news briefs

Council meeting

The quarterly meeting of the BCZMSC Commissary/Exchange Advisory Councils will be held Wednesday in the AAFES Conference room, bldg. 132, Robinson Barracks at 9 a.m. (Commissary) and at 10 a.m. (Exchange).

Representatives from units and organizations are urged to attend. For more information, call 420-6095/7392 or 819-6095/7392.

German postal rates

Effective immediately, Standard First Class letters within the Federal Republic of West Germany and to a number of other countries will cost DM 1. Air-mail letters will have to be weighed at the German Post Office.

Mailing of postcards cost DM 0.60.

Postal Money Orders up to DM 10 are charged DM 0.90, and DM 2 for money orders up to DM 10,000; each additional DM 1,000 costs another DM 0.60.

Parcels weighing up to 500 grams cost DM 2.40; 1,000 grams DM 3.00 and up to 2,000 grams DM 3.50.

For further information, contact your local German Post Office.

1989 summer hire

Family Member Employment Assistance Program (FMEAP), in coordination with the CPO and AAFES, will be offering application assistance to youths 14 to 21 years of age, for the 1989 GSMC summer hire program.

Announcements and applications are available at every FMEAP located in your subcommunity ACS. Parents may also pick up applications for students attending school in the States. All Appropriated Funds applications must be turned in by April 28.

Call 420-7404/6693 for further information.

Gussy Goose closed

The Gussy Goose, located at Grenadier Kaserne, will be closed for inventory April 27 through May 5. For more information, call 420-6222.

LK ACS display

The Ludwigsburg-Kornwestheim Army Community Service is sponsoring a display of consumer and financial books, pamphlets, and handouts during National Consumer Week.

The display will be located in the ACS lounge, bldg. 942, in the Pattonville housing area until April 28.

Contact the LK ACS at 4282-681/496 for more details.

PCS soldiers detour Rhein-Main 21st Replacement opens Stuttgart facility

by Lionel R. Green
Stuttgart Citizen staff

Soldiers and family members who have experienced the eight-to-12 hour long plane rides to Germany followed by the six-to-eight hour bus trips to their units of assignment know it's not a pleasant experience. Beginning May 1, those assigned to southern or south-central Germany will still have to endure the eight-to-12 hour long plane rides, but the longest bus trip a soldier or family member will have to take is just two hours.

A new Aerial Port of Debarkation/Embarkation (APOD/E) will open at Stuttgart's international airport May 1. With the opening of the port along with the opening of Nuernberg's APOD/E, there will come a reduction in the travel and in-processing hassles of soldiers and families assigned to southern and south-central Germany.

The opening of these new arrival ports will cut down on the traffic of one of the largest and busiest airports in the world, Rhein-Main at Frankfurt.

"The main purpose of these ports is to provide better service to soldiers who get assigned to southern or south-central Germany," said Lt. Col. Daniel J. Sullivan, commander of the 21st Replacement ment Battalion at Rhein-Main. "It will also limit time on the road by reducing the travel time for bus rides. Now, the longest one is two hours as opposed to seven hours."

The ports will also be used as departure points for soldiers leaving Germany.

"When soldiers depart, they will not have to go all the way to Frankfurt," said Sullivan.

Soldiers arriving at Stuttgart APOD/E will be in-processed at the 21st Replacement Regulating Detachment at Nellingen Barracks, bldg. 3620, Monday-Friday. This is a short-term processing center where soldiers and family members are bused to Nellingen from the airport, processed as quickly as possible, and bused to their final destination.

The Nellingen facility will have a separate baggage holding area, nursery, and a lounge equipped with a television, VCR, and microwave oven.

Units within Stuttgart and other units within a large radius of Stuttgart will also be affected by this new operation. Personnel officials anticipate 1,000 new soldiers and family members will arrive at the new port monthly, with a slightly higher number departing each month.

Stuttgart's new arrival port will serve six military communities. They are:

Heilbronn, Stuttgart, Schwaebisch Gmuend, Schwaebisch Hall, Goepplingen, and Neu Ulm.

Currently, all soldiers fly into Rhein-Main where they are processed by the 21st Replacement Battalion. Soldiers with pinpoint assignments to specific locations are quickly put on buses, with family members, and transported to their new units. Some of their units may be six to eight hours away.

