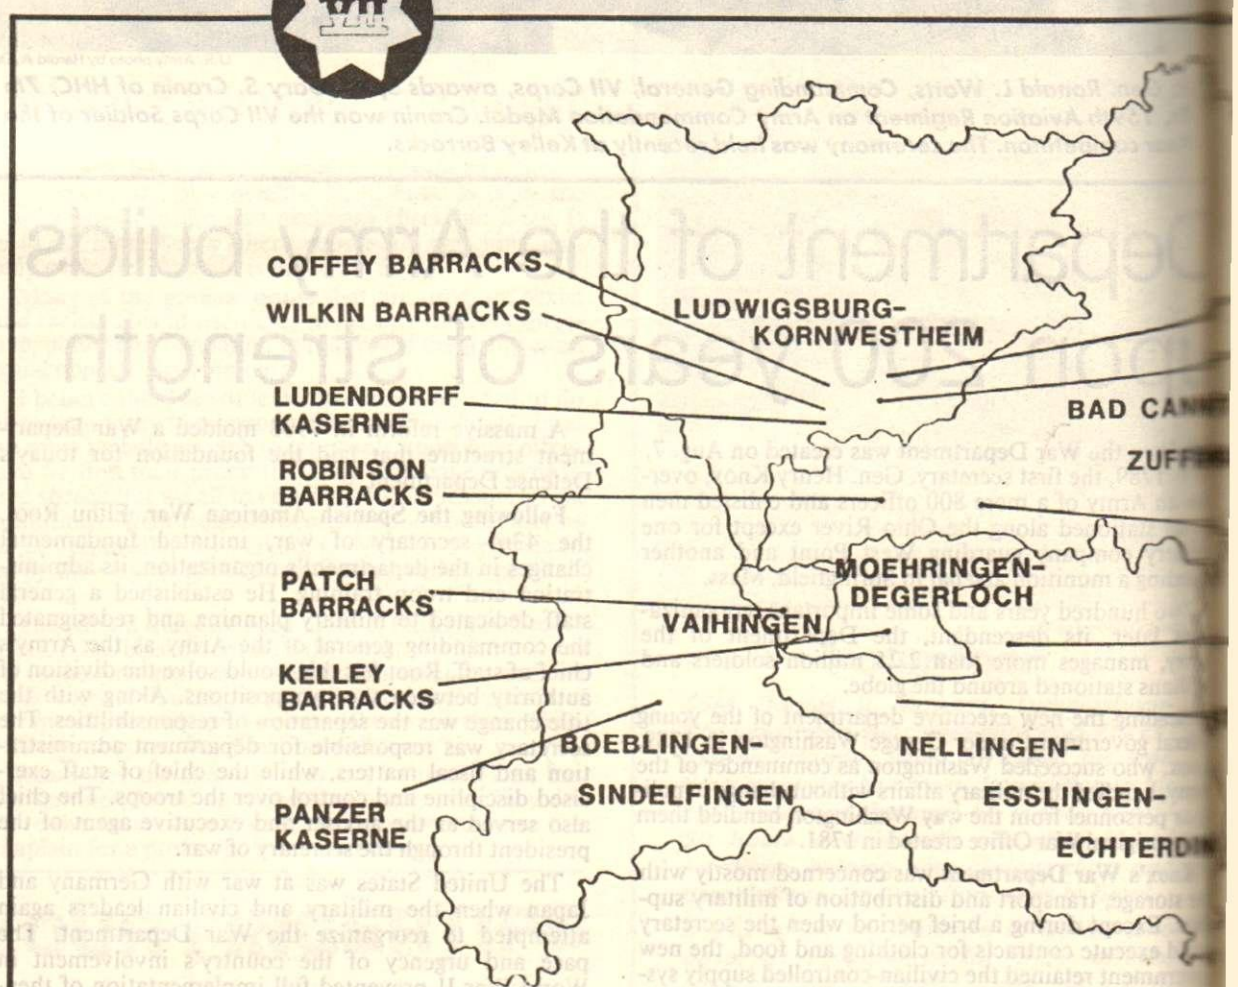

Support Command (2d COSCOM) and several support units are housed in Nellingen Barracks with some aviation units (who also utilize the Stuttgart Army Airfield in the Nellingen/Esslingen/Echterdingen subcommunity). A concentration of major combat support units of various branches is stationed at Ludwigsburg/Kornwestheim subcommunity and elements of the 1st Infantry Division (Forward) are fielded at Panzer Kaserne in Boeblingen/Sindelfingen.

Major challenges facing GSMC are twofold. The first, housing, involves taking care of our own people. The second concerns safeguarding the environment and entails significant repercussions in relations with the host country.

Close to 4,500 economy apartments and houses have been privately rented by soldiers, U.S. civilian employees and their families. They pay an average of DM 1,400 per month per unit, totalling DM 75.6 million per year.

includes utilities and other fixed costs. GSMC headquarters, additionally, has leased 236 housing units from German owners for long terms. This housing is being used like government quarters. Rentals, utilities and maintenance costs total DM 4.3 million annually.

