

Household weight allowance rises under new program

Accompanied soldiers begin shipping maximum allowance June 1

A staff sergeant and his family are moving a permanent-change-of-station home back to the States. They have a net of 4,000 pounds to ship back. His household goods weight allowance is 2,000 pounds, but the Army limits household goods shipments to and from Germany to 25 percent of the soldier's assigned weight allowance. That would mean the staff sergeant can only ship 500 pounds at the government's expense. The other 2,000 pounds must be paid out of the staff sergeant's pocket.

Beginning June 1, that staff sergeant and all other accompanied soldiers going to and from Germany can relax.

The Elective Joint Federal Travel Regulations is a new program approved by Congress that allows accompanied soldiers PCSing to and from Germany to ship their full household goods weight allowance. Only accompanied soldiers assigned to Berlin or single and unaccompanied married soldiers are not eligible for this new benefit.

The reason for the change was primarily due to concerns voiced by both commanders and soldiers.

"One of the most significant reasons for this new program was because more and more commanders and soldiers voiced their opposition to a policy that denies them the use of their own belongings," said GSMC Traffic Manager Barbara Mooshake.

Another main reason was the lack of furniture available in Germany.

"The implementation should satisfy concerns of commanders for their junior soldiers," Mooshake said.

Under the current policy, soldiers can only ship 25 percent of their household goods weight allowance, or 2,000 pounds, whichever is greater.

One June 1, that 25 percent, 2,000-pound ceiling will be lifted, and accompanied soldiers going to and from Germany can elect to ship or store household goods in any combination up to their full weight entitlement.

However, the weight of household goods stored at government expense, plus the weight of goods shipped, cannot exceed a soldier's total weight allowance.

For example, if a sergeant's full weight allowance is 7,000 pounds, he may elect to ship 3,500 pounds and store the remaining 3,500 pounds in the United States at government expense.

Since the Army will not pay for permanent storage of furniture in Germany, soldiers are advised to make sure their projected quarters can accommodate all the furnishings they ship overseas. USAREUR also advises soldiers to coordinate their moves closely with their sponsors in Germany.

To qualify for the EJFTR, soldiers must be accompanied and must have PCS orders with an effective date of June 1.

The effective date of orders is the date the soldier signs in at the new duty station, minus authorized travel time, plus one day. Leave and TDY do not count as part of the computation.

An example of the impact of the EJFTR is that now the staff sergeant who is going to have to pay for 2,000 pounds of his household goods shipment won't have to. In fact, he could still ship 7,000 more pounds at the government's expense because under the EJFTR his household goods weight allowance will rise from 8,000 to 11,000 pounds.

"Since this is a program to allow soldiers the option to decide on what they want to ship home, it should prove a lasting effect on soldiers' morale," Mooshake said.

Commander's comment

Memorial Day: honoring progress toward peace

Memorial Day comes around each year with the onset of the summer season. Most of us probably look forward to it as a long weekend, affording time off from work and a chance to get together with family and friends.

It is a time to pause and look forward to the summer months, planning vacation and travel. This is important and we need to take advantage of the recreation opportunities open to us within our beautiful host country of Germany. Keep safety in mind whatever you're doing, this weekend and all summer long.

But Memorial Day is more than just a day of leisure. It is a time, when as a nation, we honor all those who have given their lives in defense of our nation. We remember the sacrifices of our military colleagues throughout America's history.

Why do we maintain the tradition of honoring our war dead on this national holiday? It serves as a remembrance that the freedom we enjoy today, is not free. We secured this freedom at a very high cost, namely, the lives of men and women of our armed forces.

This holiday was known as Decoration Day when it was first observed in 1868, to honor those fallen in the Civil War. Since then, the holiday has taken on a much broader meaning. The name was changed to Memorial Day to reflect the holiday as a time to remember all those who died in military conflicts.

As we think today of those who have given their lives on our behalf, the magnitude of that sacrifice seems almost incomprehensible. More than a million Americans have laid down their lives while serving our nation in war.