With the new ports, soldiers with pinpoint orders to southern or south-central Germany will be quickly processed at Stuttgart or Nuernberg before going by bus to their new assignments. Also, soldiers with permanent change of station orders to leave Germany will be processed through these new ports.

"This channel has been tried before and didn't work because not enough soldiers knew it was available and it wasn't used," said Sullivan. "Soldiers need to know that this channel exists and when the time for port calls comes, they need to request Stuttgart."

The new arrival ports will continue to use the "S-bus" sponsorship system recently established in Europe. Under the program, the Army hires civilian buses to transport soldiers from the airport to a welcome center near their new unit.

The Wailing Wall

The Western Wall, or Wailing Wall, is located within the Old City of Jerusalem. The 58-foot wall of massive limestone blocks was constructed during the rebuilding of Solomon's Temple by Herod the Great in about 30 B.C. The Wall is the last remnant of the ancient Temple of Israel and is a pilgrimage site for Jews from throughout the world. A group of GSMC residents traveled to Israel last month under the auspices of the community chaplains and visited this historical site.

Fostering the spirit of volunteerism in GSMC

The difference between a satisfactory place to live and a community of excellence is often the efforts of local volunteers. During the last several weeks the subcommunities of the Greater Stuttgart Military Community have been showing their appreciation of these volunteers. At the community level we also recognize and value the contributions of all GSMC volunteers.

Now, more than ever, we need to develop our volunteer resources. If you read the newspaper, you are probably aware that military budget cuts are a fact of life today. Those of us involved in planning for this community's future know that we cannot honestly expect additional monetary resources during the next several years.

The entire military is being required to make do with less since there are fewer dollars and fewer people to meet our defense needs. Less financial support and fewer personnel don't always mean a lighter load.

In GSMC we often find that while our resources diminish, our missions and responsibilities increase. In the future we must be able to do more with less.

In addition to these mission requirements, we also want and deserve a high standard of quality for our day-to-day living. An excellent quality of life makes us more comfortable and contented. It also enhances readiness by fostering good morale and improving soldier and family member satisfaction.

The question is how can we develop excellent community services and facilities without spending more dollars. The answer involves combining several of our most precious resources: innovation, creativity and teamwork. In other words, the answer is people.

It is absolutely vital that members of this community commit themselves to a better and brighter future. By unifying our efforts and working together to improve our community, we can ensure that Stuttgart becomes an Army community of excellence. The spirit of volunteerism is the engine that drives us toward this goal.

That is why we are focusing so much attention on the community volunteers who dedicate their time and energies to making GSMC a better place to work, live and play. Every effort, whether great or small, makes a difference.

However, the spirit of volunteerism is much more than single individuals volunteering at one activity or another. This spirit is one of cooperation and teamwork. Through our collective efforts we can accomplish more than we could by operating individually.

This volunteerism is evident when a unit commits its soldiers and resources to an aggressive self-help project to improve their installation.

Another instance exemplifying this spirit is the commitment of the 128th Combat Support hospital, F&Kaserne. Each week on Thursday afternoons, soldiers from this unit voluntarily participate in the Exceptional Family Members programs after school bowling activities for challenged youngsters. Not only do the children benefit from this program which otherwise could not be offered, but the soldiers feel it is rewarding and edifying for them as well.

The spirit of volunteerism will move us toward our goal of a better community. On behalf of the entire community, I thank all of you who dedicate some of your free time to the community's quality of life program.

For those of you who have not yet volunteered, think about what it can do for you and your community. The next time you feel like complaining about some aspect of life within GSMC, suggest a way to solve the problem instead. Not only will you feel better, but the entire Stuttgart community will get better.

The future will be what we make it. Let's work together to ensure a community of excellence.

Take care of soldiers.

Jews celebrate Passover

by Ch (Cpt) Stanley H. Schwartz
GSMC Jewish Chaplain

Some events in a person's life are more important than others. The day on which each of us was born has always seemed very important to those who love us and to us, as well. The first day of school seems to be momentous for youngsters, as does the first successful bicycle ride. What is true of the incidental life of individuals can also be related to that of a group. For Jews and their theology, their relationship with God, Passover is one of those primary, significant events for all times.

Passover celebrates the beginning of the Hebrews' transformation from slaves into a prototype nation of Israelites in a wilderness, a people without a country. This transforming event, the Exodus, has become the basis of Jewish belief in salvation throughout the ages.