Housing demand still outpaces supply, though. Approximately 200-300 soldiers arrive here monthly and attempt to obtain rental housing.

Environmentally, GSMC's Department of Engineering and Housing (DEH) has an office staffed with eight people who deal exclusively with measures designed to protect the environment and curtail energy waste. Information on the environment is continually exchanged with various county commissioner offices, water protection agencies, and the federal assets office. GSMC closely cooperates with environmental working groups at the state government level and within the city of Stuttgart.

Community's past seen through eyes of longtime resident

by Friedrich Schiller
Director of Resources & Management
GSMC

Who would believe that communities within U.S. Army, Europe, (USAREUR) are only 15 years old and who really bothers to think back? Isn't "today" all that counts, generally speaking?

Well, I think it's beneficial to jog memories on occasion because if we want to find out who we are, we first have to discover where we've been.

The history of the U.S. Army in the Stuttgart area reflects constant change as priorities in force structure shifted over the years.

Shortly after the end of World War II, the occupation forces agreed on areas where they would assume respective responsibility. The Stuttgart Military Community was established with headquarters at McGee Barracks in Bad Cannstatt (now the home of the European headquarters of the American Red Cross).

In the fall of 1946, the Stuttgart Military Community was redesignated as the Stuttgart Military Post and moved to Patch Barracks, which currently houses the Headquarters, U.S. European Command. Under the concept of occupation, Stuttgart Military Post was in charge of all military units located within its boundaries.

At that time, sub-post headquarters existed at Stuttgart Metro (Koenigstrasse), Esslingen, Boeblingen, Ludwigsburg, Heilbronn, Crailsheim, Schwaebisch Hall, Bad Mergentheim (established as a dependent staging area for USAREUR after dependents started to come to Europe), Goeppingen, Schwaebisch Gmuend, and Ulm.

In January 1948, Headquarters for the Stuttgart Military Post moved to Ludwigsburg, occupying the building of GDF (a renowned German housing and loan company). Patch Barracks had to be vacated to make room for Headquarters, U.S. Constabulary, the command which a year later became Seventh Army.

In 1949, the headquarters moved to its present location at Robinson Barracks, Stuttgart. At that time, Stuttgart Military Post, as did the other military posts within the U.S. area of responsibility, reported to the Director of Post, Headquarters, USAREUR. In March 1953, regional commands were established throughout the U.S. area of Germany. The Stuttgart Military Post was redesignated Stuttgart Sub-Area and assigned to Southern Area Command with headquarters at Munich. In addition, the area of Schwaebisch Hall, including Crailsheim and Bad Mergentheim, was separated and established as Schwaebisch Hall Sub Area with headquarters at Dolan Barracks, Schwaebisch Hall.

Consolidation of the Stuttgart and Schwaebisch Hall sub-areas followed. Confiscated or requisitioned properties were returned to German owners and construction began on dependent housing. The Stuttgart district's area of responsibility, then, again covered the original area, excluding only Ulm (which had been assigned to the Augsburg district).

In 1956, the Stuttgart Sub-Area was, once again, redesignated. This time it was called the Stuttgart Post.

On July 1, 1965, it was redesignated yet again as the North Wuertemberg District. After the consolidation of Northern and Southern Area Commands that same month, the District was assigned to the newly created U.S. Army Area Command and later, on July 1, 1966, to the U.S. Army Communications Zone, Europe. This occurred after COMZ had left France and merged with the U.S. Army Area Command.

At around the same time, Headquarters, Seventh Army moved to Heidelberg and was consolidated into a new headquarters — U.S. Army, Europe, and Seventh Army.

On March 15, 1967, Headquarters, U.S. European Command, became fully operational at Patch Barracks. To support it, a fourth sub-district, known as USEUCOM Support Activity, was established.

In 1968, the 10 districts comprising the area support mission of U.S. Army Communications Zone, Europe, were consolidated to five districts conforming roughly to the German state boundaries. In this reorganization, North Wuertemberg District was consolidated with the North Baden District to form the U.S. Forces Support District Baden-Wuerttemberg.

The headquarters remained at Robinson Barracks, Stuttgart, with its span of control and operations extended to cover all supported installations within the political boundaries of the State of Baden-Wuerttemberg (again, excluding Ulm). The new configuration of the district included Support Activities at EUCOM (Patch Barracks), Goeppingen, Heilbronn, Karlsruhe, Schwaebisch Hall, and Seckenheim (the Mannheim-Heidelberg area).