We owe these Americans our thanks. Our heritage of freedom and democracy has lasted these 200 years because so many have been willing to give so much. These sacrifices have not been made in vain.

The United States has demonstrated to the world its commitment to human dignity and human rights. For more than two centuries, America has stood as a symbol of freedom and a challenge to the forces of tyranny.

Servicemembers who put our country's needs ahead of their own, share in this sense of pride and patriotism. We recognize that the future is what we make it. Today's army must continue to win every struggle to protect our nation and the values for which it stands.

The challenges of tomorrow won't be any less demanding than those faced by our predecessors. The likelihood, they will be more difficult. But meeting these challenges successfully is necessary so that America may remain free.

We must maintain our strength and readiness. A great American, Franklin D. Roosevelt, said, "Peace like war, can succeed only where there is a will to enforce it and where there is available power to enforce it."

One of the keystones in the Army's commitment to preparedness, is our noncommissioned officer corps. That's why this year we are celebrating this special group of soldiers. The Army is able to meet its mission because of the leadership and expertise of the NCO corps.

Throughout history, the American Army has relied on a skilled noncommissioned officer corps to be the backbone of the Army. NCOs are first-line supervisors who are vital to our program of recruiting and retaining the very best soldiers.

This Memorial Day enjoy yourself safely and take a few moments to reflect on your service to your country and all those who have gone before you. Remember, freedom is not free. A strong military today ensures a peaceful future tomorrow.

Take care of soldiers.

Saying goodbye is the most stressful part of PCS ritual

by Ms. Julia "Kim" Casey
VII Corps Director of Religious Education

Spring in Germany is a glorious time of year.

Flowers are blooming from every garden and windowsill. Farm fields are emerald green splashed with the white, red and yellow of wild flowers.

Germans can be seen strolling with baby carriages or walking their dogs.

On U.S. Army caserns spring is also recognizable. Cars are wearing "FOR SALE" signs. Moving vans are blocking traffic in housing area.

There are long lists of "FOR SALE 200" appliances tacked on bulletin boards. Individuals are participating in the ritual called "PCS BINGE" which includes buying last-minute crystal and a last visit to Berlin.

Spring in Germany means saying goodbye.

Goodbye to Germany and its people, many of whom we have grown to love. Goodbye to the stability offered through familiarity.

Familiar jobs, schools, clinics and homes are lost. Goodbye to a part of our lives that will never be repeated.

In reality, spring in Germany is the same as any other spring for the military. It is a time to move.

Roughly every three years military personnel and their families go through the same ritual.

The ritual of pulling up roots and saying goodbye. Saying goodbye to friends is the most stressful part of the ritual.

New assignments always bring new friendships and renewed former relationships. I have met many new military families that upon arrival at a new assignment resist getting acquainted with their neighbors.

They resist becoming involved with new people. The reasoning goes like this: "If you never become involved then you never have to say goodbye."

The fact is since we are all human, we will become involved and we will grieve when we say goodbye. Like the popular songs say, "The heart that never learns to love never learns to live."

There are some ways to respond in a healthy manner to the pain of saying goodbye. What we must do is improve our skills for dealing with grief. The most important part of dealing with grief is recognizing that you are grieving and giving yourself time.

I find that I must reach closure to people I will be leaving. I know one chaplain's wife who always leaves an assignment six weeks ahead of her husband. She does not have to see her house torn apart or go through the official "Hail & Fairwell."

The flip side is that she never reaches closure. She never says "It's been great, I love you, or I will miss you." She has grown less able to make new friends. She has not said goodbye to the old ones.

Another suggestion, allow time to say goodbye. Plan your move in such a way that you have a day to visit friends, office colleagues and German acquaintances, e.g. the flower shop lady. When I left my last assignment, I invited all of my friends to an "Empty Apartment Party."

The packers had left and my apartment was totally empty. We sat on the floor, laughed, cried and remembered. We said goodbye.