Biblical commandments also underscore this event's seminal importance. In the first of the Ten Commandments (Exodus 20:2 and Deuteronomy 5:6) the Israelites at Mount Sinai learned, "I am the Lord, your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt from the house of bondage."

In the Fourth Commandment (Deuteronomy 5:15), when Moses re-emphasized the observance of the Sabbath, the children of Israel heard, "You shall remember that you were a slave in the land of Egypt; and the Lord, your God, brought you out with a strong hand and an outstretched arm..." Moreover, in Deuteronomy 6:4-12, the great statement of God's unity, the sh'ma, also affirms the relationship of God to his people, Israel, through the miraculous redemption from slavery in Egypt.

These repetitions of the Jew's relationship to God through His redemption of their ancestors have instilled the conviction that the Exodus was the primal event in their history.

That's why, at sundown, Wednesday, April 19, 1989, Jews around the world will eat a celebratory, ritual meal, called the seder, and recall how their ancestors fled from Egypt, crossed the sea, escaped miraculously from their Egyptian pursuers and have kept the Passover for 3,000 years.

On Thursday, April 20, the Greater Stuttgart Military Community Jewish congregation and its invited guests will conduct its annual seder at the Robinson Barracks Community Club starting promptly at 6 p.m. on the eve of the second day of Pesach. Jewish personnel, military, civilian, and family members, who wish to attend, should contact Ch. Stanley H. Schwartz or the GSMC Chaplain's office immediately to reserve seats. An exact count is needed to prepare the kosher main course and ensure that tables are set up for the right number of participants. Please call and leave a message at either 431-2811 or 420-6461/7339, with the names of those who will attend, their ages (if children), where you work, your home address, and your duty and home telephone numbers. Any Jew is invited to join with the congregation and take part in the seder.

Jews are encouraged to celebrate the seder in their homes, perhaps together with a small group of friends, on the first night of Passover, in keeping with ancient traditions.

It would also be a greater good deed to invite single soldiers to join them in celebrating the first night's seder. Families needing or wanting kosher Passover supplies may purchase them at either the AAFES shoppette or the Robinson Barracks Commissary. On the second night of Pesach we hope that everyone will join together at the Robinson Barracks Community Club for the congregational seder.

Harassment statistics released

Sexual discrimination hurts mission effectiveness

By MSG Robert Redfield
 Equal Opportunity Advisor, GSMC

In October 1988, a survey on sexual harassment was conducted in VII Corps. Seventy-eight male and 57 female soldiers were surveyed from tenant units throughout GSMC. The results of those surveyed in GSMC revealed the following information:

Seventy-one percent had been assigned here more than six months, and 66 percent had received sexual harassment prevention training within the past year. Twenty-two percent said they had been a victim of sexual harassment during their tour while 28 percent said they thought sexual harassment was a serious problem in GSMC.

Of the people committing acts of sexual harassment, 10 percent were in grades E-5 — E-9, 7 percent were E-4 and below, and 3 percent were WO1 and above. The most common offense was deliberate or repeated offensive comments. These took place in 9 percent of the cases reported.

Overall, the GSMC statistics reflected a better climate than the VII Corps total. But statistics aside, let's look at some of the issues.

Does sexual harassment continue to happen in GSMC or in your unit? Does it happen both on and off post? Does it occur in units with few or no female soldiers assigned? Does sexual harassment interfere with the unit's effectiveness, cohesion, and mission accomplishment?

The answer to all of these questions is yes!

Sexual harassment happens in many ways. It can involve everything from inappropriate remarks to rape. You can be guilty and not even know it. Many times those long accepted offhand comments, jokes, or actions aren't funny. They're harassment!

The Army's position is very clear. Don't do it and report those who do. You are, literally, wrong if you do and wrong if you don't. If you do it — you're guilty. If you witness it and don't stop or report it — you're guilty.

Sexual harassment is not just bad jokes or physical contact. It's a blatant form of discrimination. It involves the abuse or unfair treatment of an individual or group of people because of their gender. The mission and effectiveness of your unit may be seriously affected because some soldiers are being denied opportunities for training, schools, or promotion based on their gender. Some people, male and female, given the chance to get over, will do just that.