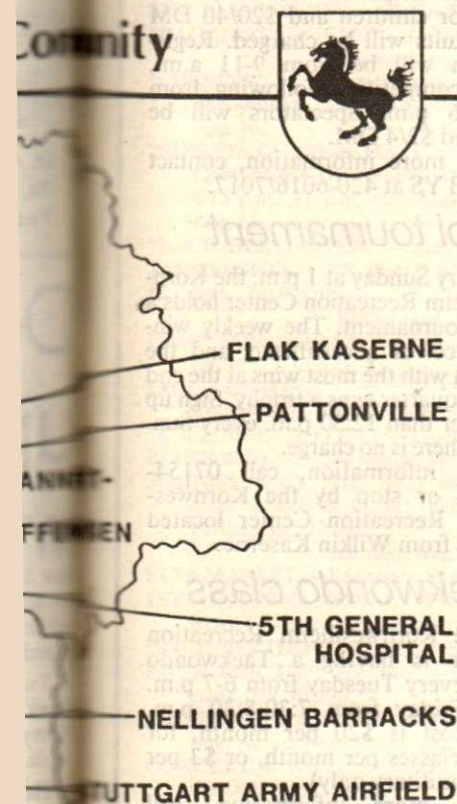

A number of major military headquarters were located within the district. They included Headquarters, USAREUR and Seventh Army; Headquarters, Central Army Group; Directorate, U.S. Dependent Schools, European Area; Headquarters, U.S. Army Strategic Communications Command, Europe; Headquarters, VII Corps; Headquarters, VII Corps Support Command; and Headquarters, 1st Armored Division.

Support in those days was provided by separate stovepipe organizations. The Baden-Wuerttemberg Support District, for example, provided all base operation support; including commissaries, troop issue facilities, consolidated maintenance, etc. The B-W Engineer District took care of all engineer support, the Medical Command handled support in the health and dental area and tactical units drew upon all these support organizations.

To consolidate all these disparate support elements, a new and more cohesive organization was found on July 1, 1974. USAREUR was divided into three major areas: one under VII Corps, one under V Corps and another at 21st Support Command. This organization blended support elements (support and engineer districts) and, of course, tactical units, with major tactical headquarters, creating communities.

Today, the word "Community" is the key word of GSMC. The dictionary defines community as a "social group of any size whose members reside in a specific locality, share government and have a common cultural and historical heritage."

This in my view, we should not forget.

Bicycling: the fun way to fitness

With Greg Lemond's thrilling victory in the Tour de France fresh in everyone's mind, bicycling — the exercise (not the sport) — should be emphasized. So, before those winter months send everyone back inside the gym, take advantage of bicycling and all the benefits it has to offer.

Most people can remember the thrill they felt as children when they first learned to ride a two-wheeler — and the fun of being able to get from here to there fast. For adults, bicycling is still a fun way to get from here to there.

According to Maj. Robert W. Dennis of the Army's corporate fitness program, bicycling is also great aerobic exercise. However, he said there are a few things to consider first that will increase enjoyment of the sport and prevent unnecessary injury.

Most important: invest in a good bicycle. You don't need a really expensive racing model, but you also don't want a cheap one that's going to fall apart or otherwise spoil your fun. Make sure the bike fits properly. One way to check that is to straddle the bike with your feet flat on the ground. There should be one or two inches clearance between your groin and the top tube. If you don't know much about bikes, go shopping with a friend who does or go to a trustworthy dealer.

After you've got a good bike, here are some tips from Dennis and other experts:

Wear and hard-shelled helmet. Every year, there are from 900 to 1,100 bicycle fatalities — 75 percent of which involved head injuries.

You'll be more comfortable in the right clothing. Bicycle shorts have padding in the seat and are cut to reduce chafing on the thighs. People who ride long distances also need to wear gloves.

Toe clips and straps will greatly increase your efficiency.

Ride with a friend whose pace is compatible with yours.

Don't try to ride in a high gear when you first start out. Start in a low enough gear so you can pedal comfortably. As you get stronger, you can go into higher gears.

If you have not cycled in a while, try riding every other day. Set aside a regular time to ride but vary your route. Try to avoid routes with high traffic volume.

Don't try to lean too far over. Prolonged riding in a racing crouch can tire you out and cause back strain. Ride at an angle that's comfortable. Raise the handlebars if they force you to lean forward.

Stay relaxed while you ride. Don't grab the handlebars in a death grip, and keep the upper body relaxed to avoid fatigue.

Learn hand signals and obey traffic laws.

An easy way to determine whether you're getting a good aerobic workout is this: Pedal hard enough to work up a sweat, but not so hard that you become short of breath. A more scientific method is to take your pulse. Press your neck artery for six seconds and multiply the number you get by 10. To get your maximum pulse rate, subtract your age from 220. Shoot for 75 to 80 percent of your maximum pulse rate when you ride.

The health benefits plus the fun make bicycling one of the more popular forms of exercise. Just follow the traffic laws and wear a helmet. Have an enjoyable ride, but keep safety in mind at all times.

If you don't have your own bicycle and you want to get the aerobic advantages of bicycling, the Outdoor Recreation Branch is offering a "Lunch Time Special."

Between the hours of 11 a.m.-2 p.m., you can rent any bike for $2.50 for the first hour and $1.25 for every hour after that. Outdoor Rec is located in bldg. 121 on Robinson Barracks.

For those more avid bicyclers, a sanctioned bicycle club is being formed called the Freedom Cycle Club.