Saying goodbye is painful and will remain difficult. We will survive and grow from the experience. We can learn to make it easier for ourselves. Facing the grief head on will help speed up the healing process.

I can finally say, "I have been blessed by God with a very special friend. I may not have met this person had I now allowed myself to be vulnerable and open even though I hate pain." Now I say goodbye with sadness and hope.

Spring represents hope.

Senior personnel records clerk NCO of the Month

Stuttgart Citizen editor

Editor's note: "No one is more professional than I. I am a noncommissioned officer, a leader of soldiers. As a noncommissioned officer, I realize that I am a member of the time-honored corps, which is known as the 'backbone of the Army.'"

These words were taken from the Noncommissioned Officer's Creed and refer to the image of these professional soldiers. With this the Year of the NCO, GSMC continues to recognize its NCOs by highlighting each month a soldier who puts these leadership principles into action.

Sergeant Vicky Cliburn has got it bad. She's a perfectionist. And like most people who care about their work, she won't accept anything less from herself or those she supervises.

As a senior personnel records clerk assigned to the 198th Personnel Services Company at RB Central Processing Facility, she must literally "set the record straight."

Her job is to make sure all soldiers and their families processing in and out of GSMC are treated in a professional manner and insure that their records are screened thoroughly for completeness and accuracy.

"I've seen as many as 60 records in one day," she said, "and although the clerks actually process the records, I take responsibility for all they do."

Cliburn spent her first enlistment as an intelligence analyst with assignments at Fort Bragg, N.C. and Ansbach, Germany. She left the service for a few years then enlisted again in 1985 as a personnel records specialist.

In just two years, she made sergeant.

She described the ceremony as "quiet," but her transition into the NCO Corps was less than "cookies and punch."

"Advanced Individual Training (AIT) prepares young soldiers for the kind of work we do," she said, "but there are so many different jobs with particular requirements here, that further training is necessary."

Her role as a trainer, problem solver, and supervisor of six soldiers in her section has given her a significant insight to the true role of an NCO.

"Lower enlisted clerks (E/1-3) don't question as much," she said, "they simply want to learn. Other experienced clerks want to know more, so they're quicker to challenge a procedure or offer suggestions of their own."

With her own perfect Skill Qualification Test score of 100 percent for the past three years and several superior ratings for the In/Out Processing section, Cliburn holds true to her perfectionist standing.

"If I do something, I'm putting my name on it. I don't like a happy-go-lucky attitude about work," she said.

Cliburn and subsequent NCOs of the Month receive a plaque from the Service Federal Credit Union, a $50 savings bond from the community bank and a gift certificate package from the Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES).

Monthly selections are made on unit recommendations received by GSMC CSM Glen A. Harlow. Nominations may be submitted through command channels to GSMC HQ by the 15th of each month.

Caution and common sense keys to a safe, fun summer

By Ron R. Green
Stuttgart Citizen staff writer

Summer is in the air, and people are already playing soccer and softball, and motorcyclists are out in full force.

Safety is also in the air. The old adage that wants to take the fun out of everything. Safety tells us to warm up before participating in the company softball game, and to wear a helmet when motorcycling.

The wind caressing your face when you drive a motorcycle without a helmet may give you that freedom-lovin' feeling, but wearing a helmet could save your life in an accident. And there's not a freer feeling than being alive.

Wearing a helmet is not only smart, but it's required by Army regulation and German Traffic Law. The reason is simple: a helmet reduces the risk of serious injury in case of an accident.

There are just three words to remember that will help reduce the risk of injury if practiced: SEE and BE SEEN.

A motorcyclist needs to develop a useful skill called the visual scan. This is a continual lookout for possible hazards — such as potholes and intersections. For a motorcyclist, cracks and potholes are equivalent to gaping chasms because the tire of a motorcycle is so much thinner than that of an automobile. Intersections should be approached with caution, and eye contact should be made with the other motorists at the intersection.

