Just what the doctor ordered

Spec. Alisia Miller (right) helps Spec. Theresa Pagel, 732nd Medical Detachment at Patch Barracks, apply camouflage in a recent field training exercise conducted to "get medical units out to the field and allow soldiers to work at their jobs in that environment," according to Lt. Col. Norman Raflo, Commander, 167th Medical Detachment, Robinson Barracks. A total of 130 soldiers from the 762nd Medical Detachment in Goeppingen, 757th Medical Detachment in Schwaebisch Gmuend, 574th Medical Detachment from Panzer Kaserne, 191st Medical Detachment in Nellingen Barracks, 29th Medical Detachment from Pattonville, 18th Medical Detachment in Schwaebisch Hall, 9th Medical Detachment from Heilbronn — along with troops from the 732nd — participated. Lt. Col. Raflo's 167th Medical Detachment set up the camp grounds at "Upper Echo" in the Heilbronn training area. Training was conducted in skills peculiar to the medical specialties, to include instruction in loading of an M1010 ambulance, a veterinary seminar, patient carry, field bandaging in a triage organization, battlefield medical doctrine, suturing techniques, first aid and shock identification, and preventive medicine.

Swallows slow construction at RB

Discovery prompts plan to build man-made nests

by Lionel R. Green
Stuttgart Citizen

Eighty-eight natural swallow nests found on Robinson Barracks prompted a plan by the U.S. Army and a German conservation group to build man-made nests for the tiny creatures' nest-breeding period in April. Remodeling of bachelors' quarters caused the natural nests to come down.

The Deutscher Bund fuer Vogelschutz (DBV), a German group for bird protection, expressed concern to Army officials about the 88 natural nests found on Robinson Barracks. Buildings 190, 189, and 194 had more than 25 nests under its eaves.

Ongoing construction during the latter part of the swallows' breeding season, stopped for three weeks to let the birds breed.

It was then decided to follow Pattonville's plan of five years ago.

In 1984, the Army was constructing exterior wall insulation in the housing area in Pattonville when they were contacted by the DBV and alerted about the possible harm to the swallows' nests. The DBV said that the Army could protect the swallows. They identified the swallows and found out where they bred. The Army then changed its construction schedule to allow the maximum breeding effect.

"The DBV built nests for the birds and donated them to us," said Michele Levine of the Environmental Management Office at Grenadier Kaserne. "When the birds finished breeding, the Army resumed constructing, and the nests were replaced so the birds would come back again."

The man-made nests in Pattonville have worked and are being used.

This year the DBV is again building nests to install in the Robinson Barracks' housing areas before the birds return in April.

"A lot depends on the weather," Levine said, "construction must be partially completed before April, so the nests can go up."

The Army's relationship with the DBV basically involves information exchange.

"We are always willing to exchange factual information with the DBV," said Levine, "because they are experts in the field of nature."

The tiny Mehlschwalben, a breed of swallow with a white marking on its chest, is not an endangered species, "but their population has diminished in urban areas in recent years," said Levine.

The swallow migrates from Africa every April, remains here about five months, and then returns in September.

"Perhaps the most remarkable thing about the swallows is that they leave and come back to the same place every year," Levine said.

The swallows have three breeding periods between April and September, and German law protects them during their prime breeding periods, Levine added.

"When the birds come back, they'll look for their old nests and find the man-made nests. Hopefully accept them," Levine explained. "Otherwise, they may leave and never come back."

Levine said that the swallows can be a small nuisance, but that's taken in consideration when the nests are installed.

"We do consider the people," she said. "The nests are placed so the bird droppings will drop away from windows."

"Some people think they're a nuisance because they sing a lot," but Levine feels that people need to be tolerant of the birds.

Commander's comment

Our goal for winter driving — zero accidents

As seasons change, so we change our lifestyles to fit them. But winter's change brings more than minor seasonal adjustments. It requires awareness as to how community, individually and as a whole, should prepare.

Winter driving presents the biggest hurdle to making winter an enjoyable season of holiday cheer and hot gluehwein. Many community members drive their cars long distances on country roads every day. Our children ride school buses, USO sponsors bus tours, and families pursue European travel opportunities.