Let's take an example. It's unfair treatment when a female soldier, school trained as a truck mechanic, gets to work only in the shop office and never on the line. Without the line and leadership experience, she will not have opportunities for advancement. If the soldier and the leadership allow this to continue, they are both wrong. She must be required to do what she was trained to do and she must insist on her right to do it.

All of our soldiers must feel a part of the unit and that their contribution is worth something. When soldiers are trained differently, when they are made to feel left out through things like exclusionary language, then ultimately the unit effectiveness decreases.

One final note. Sexual harassment and sexual discrimination are not just the actions of men directed toward women. Women do it to men, women do it to women, and men do it to men. Regardless of who's doing it, the end result and the responsibilities are the same.

Sexual harassment. It's unwelcome, unprofessional and won't be tolerated. The chain of command sets the climate, but building an environment free of sexual harassment is everyone's responsibility.

Safety belts reduce auto deaths

Over 80 percent of Army POV fatalities failed to buckle up

"In approximately 48 percent of all fatal USAREUR traffic accidents, the victim or victims were not wearing seat belts," according to Hans Dreizler, GMSA Safety Occupational Health specialist.

Dreizler and co-worker Vera Cochran, toured GSMC in a campaign to promote the wearing of seat belts. They were at the Robinson Barracks Main Exchange Tuesday, demonstrating the efficacy of seat belts by use of a simulator.

Over 30 people took part in Tuesday's simulation runs, which involved volunteers buckling up in a seat before coasting downward on a track at a speed of 11 kilometers and then abruptly crashing into a barrier. The simulations demonstrated that, even at speeds of only 5 mph, the impact of a crash is severe enough to warrant wearing a seat belt.

"It doesn't matter if you're going 11k or 180k, without a seatbelt you're still in danger," Dreizler noted.

Furthermore, "it is German and USAREUR law that seat belts be worn at all times when operating an automobile," Dreizler said. Additionally, German law mandates that children under 12 years of age must sit in the back seat with seat belts fastened at all times.

Every day six soldiers are killed or injured in traffic accidents. POV accidents are, in fact, the single largest cause of accidental death and injury during peacetime in the Army. During fiscal year 1987, for instance, 253 soldiers died and 1,510 were injured in off-duty POV accidents Army-wide.

Approximately 87 percent of the fatal Army POV accidents involved unsafe driver behavior such as driving too fast, driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs, and just plain reckless driving. Over 80 percent of soldiers killed in vehicles were not wearing safety belts. It's not surprising, then, that AR 385-55 requires every soldier to wear safety belts at all times while driving or riding in a motor vehicle on or off post.

Buckling up is the safe policy. And a smart one.

Tax filing

Income tax returns are due on April 17, 1989. However, U.S. citizens and residents who are outside the United States on April 17 are allowed an automatic two-month extension for the filing of federal tax returns. This extension, though, does not apply to any tax you owe.

If you do not pay any tax you owe the federal government by the April 17 deadline, you will pay interest and penalty on the unpaid tax.

The interest charged can be as high as 11 percent. Late filing, therefore, can be very costly.

Be sure to get your tax return in this week if you owe any tax.

Shipping alcohol in household good shipments or by mail is prohibited, so you will have to use a commercial shipper.

Children

Nurturing our most precious resource

Steve Snyder
Stuttgart Citizen Staff

The late President John F. Kennedy once said that "children are our greatest resource and our best hope for the future." It's Annette Williams' job to nurture that resource and, in her words, "care for the future of the Army."

Williams is GSMC's Child Developmental Service (CDS) Coordinator. Her organization, along with Youth Services, shoulders major responsibilities for insuring that the special needs of military children are met.

How those needs are being met is a question attracting attention in this Month of the Military Child.

The mission of the Child Developmental Service is to "reduce the conflict between parental responsibility and unit mission requirements," Williams said. To accomplish this task, CDS employs 170 people. Some work part-time, serving as para-professionals. Others are full-time employees with professional credentials.

They "serve about 1,300 children a day," according to Williams, but there are "over 1,000 people on the waiting list" for child care in GSMC.

"We're looking at soldiers (increasingly) getting married at a younger age and we're seeing more single parents (primarily caused by divorces)," she said. Williams notes that "as emphasis for supporting the family has increased in the Army, the demand for child care has also risen."

To meet the demand, there are six Child Developmental Centers and one pre-school in GSMC. Every subcommunity has one with the exception of Ludwigsburg — where two are located. New Child Developmental Centers should be operative in Patch and Panzer by the end of 1990. A new center in Pattonville is slated to open in early fall. A much larger facility will be constructed there within the next few years (1992 or 1993).