Sticking out like a sore thumb is the best way to make your motorcycle trip a safe one. Become an eye-catching display for other drivers on the road. Wear bright-colored clothing during the day and clothing with reflective material at night. Riding with your headlights on at all times is a smart idea, and is required by most European countries.

Another important aspect in the BE SEEN category is signaling. Motorcycles need to signal everything they intend to do, from entering a parking place to lane changes. Position yourself at intersections where you can easily be seen, and avoid getting behind trucks and large automobiles. Be predictable in all your actions.

Outdoor sports and recreational activities are also a popular pastime when the weather gets warm. Twenty-five percent of the military injuries in the past two years have been from sports and recreational activities. Recently, that trend has increased to almost one-third of all reported injuries.

Overdoing the activity — such as running too far or exercising too long — is one cause of injury. Impact sports like basketball and soccer have numerous injuries because of the rough contact that sometimes occurs in these sports. Failure to warm up before engaging in stressful activity and not compensating for your body's structural weaknesses also create potential injury situations.

Swimming, one of the most popular summer activities, poses the obvious hazard of drowning. Just remember to always swim with a buddy and avoid swimming in unknown waters. Also, don't continue to swim when you are tired or when it becomes dark. Avoid swimming immediately after eating and drinking and in extremely cold water.

Alcohol plays the part of the villain thwarting safety's purpose. Whether on a motorcycle or swimming, remember to control your drinking.

The slogan about helmets that says, "Get it on," is not just a safety reminder, it's an Army regulation.

So, have a fun summer, but have a safe summer too.

Our USO

by Steve Snyder
Stuttgart Citizen staff

Bob Hope won't be there but many other dignitaries will when a new United Service Organizations (USO) lounge opens Friday at the Robinson Barracks shopping mall. Three-day festivities will celebrate the completion of one of the most modern — and largest — USO facilities anywhere.

At 3 p.m. Friday, following the opening ceremony, a German-American music fest is ready to roll in the mall's parking lot. A dozen groups promise to cater to every musical taste. Country and Western fans can jam with Southern Crossroads, the Long Riders, Kentucky Carl, Rio Grande, the Stetsons, Heidi's Rising Stars, and Southwest Deluxe. Soul music will be played by and with A Touch of Class while the Nouvelle France rocks with a Cajun beat. Ray Martin is slated to do his Elvis Presley gig and square dance aficionados won't be neglected by the likes of the Broken Wheels and Merry Mixers.

Food, prizes and a beer tent add oomph to the musical entertainment. Friday's celebration is scheduled to last until 1 a.m. On Saturday and Sunday, the events will run from noon until 1 a.m.

There are reasons for the celebration and all of them potent.

Groundbreaking for GSMC's USO began in February. The task was not a small one. The facility's 350-square-meters cost approximately DM 400,000 to construct and furnish. Most of the expense was borne by German business, government bodies, and associations.

Sponsors included Philip Morris Inc., the State of Baden-Wuerttemberg, USO Deutschland e.V., the City of Stuttgart, Robert Bosch GmbH, Daimler-Benz AG, the German-American Womens Club, Kodak Aktiengesellschaft, and other regional clubs and associations.

The contributions are being put to good use.

The new facility's spacious interior houses two clubrooms, an information counter, offices, a multi-purpose conference room and a teaching kitchen.

One room will be set aside for mothers with infants, providing space to feed the tots while Mom gains "an oasis of peace away from shopping," according to the Director of GSMC's USO, Charles Howell. Another area will be reserved for servicemembers wishing to write letters, watch TV or simply sit back in solitude away from the barracks. VCRs and long-distance telephone lines to the States will also be available.

The USO's language courses in basic, conversational German will continue, taught in the teaching kitchen. Translation services are offered to those desiring transactions in German. USO's schedule of tours will be scheduled as heavily as possible but with the added impetus of being organized out of a much larger and more information center.

USO tours here have traditionally emphasized maintaining cultural ties with Germans. In addition, soldiers and their families have had the opportunity to sight-see beyond the host country's borders.