Our goal must be zero accidents. Being aware of winter dangers helps achieve that goal. To facilitate safe travel during inclement winter weather, the Greater Stuttgart Military Community has a notification policy. Either the GSMC Safety Officer or the Staff Duty Officer determines road conditions based on information provided by the military police and German authorities. They inform the chain of command and AFN-Stuttgart radio. School principals and installation commanders decide to close or delay school openings, and they inform the radio station before 5:30 a.m.

Like traffic lights we see every day, road conditions are either red, green or amber. Green means go — conditions are good. Red means conditions are hazardous and amber means proceed with extreme caution.

Widely dispersed, GSMC members have a more difficult job than most in understanding procedures for inclement weather notification. Occupying space comparable to the state of Delaware, like GSMC does, causes its own difficulties. After all, how many people have to worry about whether it's snowing in Ludwigsburg when it's clear in Schwaebisch Hall? Or how many families have one 15-year-old going to school on time, say at Patch, while their 11-year-old stays home because Ludwigsburg is closed? Key to coping with the complexity is knowing the procedures.

Common sense helps, too. We automatically dress warmer and add blankets to the bed. But are we ready if the heat or electricity go off? Are first-aid supplies on hand, flashlights, portable radio and extra batteries? Preparing for potential emergencies eliminates apprehension about the impending winter.

Most important, be sensible and be safe. Have your car and home ready, and enjoy the changes the winter season brings. While different sports occupy our time and the holidays make for joyous celebrations, do the small things now to avoid the sorrow accidents cause. We strive for a community of excellence, but the foundation of that is people. So be prepared and be safe. We don't want to lose you.

Take care of soldiers.

Air Force bars, Marine stars clash in epic struggle over Oreo cookies

by 2nd Lt. Mitchell Clapp
Randolph AFB, Texas

Every second lieutenant acquires embarrassing memories when he or she wears gold bars; it seems to come with the job.

The first time the Air Force sent me on temporary duty by myself, I experienced probably the most embarrassing moment of my life, which I relate here in hopes that other butter bars out there won't make the same mistake.

I was traveling from Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio, to Vandenberg AFB, Calif., in the spring of 1985, and the flight scheduled me for a two-hour layover in the St. Louis airport.

I decided to hit the snack bar and bought a cup of coffee, a package of Oreos, and a newspaper. After giving the cashier the nine bucks or so these items cost, I scanned the crowded sitting area for a place to relax.

The lounge was crowded, but there appeared to be a spot across from a fellow in a military uniform of some sort.

"Great!" I thought, "another soldier. Maybe he can tell me about life in the forces."

My coffee was placed on the right side of the table, my newspaper on the left and my Oreos in the center before I took my first close look at the man opposite me.

He was a Marine Corps brigadier general — a mean-looking man with no hair, an honest-to-God scar on his forehead, and about six rows of ribbons, including the Silver Star with a cluster.

To me, the general had horns, fangs, a pitchfork, and a long, pointed tail as well. I was already committed to using the table, but not wanting to bother the general, I meekly squeaked out, "Good morning, sir," before sitting down.

I had begun the paper's crossword puzzle and was making good progress when I heard a peculiar rustling sound, much like the crinkling of cellophane. I looked up out of the corner of my eye to discover the general had reached across the center of the table, opened the package of Oreos, taken one out, and was eating it.

Now, not having attended the Air Force Academy, I was not familiar with how to deal with the fine points of military etiquette, such as what to do when a senior member of another service calmly rips off one of your cookies. Several responses came to mind, but none of these seemed entirely appropriate.

I realized that the honor of the Air Force was, in a small way, at stake here. I certainly couldn't let the general think I was a complete weenie. Besides, at airport prices, one Oreo is a significant fraction of take home pay for a second lieutenant.

The only response I could make was to reach across the center of the table, open the opposite end of the package (trying not to notice that the other end had mysteriously come open somehow), extract an Oreo, and eat it very, very thoroughly. "There," I thought, "I've subtly shown the general that these are my Oreos, and he should go buy his own."

Marines are known for many qualities, but subtlety is not among them. The general calmly reached out for another Oreo and ate it. (By the way, the general was licking the middles out first before eating the cookies.)

Not having said anything the first time, of course, I couldn't bring it up now. The only thing to do was to take another cookie for myself. We wound up alternating through the entire package. For an instant our eyes met, and there was palpable tension in the air, but neither of us said a word.

