Fort Leonard Wood celebrates Black History Month this year with virtual events

Fort Leonard Wood shared testimonials and videos on its social media accounts to celebrate and remember Black History Month. The observance, which is traditionally held as a luncheon at Pershing Community Center, was hosted virtually by the 14th Military Police Brigade to help mitigate the spread of COVID-19.

Army CID offers recommendations regarding ransomware attacks

Ransomware is a type of malicious software designed to deny a user access to a computer system or computer files until the ransom has been paid. The U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Command's Major Cybercrime Unit warned the Army community about an increase in ransomware attacks.

Flooding can happen at any time, anywhere

It may not be the rainiest months yet, but according to officials from the Maneuver Support Center of Excellence Safety Office and the Directorate of Emergency Services, it doesn't need to be any particular season for significant risk of flooding.

Army father gets brief meet up with his Air Force daughter in Afghanistan

For Maj. Jason Blanco, an Army Reserve Soldier deployed to Afghanistan, an in-person meeting he needed to attend at a different camp led to an opportunity most Soldiers don't get while deployed: a family reunion.

Need something to read? Here are six books on teamwork, leadership and building trust

If you're like me, then social distancing has provided time for other hobbies, like reading. Here are my top six recommendations for books on teamwork, leadership and building trust, in no particular order.