In the past six months for example, USO tourists have sampled the cosmopolitan delights of Munich; viewed historically-splendid castles at Hohenzollern, Linderhof, and Neuschwanstein; viewed ghastly remnants of the former concentration camp at Dauchau; savored a bird's-eye view of Guttenberg; cruised the Rhine and Neckar rivers and checked out cuckoo clocks in Triberg — in the heart of the Black Forest.

Day-long jaunts have been under way to Zurich, Switzerland, and to Luxembourg. Upcoming trips are scheduled for Rome and Paris.

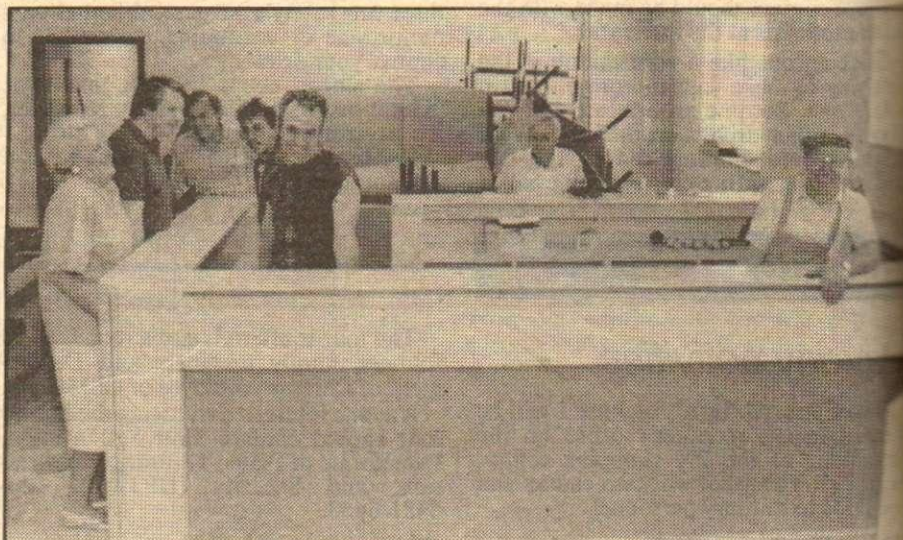

Locally, USO offers the Steppin' Out tours which are geared towards orienting our military community to German customs and Stuttgart events. GSMC members step out to events as varied as wine-tasting tours to meetings with Stuttgart's Lord Mayor Manfred Rommel, son of the famous "Desert Fox."

And only the USO would have the chutzpah to throw a St. Patrick's Day party featuring Elvis Presley music!

These activities help "to make it easier for the soldier to feel at home and not out of place" in a foreign land in Howell's opinion. He adds that today's USO is designed not merely to serve the solitary soldier but his family as well. "We do things for children that the USO never did," Howell concluded.

The USO has served, historically, as "home away from home" for millions of members of the Armed Forces and their families who were stationed around the world for the past 45 years. It is a non-profit, volunteer organization tasked with providing morale support, assistance, and entertainment to members of military communities isolated by the rigors of duty at home or abroad.

GSMC's new USO carries on the tradition.

Rafting has become a popular activity for Americans in Germany.

The Greater Stuttgart Military Community, Community Recreation Centers and the City of Ludwigsburg are inviting you once again to the Annual Neckar River Raft Race.

The race will be held July 15 at 9:30 a.m. at Poppenweiler Locks in Ludwigsburg near the Freibad.

Registration will open on June 12 and the cost per team is DM 80. Late registration fees will be charged after July 7 and will cost DM 100 per team. Rafts, oars and life vests are included in the registration fee. Registrations will be accepted on a first come, first serve basis; no unit allocations will be made. Teams may register at Kornwestheim Community Recreation Center, 07134-29244.

This popular event is a wonderful experience for both Americans and Germans. Whether you're a water lover or land lover, there will be plenty of fun for everybody.