After I had finished the last Oreo, they announced something over the PS system. The general got up, put his papers back into his briefcase, picked up the now-empty wrapper, threw it away, brushed the few crumbs neatly off the table and left.

I sat marveling at his gall and feeling very foolish. A few minutes later, they announced my flight.

I felt a great deal more foolish when I finished my coffee, threw the cup away and lifted my newspaper to reveal... my Oreos!

Today, two of us are running around the Armed Forces telling the same story, but only one of us has the punch line.

And general, if you are reading this, get in touch with me and I will be glad to send you a case of Oreos.

Trial Defense Service provides legal help

by U.S. Army Trial Defense Service, Europe

This is the first in a series of 21 articles about various legal matters of interest to soldiers written by a team of lawyers from the U.S. Army Trial Defense Service. These articles will deal with Article 15s, courts-martial, administrative eliminations, administrative reductions and other items.

TDS is an organization of Army lawyers whose mission is to provide defense counsel services to soldiers. The TDS lawyer's primary job is to represent soldier-clients as zealously as possible within the bounds of the law.

Every TDS lawyer is an Army officer, and a fully qualified practicing attorney, admitted to practice law before the highest court of a state or territory of the United States. This lawyer is also certified by the Judge Advocate General of the Army as qualified to practice military law and has received specialized, formal schooling and continuous training in military law.

TDS lawyers have no other job but to assist or represent soldiers; TDS lawyers, therefore, are military law specialists. Think of them as public defenders for soldiers. TDS attorneys serve soldiers free of charge.

As members of the military, we are often confronted with the Article 15 process, either as supervisors, friends, or personally. Most soldiers know that Article 15s exist, but few really know much about them. This article explains what an Article 15 is and how it is different from a court-martial.

In the military we have one standardized law of military justice. It is followed by all the branches of the Armed Forces. This law is called The Uniform Code of Military Justice (UCMJ). Any violations of the UCMJ, even minor ones, are criminal violations. The term Article 15 comes from a section (Article) of the UCMJ.

An example of this is if you were five minutes late for work this morning without justifiable excuse, you violated the UCMJ. You have committed a criminal act. And since you committed a criminal act, you could be court-martialed for that offense. As you will read in a later article, a court-martial conviction results in a federal conviction. Courts-martial are time consuming and costly. Therefore, it is not always in the interest of the soldier or the Army to court-martial soldiers who violate the UCMJ. But since good order and discipline are so important to an effective defense of our country, criminal acts cannot be ignored. That is where the Article 15 comes into play.

If your commander believes that you should be punished for being late to work, he or she could initiate an Article 15. An Article 15, unlike a court-martial conviction, does not result in a criminal record or a federal conviction. In fact, an Article 15 will not even show up as a civilian arrest or conviction record. Article 15s are meant to correct soldiers who have committed minor offenses so that they can learn from the mistake; they are not meant to affect the rest of the soldier's career and civilian life.

Since an Article 15 is not a court conviction, it is called "non-judicial" punishment. "Judicial" means that it is given to you by a court of law, and since an Article 15 is not given by a court, it is considered "non-judicial." Just like the judicial system, the non-judicial system has rules and regulations governing it. A person accused of a crime at an Article-15 hearing has many of the same tough decisions to make as an accused at a court-martial. TDS can help a soldier make those decisions.

An Article 15 is a serious event in any soldier's life. Because of that, commanders do not take the decision to offer an Article 15 lightly. In the next article, we will see how a commander initiates an Article 15 and what other options the commander has.

This article has been very general and may not answer all your questions. If you have a legal question, get your advice only from a lawyer. If your question is about military justice or an administrative elimination, call your local Trial Defense Service office at 420-6446/6447.

Commander's first visit

Lt. Col. Paul Nagengast, (left) Boeblingen-Sindelfingen Military Subcommunity Commander, briefs VII Corps Commander Lt. Gen. Frederick M. Franks, Jr. and GSMC Commander Maj. Gen. James B. Allen, Jr. Lt. Gen. Franks received briefings and toured several Greater Stuttgart Military Community subcommunities during his first stop in a 13-community visit schedule.

"I want to be a good citizen of GSMC," said the newly-instated commander. "And I'm willing to help you go from being the runner-up, to being a winner, in the Army Community of Excellence competition," he told staff members at his Oct. 10 in-briefing here.