Business, then, is booming. The CDCs offer a potpourri of services — including full, part-time, and hourly care — to satisfy their market. Several different forms of child care are enveloped under the CDS umbrella. Child Developmental Centers (CDC), the Family Child Care (FCC) program, and the Supplemental Programs and Services (SPS) division form the triad for child care in GSMC.

The FCC is a program offering home-based child care within Army family housing and government-leased housing. CDS employees train, monitor, inspect, and certify the providers, who deliver child care in quarters. This program has been active for only three or four years, Williams said. FCC benefits those who need child care by providing longer and more flexible hours and a home-like atmosphere where no more than six children are watched over at one time.

Williams notes that there is a FCC resource center in every Child Developmental Center for parents who choose to exercise the option of having their children watched "for extended periods of time in different homes."

Supplemental Programs and Services is the newest component in the child care program here. It encompasses a variety of programs, including CDS support for parent co-ops. While parents get together to take care of the kids, "we provide training, guidance, and observation," Williams said. She emphasizes that SPS tries to "avoid situations where one parent is watching 75 kids."

SPS provided parents with child care, composed of volunteers and staff members, during the recent NEO exercise at Pattonville. The division is heavily into recruiting volunteers to assist parents in watching children for such one-shot occasions. SPS is also tasked with referring parents to economy-based child care and providing information about the quality of German care available.

While GSMC's Child Developmental Service is responsible for serving children from six weeks to 12 years of age, Youth Services caters to the needs of children from 6 to 19 years of age, and they can prove to be a demanding clientele.

While 42 percent of teenagers hold Youth Services membership cards USAREUR-wide, that figure reaches 55 percent in GSMC, according to figures provided by the Staff Director of GSMC's Youth Services, Robert Manaugh. Over 3,000 out of an eligible 5,700 youngsters in GSMC take advantage of Youth Services here. Those numbers include over 800 participants in soccer alone and over 600 in basketball. In total, over 1,000 youths take part in team sports sponsored by GSMC's Youth Services.

"The big push in Youth Services used to be primarily in sports and daytime recreation. Today, we're still emphasizing sports, but in addition we're pushing developmental programs," Manaugh said.

Developmental programs include instructional classes, teen forums, job training and employment, high adventure trips (such as rafting), special events such as talent or art shows and mini-carnivals, community service projects, and entrepreneurial projects.

Still, there is some discontent among the younger set.

"There are a lot of six, seven and eight-year-olds in the center as compared to the past," Manaugh said. "Teens don't like to be around little kids," he added. To rectify that situation, Youth Services has opened a new teen center at Patch and plans to open new facilities at Robinson Barracks and Ludwigsburg by July 1.

Growth, in the young and in the institutions which serve them, is a byword for progress in GSMC.

A bridge between nations: Linden-Museum, Stuttgart

Ethnology is not just a matter of masks and evil spirits, peculiar cultures, beautifully wrought arms, and richly decorated ceramics.

Above all, ethnology is a science that deals with man and his environment. Every culture experiences and manages its environment each in its own way, which is highly different from the other.

The Linden-Museum, National Museum of Ethnology, successfully brings all this diversity to Stuttgart.

"Our visitors are not confronted with a 'fuddy-duddy' museum of ethnology loaded with bone-dry information," explained Dr. Gundolf Krueger, Public Relations consultant. "They are introduced to authentic collections and presentations."

"To make our guests aware of strange cultures as vivid as possible, we created so-called areas of experience: an Afghan bazaar, wooden huts, wigwams, scenes from the Eskimos' country, an exotic woman's house develop visible dimensions, and we invite them to walk through very closely," he continued.

The Linden-Museum was founded in 1844 by the Württemberg Society for Commercial Geography with the intention of introducing people to cultures outside Europe, and of boosting the strained and troubled Württemberg economy by creating a market for exporters.

Graf (Count) von Linden, chairman of the Society in 1889, charged the museum with the new task of collecting as many as possible existing examples of objects from foreign cultures.

The collection grew quickly. As most of those people born in Württemberg and traveling abroad for collections lived in what were former colonies, most artifacts came from these parts, but also from many other regions, notably South Africa, Southeast Asia, America, and Australia.