This event provides an excellent opportunity for you to bring family and friends. Enjoy playing frisbee, relaxing by the river or dancing to the live sounds of a local rock group. A variety of good food and drinks will be available for purchase. For safety reasons no fires, camping or cooking will be permitted.

For your convenience and due to limited parking spaces at the site, a free shuttle bus service will be in operation all day from the Pattonville Schools ferrying boaters and spectators to and from the river.

The race consists of 10-member teams who will compete in qualifying heats, semifinals and finals to determine the winner. German teams will be allowed to compete in the Open Division. Awards will be presented for first, second and third place and given out at the conclusion of the race events in a closing ceremony.

Team captains will be briefed before the race begins. Each team will row about 500 meters to a specific turnaround and back again.

Everyone is invited to come. Race, listen to the music or cheer your favorite team to victory. Don't miss the 1989 Annual Neckar River Raft Race.

Tennis tips

Injuries on court can be prevented off court

By Rolf M. Hetterich
GSMC Safety Manager

As tennis great John McEnroe once said, "That's the worst call I've ever seen, ump. Are you blind?"

Tennis can inflame even the best tennis players' tempers, but it can also inflame their tendons, too, if they don't take care of their bodies.

They follow a well-developed program of injury prevention because they know they need it. If the best do it, shouldn't you?

"Weekend athletes" often believe they can leave behind their jobs and transform themselves into tennis pros. However, their bodies know the truth.

Just playing a game of tennis does not guarantee that a person is in shape for tennis. Decreasing chances of injury begins with an understanding of the mechanics of the sport and proper conditioning before and during the event.

Millions of people will work out this year playing tennis. Approximately 83,000 of them will leave the court injured. Many of them can be avoided by taking special precautions.

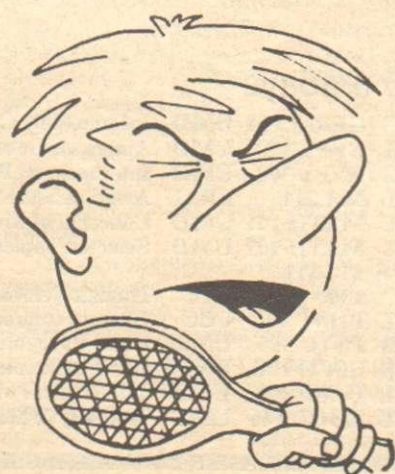

Steps to avoid serious injuries begin with a set routine: limber up, stretch out, warm up, play, cool down and stretch again. Volleying the ball around for fifteen minutes as soon as you hit the court does not fit the bill.

Tennis is a game of quick sprints and rapid turns. Shoes must provide lateral stability. To prevent ankle sprains, the sole of the shoe must transfer the shoe's force away from the ankle.

The main ingredient for a tennis match is the racket. The racket selected should have a grip that fits the player's hand. The key to selecting the proper racket is shock absorption. Recommended racket types are the ones made of vibration-dampening material (fiberglass-graphics and fiberglass-boron composites are the best).

The most common injuries while playing tennis are tendinitis, tennis elbow and shoulder inflammation.

Tendinitis is the inflammation of tendons that is characterized by swelling and tenderness. Tendinitis often occurs in the Achilles tendon because this tendon bears the brunt of the foot's activity. Developing muscle tone in your leg will help reduce the risk of this injury.

Tennis elbow is the inflammation of tendons on the outer side of the forearm. This often occurs from an improper backhand stroke and overuse of the forearm stroke. Failing to use the whole arm in a swing and even playing a much better opponent can inflame this tender area.

Shoulder inflammation often occurs in the muscles and tendons around the rotator cuff. An awkward pull or stretch can cause the injury.

A sure-fire remedy that reduces pain and controls the inflammation is ice compression, elevation, buffered aspirin and rest.

If the worst happens, get medical attention immediately.

Following preventative health care and understanding the rules of the game can make tennis an enjoyable game, with many hours spent on the court.

And fewer spent under the chill of an ice pack wishing you didn't own a racket.