Franks' visit began with an overview of the complexity of a community which includes six subcommunities, 44 installations, 3,800 sets of quarters, eight schools and more than 32,000 people.

Following the briefing, Franks received a tour of some GSMC activities including those at Robinson Barracks, Pattonville, Panzer, Nellingen and Kelley.

Holiday trick: treating kids to safe Halloween

by Roff Hetterich
GSMC Safety Manager

Halloween will be observed in all Greater Stuttgart Military subcommunities on Oct. 31 from 6-8 p.m.

It is a night for children. Unfortunately, there are some dangers peculiar to this holiday of tricks and treats. As this Halloween approaches, parents should be aware of the hazards and take precautions to protect trick-or-treaters.

Costumes should be made of fire-resistant or flame-retardant materials. Make sure your children don't wear costumes that will cause them to trip. The costumes should clear the ground by six inches. If the costume involves a prop like a sword or magic wand make sure it is not sharp or heavy enough to hurt anyone. Toy guns should not look too real. Plastic or cardboard props are safer than metal or wood.

Also, make-up is better than a mask for vision and breathing. If a mask is worn, it should fit well and have openings for the eyes and room to breathe. It's a good idea to have a dress rehearsal to make sure kids can move and see well in their costumes.

It will be dark when many trick-or-treaters are still running from house to house. In their excitement, they may not be looking for cars, so drivers should be especially careful Halloween night. Put reflective tape on children's costumes to make sure drivers can see them if the costumes aren't bright enough and give children a flashlight to carry around.

When making jack-o-lanterns, be careful with knives when carving out the face. It is also safer to use a flashlight or some other type of battery-powered light in a pumpkin than to use a candle.

Tell children not to eat treats until they can be inspected. Throw away unwrapped candy and wash and slice fruit into little pieces. Report any tamperings immediately to the military or local police so others can be warned.

It's a good idea to set a curfew for your children on Halloween night.

More and more parents accompany their children and take along a neighbor's kid during trick-or-treat time. It's not being overly protective — it's a prudent way to insure a safe and fun time. Also, the presence of adults walking up and down the block tends to reduce pranks.

Go out and have a fun Halloween night, but keep safety in your bag of tricks and treats.

Christmas gifts

Even though Christmas is still a few months away, the Christmas mailing season has already begun. But besides considering what your friends and relatives may want, the value of a gift sent to the States determines how much import duty recipients must pay Uncle Sam before they can enjoy their parents.

Foreign-made goods entering the USA, including things bought in the post or base exchange, are subject to import duties. Rates of duty differ according to the item. You mail $50 worth of foreign-made items to any one person in the USA per day duty-free. If they receive more than this, they are subject to duty on the entire amount. Wrap and label each gift separately before putting them in the box. State on the customs declaration that the gifts are going to different people and the value of each individual gift. Call your local 42nd MP Group customs office to find out more.

Credit Act

"If you receive an erroneous bill from a creditor, the Fair Credit Billing Act protects you. Under the FCBA, you must notify the creditor of an error in writing within 60 days of the creditor's sending of the bill to you. The notice must be sent to the creditor's billing address, identify the consumer and account number, and explain the error. In explaining the error, you must include the amount involved and the reasons for believing an error has occurred.

The creditor must resolve the error within 30 days of receipt of the complaint or send the consumer written acknowledgment of the complaint. For more information, see the legal assistance office.

Stuttgart boxing coach Anthony Davis gives George Ferguson some tips in between rounds of the welterweight's battle.

The science of SWAT

Stuttgart fighters take it on the chin

by Steve Snyder
Stuttgart Citizen

"Tell'em what I did to Philadelphia Jack O'Brien but don't tell'em what he done to me."

Broadway refrain, circa 1900

Similar sentiments prevailed among Stuttgart fight fans recently when nine of 11 boxers from GSMC took it on the chin in the Boxing Invitational Tournament at Augsburg. Over 500 raucous fans filed into the gym at Sheridan Kaserne on Oct. 14 to watch the leather fly between novices. Spectators weren't disappointed as the 20-bout card ran from 7 p.m. until shortly before midnight and featured both science and SWAT within the squared ropes.

Stuttgart's fighters, 10 of whom came from Patch Barracks, didn't fare as poorly as their win and loss tally indicates. Anthony Brown and Russell Sheppard, both from 554th Military Police Co., scored stunning knockout victories. And of the remaining nine defeats, three came via split decisions which indicated how close the matches were.