The museum was opened in 1911 shortly after the Graf's death and was called the Linden-Museum after his founder.

The building was heavily bombed in 1944 and hastily rebuilt between 1945 and 1949.

Finally, on July 12, 1985, after seven years of rebuilding, the Linden-Museum displayed its treasures again.

The exhibition area is now spread over 4,000 square meters with 'hanging' floors, stairways, and alleys comprising some 125,000 objects. The visitor can travel from one culture to another, scene after scene.

The American exhibition ranges from the 'native American' civilization in North America during the 19th century to the highly developed civilizations in ancient Peru.

The cultural variety of the islands of the Pacific are mainly represented by artifacts exemplifying the famous Malanggan Art of New Ireland, and masks from New Britain together with cultures from the Sepik region.

The display of country farming and town cultures in Africa beginning with the Sahel region, is followed by examples of rain-forest cultures, the grasslands of the Cameroons, and artistic work from the Congo region.

The Orient exhibition concentrates on the overriding aspects of Islam's civilization and history.

The focal point of the South Asian display is the artistic work of India and the way it has spread over the neighboring regions of South and Southeast Asia, as well as to Nepal and Tibet.

The Far Eastern displays deal with Tibetan Buddhism. Part of the Chinese civilization is represented by ceremonial bronzes, ceramic burial figures, and paintings from the 17th through 20th century.

Japan is represented by painted scrolls, a reproduction of a tea-house, and Japanese powder lacquer-work.

"Apart from the six permanent displays, the Linden-Museum also holds temporary or special exhibitions," Krueger said.

"We offer special programs and guided tours for children, and a 'Jour fixe.' This means we have lectures in art, literature, religion, and music every first Thursday of the month in the African section."

"And everybody is invited to our original Japanese tea-ceremony on April 27, at 7:30 p.m., where tea and all kinds of cakes and pastries will be served," Krueger concluded.

The Linden-Museum is open Tuesday through Sunday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., on Thursdays from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., and is closed on Mondays; there is no entrance fee required.

Transportation to the museum is available by buses 40, 42, 43 from the Hauptbahnhof.

For guided tours call 0711-123-1276.

Patch, Stuttgart kick off soccer season

Lady Panther Meg Crandall maneuvers the ball downfield.

The Patch Panthers kicked off their soccer season April 8. The Panthers swept the Munich Mustangs at Patch's Husky Field.

Patch 2, Munich 1

Matt Frist's goal midway through the second period broke a 1-1 tie and lifted the Panthers over the Mustangs in Boys Varsity action.

The score didn't reflect Patch's domination throughout the game, though. The Panthers had a total of 32 shots on goal to only six for Munich. The Mustangs didn't have a shot on goal in the first period.

Peter Geiger put Patch up 1-0 with the only goal in the first period. Munich scored early in the second period to tie the score before Frist came through with the game-winner. Jimmy Allen had the assist on Frist's goal.

Derek Padden and John Sims each had eight shots on goal, and goalie Jeff Guild had three saves.

Patch 4, Munich 0

The Lady Panthers scored two goals in the first period and two in the second to open up their season with a shutout in Girls Varsity action.

Meg Crandall delivered a long direct shot from near the middle of the field that slid through the gloves of the Mustangs goalie and went in to give Patch a 1-0 lead they would never relinquish.

Tina Fang provided another goal similar to Crandall's, just a few feet shorter, to end the scoring in the first period with the Lady Panthers leading 2-0.

In the second period, Munich threatened four times to score, but Patch goalie Francis Mason turned all attempts back. Susan Healy and Addy Paternoster each connected on a goal in the second period to provide Patch some insurance they wouldn't need in cruising to the victory.

The Lady Panthers had 17 shots on goal, and Mason had eight saves.

The Stuttgart Stallions opened up their season April 8, also, in AAA Prep Soccer action. The Stallions left their homefield without a win against the Kaiserslautern Red Raiders.

Kaiserslautern 5, Stuttgart 2

The Stallions fell behind 3-0 at halftime and never recovered in the Boys Varsity game. Brian Van Vranken had a goal and an assist to lead Stuttgart. Tim Hayden also had one goal and Isaac Mendez had one assist.

Kaiserslautern 2, Stuttgart 1
The Lady Stallions were on the short end of the one-point game. Susan Kluck had Stuttgart's lone goal.