"Overall, our team did an outstanding job considering our inexperience and lack of training time," said coach Anthony Davis, 52nd Signal Bn., himself the victim of a razor-thin split decision.

The evening's fisticuffs began inauspiciously for Stuttgart's warriors when Valentino Corebett, 554th Military Police Co., dropped a unanimous decision to Ernest Padilla, Fulda, in the 147-pound class. Corebett got nailed early by an overhand right and took a standing eight count in the first round. The Fort Benning, Ga. native moved well but didn't jab enough to effectively hold back his shorter opponent.

The next fight saw George Ferguson, 587th Signal Co., outpointed in a unanimous decision by Augsburg's Michael Jones in another welterweight tussle. Jones knocked Ferguson on the seat of his pants in the first eight seconds of the fight. Ferguson fought back gamely but was forced to take a standing eight count at the end of the first round. The favorite son of Vineland, N.J., came roaring back in the second, though, throwing roundhouse lefts and rights to take the round. In the third, Ferguson jabbed well, landed some good shots, but then was staggered. That cost him the fight.

Anthony Brown didn't take any chances. The rangy 156-pounder from the 554th Military Police Co., dropped his shorter foe, Karlsruhe's Stephen Downey, twice in the first round with stinging combinations. The second round was more of the same with Downey taking a standing eight count before being blasted to the canvas again with a crushing right uppercut. The referee, mercifully, stopped the fight.

"When he fell the first time, I knew I had him in trouble," Brown said, in what must rank as the understatement of the night. It was the first fight for the Baltimore Bomber. Brown displayed a style reminiscent of former heavyweight champion Larry Holmes. A cool counterpuncher who can take your head off.

It was uncertain, for a while, who would take whose head off in the middleweight slugfest between Stanley Brady, 554th Military Police Co., and Charles Goins, Fulda. Goins weathered many toe-to-toe confrontations, though, and walked away with a split decision nod. He proved stronger in the clinches than Brady, who hails from Toubaloo, Miss.

Bout number 10 saw Sidney Young from Vilseck overwhelm Nicholas Fuchs, 554th Military Police Co., knocking him out quickly in the first round. The fight, such as it was, was action-packed. Both men weighed in at 139 pounds.

Poundage was a problem for Richard Harris, Headquarters Co., 6th ASG, Robinson Barracks. The muscular 156-pounder spotted Augsburg's Franklin Johnson 11 pounds but still chased the bigger man around the ring in a futile effort to land a haymaker. Harris took a beating the first round but kept his cool admirably behind a peek-a-boo defense. He tore after Johnson in the second but was stunned and took a standing eight count in the final round which cost him victory in a split decision.

"I couldn't unleash on him," Harris admitted. "His jab frustrated me and his speed and evasiveness surprised me." The native of Newport News, Va., intends to "work on throwing more combinations" in future fights.

Patrick McKeever, 554th Military Police Co., never had the chance to throw many combinations or, for that matter, to untrack against Patrick Morris, Schweinfurt, in their 165-pound struggle which ended with McKeever retiring after one round. McKeever was badly outgunned against the obviously more experienced Morris.

Sidney Perry, 587th Signal Co., went the distance against Tracy Lonon from Schweinfurt but didn't come close to copping the decision in yet another 165-pound match. It went unanimously against the resident of Oxon Hill, Md.

Miami mauler Sean Fallon, 52nd Signal Bn., fared similarly in his fight against 165 pound Carl Thomas from Schweinfurt. Thomas captured a unanimous decision.

There was no decision necessary in the next fight. After flailing wildly away for a round-and-a-half and hitting mainly thin air, 178-pound Russell Sheppard, 554th Military Police Co., landed a right hook on the jaw of Wildflecken's Ronald Jones. Jones hit the deck like a lump of wet cement. Legs twitching, he didn't regain consciousness for five minutes.

Sheppard said later that his strategy was simply to get inside and land some blows. The native of Bainbridge, Ga., landed one and that was enough.

The final match of the evening showcased finesse to the exclusion of raw power. In what was perhaps the closest contest of the night, Bradley Martinez, Nuernberg, outpointed Anthony Davis, 52nd Signal Bn, in a 112-pound contest. It was Davis' 221st fight and his experience showed as he peppered Martinez with a bewildering array of lightning combinations to take the first round. But Martinez's speed — and youth — paid dividends in the third when he launched a savage barrage that forced the ref to give Davis a standing eight count. Both men put on a display that delighted boxing purists and reminded one of the Sugar Rays — Leonard and Robinson.

Sgt. Dianne Adams, Headquarters Co., 6th ASG, was one fan who appreciated the spectacle. A member of the small contingent who came down from Stuttgart to see the fights, Adams considered the bouts to be "very exciting," especially Sheppard's one-punch K.O.

Referee Herbert Ruffin, from the same company, agreed. "Stuttgart has gotten off to its best start in boxing in three years," he said. A veteran of ring wars, Ruffin attributes the team's polish to "the quality of the coaching."

He wouldn't get any argument from Stuttgart's coach on that point. Davis wants to get special duty status for his boxers so that training time can be increased. As it stands now, they train for two hours daily after work. It's not sufficient for success in the sweet science, he says.

Bruised but unbowed, the team looks forward to another invitational tournament scheduled to take place Nov. 11 at Panzer Kaserne.

Nuernberg nips Panthers in last minute sprint

Nuernberg's High School's Cedric Conway sprinted 61 yards in a driving rainstorm with 2:20 left to give the Eagles a hard-fought 22-20 victory over the Patch Panthers Saturday.

The hometown Panthers led 20-8 early in the final period but couldn't hold on against the heavily-favored Eagles, who are undefeated in AA Conference play.

Nuernberg jumped out to a quick 2-0 lead in the game. A high snap on a punt attempt on the fourth play of the game sailed into the Patch end zone, where punter Mike Barry fell on it for a safety. Patch retaliated late in the quarter, driving 60 yards for a go-ahead score. Quarterback Jimmy McCollum hit Pat Norman with a nifty 18-yard pass completion to set up the touchdown, which came on a 19-yard pass from backup QB Mike Heaton to Norman. Barry's point after kick was good, putting the Panthers on top 7-2.

Patch scored again in the first half, following a Brian Peck recovery of a Nuernberg fumble at the Eagles' 28-yard line. Two plays later, McCollum found wide receiver Letroy Dixon in the end zone for a 22-yard touchdown strike. Dixon kept alive his string of touchdown grabs in five consecutive games with this catch.

Barry's kick was no good, leaving Patch on top 13-2.

Nuernberg's offense finally got untracked late in the opening half as the Eagles drove 59 yards for their first touchdown. Quarterback Ivan Trosper tossed a nine-yard pass to Conway for the score. Conway made a spectacular catch for 22 yards on a fourth down play to keep Nuernberg's scoring drive alive. The extra point attempt was no good.

Neither team threatened to score in the third quarter until Patch's Chris Thompson blocked a Trosper punt giving the Panthers the ball on Nuernberg's 43-yard line. Led by the running of Norman and Stefan Holt, Patch marched to the goal line, where McCollum sneaked in for the score. Barry's point after kick was good, putting the Panthers seemingly in control in the fourth quarter leading 20-8.

However, the undefeated Eagles were not to be denied. Running back Steve Bullett barreled in from 7 yards out for a touchdown and then ran for the two-point conversion. This brought Nuernberg to within range of Patch, trailing 20-16 with 7:37 left to play in the game.

Patch drove into Eagle territory trying to ice the win, but was forced to punt following two penalties.

With rain pouring down, Barry got off a tremendous 51-yard kick under pressure, pinning the Eagles at their own 20 with less than three minutes to play. Run by Bullett and Conway moved the ball out to the 38. Conway took a pitchout from Trosper and dashed 61 yards down the right sideline for a TD, dashing the Panthers' dreams of an upset as well. The PAT was no good, leaving the Eagles on top 22-20.

The Panthers were unable to get farther than the Eagle 42-yard line in the waning moments as Nuernberg held on to win its toughest game of the year. The loss was a bitter one for the Panthers, who for the second straight week led a heavily-favored opponent late in the game only to lose.

Coach Jim McCollum expressed pride in his team's effort, however, pointing out that lack of depth and injuries had hampered the Panthers all year. "These kids never quit," McCollum said, "They showed a lot of heart."

The Panthers' season record dropped to 1-4, 1-2 in AA Conference play, with two conference games remaining.
